THE RESIDENCE OF REV. WILLIAM GILLETT, THE RECTORY OF CHAFFCOMBE, SOMERSET

Chaffcombe, Somerset, is two miles northeast of Chard and it is surrounded by a haphazard network of tortuous, circuitous roads. Rev. William Gillett, father of the emigrants, Jonathan, Nathan & Jeremiah Gillett, was the rector here from 1609 to his death in 1641. In 1606, just before William came to Chaffcomb the rectory house was described as a mansion, barn and stable, with three little gardens. In 1835 it was described as unfit as a residence. It was a farmhouse until 1900. Called the Old Rectory, this house built of stone, with a thatched roof is in good repair.

THE "BEAR BIBLE", BROUGHT OVER ON THE "MARY & JOHN" BY JONATHAN GILLETT

Jonathan Gillett brought a bible with him in 1630, which still exists today. A few years ago it was in the possession of Rev. Lyman Potter, minister of the First Church of Simsbury, Conn.

Stiles, in his History of Ancient Windsor, Vol. 2, p. 289, says it passed from the Gillett family to the Holcomb family, probably when Jonathan Holcomb (b. 1673), son of Nathaniel Holcomb (1648-1740) & grandson of Thomas Holcomb, the emigrant, married Mary (Saxton) Gillett, widow of William^3 Gillett (1673-1718), son of Jonathan Gillett^2 Jr., who died by 1698.

It was called the "Bear Bible" because it was once, in the olden days, placed in a window to keep the sash raised, when a bear, endeavoring to affect an entrance, clawed it, leaving the marks of his claws so deep upon the edges of its leaves, that they are still very plainly to be seen.

This bible is also described in the book, Gillette Families, Some Of The Descendants of Jonathan & Nathan Gillett, by Bertha Bortle Beal Aldridge, 1955, p. 13, which is abstracted below:

This volume is of size commonly called, "quarto", about eight inches, seven and one half inches wide and two and one half inches thick. It is printed ? in Roman type, not in black leather.

Both title pages are missing, but internal evidence identifies it as having been printed in Amsterdam, Holland in 1599. This edition is one of the many editions (140 or more) of the very popular Genevan translation of the Bible, with marginal notes, the first of which was printed in Geneva, 1559. It was commonly called the Geneva edition.

It was the favorite edition of the English Bible among the Puritans in England. It was also notable because it had a profound effect upon the English of the King James translation in 1611 (the Authorized version).

This book is sadly torn and damaged. Many pages of the text are missing. The cover is a rough, home-made, leather binding. There are deep scratches in the front edges of the leaves, which according to family tradition, were made by a bear's claws as the Bible lay on a window-sill holding up a window sash.

In spite of all the damage, the precious book blank pages between the Old and New Testament are still intact. Their meager pen and ink entries establish the copy as having belonged to the early Gillett family.

The script of the Gillett entries is the very old style, which was in use in England before and after 1600. These entries are in the hand Jonathan^2 Gillet of the second generation (Jonathan Gillett Jr. , b.a. 1635 & d.a. 1697). His identity is proved by the reference to himself in the following item.

> "My father Gille came into new Inglon, the secon time in June in the yeare 1635, and Jonathan his sonn was born about half a yeare after he came to land."

NOTE: His landing in June 1635 agrees with his marriage to Mary Dolbiar, In Colyton, Devon, on 29 Mar. 1634. However, his name also appears on the passenger list of the "Recovery" of London, which left Weymouth, Dorset, 31 Mar. 1633. Also aboard this ship were many other people closely associated with the "Mary & John" group, including, Stephen Terry, Sarah Hill (William's wife?), Thomas Bascomb & Thomas Newberry.

PROVISIONS CARRIED BY THE "MARY & JOHN" IN 1630

By Burton W. Spear

For every 100 passengers in the Winthrop Fleet of 1630, certain provisions were carried on every ship. Assuming babies and small children were not counted, then only about 100 of the 140 "Mary & John" passengers would have been counted for provisions purposes. About 40 were 12 years of age or under. If the above assumptions are true, the "Mary & John" was loaded with the following provisions for the passengers only (excluding crew).

11.000 gallons of beer
1,500 gallons of water
1,2000 loaves of bread
22 hogsheads of beef
40 bushels of peas
20 bushels of oatmeal
1,400 salt cod
96 pounds of candles
1 and 1/2 bushels of mustard seed
20 gallons of oil
2 firkins (casks) of soap
2 rumlets (18 gal. cask) Spanish wine
4,000 salted pollack (fish)
10 firkins (casks) of butter
1,000 pounds of cheese
20 gallons of brandy
2 tierces (42 gals.) of beer and vinegar

The above provisions could have weighed in excess of 150,000 pounds. There were about 15 sailors for every 100 passengers, so they required similar provisions. Since they had to make the return crossing to England, each was counted twice. So, the above figures may be increased by 30%, which means the total provision load may have been about 200,000 pounds, or 100 tons.

In addition, for every 100 male passengers over the age of 16 there were certain quantities of weapons that had to be carried. It is estimated that there were about 50 males on the "Mary & John" over age 16, so the ship should have been required to carry the following:

4 cannons
1 ensign (flag)
5 full muskets
45 pounds of shot
1 bullet bag
5 horn flasks
2 extra drumheads
1 partizan (weapon)
40 bastard muskets
5 long fowling muskets
50 swords and belts
6 barrels of powder
1 fish net
2 halberds*
30 corselets (suits of armor)
20 pikes*
10 half pikes*
6 barrels of powder
8 pieces of ordnance bandoliers (carrying belts)

* Halberds were a long handled weapon; pikes were long pointed weapons and half pikes were short pointed weapons.

Besides the necessary provisions and weapons, there were several other items that needed to be stowed on board ship for use during the long trip across the Atlantic. They included:

supply of linen
shirts
mats gloves
shoes
brass ladles
Kersey suits stockings
red knit caps
plain shirts bolsters brass spoons bed ticks
Norwich garters leather girdles
pint pewter bottles
French copper kettles black hats woolen cloth
quart pewter bottles
peppering hops
large quantity unleavened bread
-suits with doublets and hose made of leather lined with oil skin
-falling bands (the wide, white collar usually associated with the Puritan)
-waist coats of green cotton bound with red tape
-blankets made of Welch cotton sheets

That's not all that was carefully tucked aboard the small, crowded vessel. In preparation for the crops the settlers hoped to plant they took seeds, hoping to harvest such things as wheat, barley, rye, oats, beans, peas, peaches, plums, filberts (European hazel nuts), cherries, pears, apples, quince, pomegranates (red berry), licorice, hops, hemp,, flax and currants. They also brought grape vines and apple seedlings. Other necessities included madder and woad, herb seeds to be used in the manufacture of red and blue dye. Finally, they took along such domestic animals as coneys (European rabbits), cattle, sheep and goats. The feed for these animals added more weight and took up valuable space.

⊛ Moses Austin^4, son of Elias^3 (Richard^2, Anthony^1) born 1761, died 1821, obtained a grant from the Spanish Governor to establish an Anglo-American colony in Texas. He died before moving to Texas, so his son, Stephen Fuller Austin, (1793-1836), carried on his father's venture and started the Texas colony. He was prominent in the development of Texas, its seperation from Mexico and the formation of the Republic of Texas. He was the first Secretary of State in 1836, but died shortly thereafter.(3)

ELIZABETH GILLET^5	(dau of Joseph^4, Benjamin^3, John^2, Jonathan^1)
- born	14 Oct	1743	Simsbury, Conn.(13)
- married	ca	1761	EZEKIEL HOLCOMB, Sr.
- died	ca	176-	Simsbury, Conn.

Elizabeth (Hayes) Gillet's will #1127, dated 1805, Granby, Connecticut, requested $1.00 be paid her grandson, Ezekiel Holcomb, Jr., at her death. This was the only grandchild mentioned in Elizabeth's will. One Holcomb record mentions Ezekiel Holcomb, Sr., according to one source, was married first to Elizabeth Gillet and the will of Elizabeth (Hayes) Gillet would verify this data.

Ezekiel Holcomb, Sr. and his wife were members of The First Congregational Church, Simsbury, Connecticut, in 1765. After Elizabeth (Gillet) Holcomb's death Ezekiel Sr. married (2) Jemima Griffin, widow of James Adlerman.

Ezekiel Holcomb, Sr. and Junior served in the Revolutionary War, pension file #W21358. In 1777, Ezekiel Jr. was a substitute for his father. He served in the Militia with Capt. Adonijah Burr's Co., Col. Chandler's Regt. at West Point, New York, and six months in the Light Infantry under Captain Henry Ten Eycks Co., Col. Smith's, Regt. Ezekiel Holcomb, Sr. was the son of David and Mehitable (Buttolph) Holcomb, and was born ca 1738, at Salmon Brook, Simsbury, Connecticut, and died in 1805, at Granby, Connecticut.

- Revolutionary War - 18th Regt. Connecticut Militia

Joseph Gillet was member #218 of The First Congregational Church, Simsbury, Connecticut in February 1785. He married (1) Mary Rowe, daughter of Abijah^{4} (Samuel^{3}, Peter^{2}, Hugh^{1}) and Deborah (Forward) Rowe of Simsbury, Conn. Date of their marriage is not known. Mary (Rowe) Gillet was born 26 July 1762, and died 11 January 1806, at Granby, Connecticut.(30) Joseph Gillet served in the Revolutionary War with the 18th Regt. Connecticut Militia with Captain Samuel Hayes' Co. Colonel Pettibone's Regt. (Rev. War Pension File #W7524) One wonders if Joseph Gillet and his family left Conn. because of Joseph's ex-communication from the Church 30 October 1812, for failure to attend services. In any event, about 1817, Joseph Gillet bought land in Delaware County, Ohio, and moved to the frontier with his sons and daughters and their families, settling at Norton, Delaware County, Ohio. (Deed book E, Delaware Co., Ohio - to Joseph Gillet, 650 acres of U.S. Military Lands, dated 1 September 1817).

HOMER GILLET^{7} (Amasa^{6}, Joseph^{5}, Joseph^{4}, Benjamin^{3}, John^{2}, Jonathan^{1})
5th cousin of Moses Austin

- born 18 Nov 1824 Delaware Co., Ohio
- married 31 Dec 1845 ELIZABETH THOMAS$^{(25)}$
- died 18 Dec 1904 Gridley, Kansas$^{(15)}$
- buried - Teachout Cemetery, Gridley, Coffey Co. Kans.

See Addendum.

Elizabeth Thomas was born 8 September 1824, Ohio - probably Butler County - and died 8 June 1901 at Gridley, Kansas. It is thought Elizabeth was the daughter of Morgan^{4} (War 1812) and Mary A. Thomas of Norton, Delaware Co., Ohio-listed in the 1840 census. Her parents, according to the 1880 census, were both born in Pennsylvania. Family tradition is Elizabeth had Welsh, French and Indian ancestors. She was a petite woman, with black sparkling eyes and jet black hair, a very beautiful lady.

Elizabeth and Homer Gillet and their children left Ohio ca 1855, moving to some place in The Missouri Territory or in what is now Nebraska. After a short time they moved on because of malaria, and settled at Gridley, Kansas as a deed was recorded at Burlington, Coffey County, Kansas on 26 January 1860, for 120 acres of land (range 14, twp. 22, sec. 8, Deed Book Volume G, ~~29)~~ 39, this land they bought from Mr. ~~Henry~~ John + Sarah Moore. Elizabeth and Homer gave a parcel of land for the school and this was known as the Gillet School or District #25. Homer Gillet was a small, slender, mild mannered man, and in his later years wore his white hair in a long bob. All his friends called him "The Connecticut Yankee." Elizabeth and Homer Gillet and their sons, Wilson and Benjamin, are buried in the Teachout Cemetery which is located on the high Prairie of Kansas which they helped open to civilization.

The Kingdom of FRANCE circa 1600

From Gillet Family, by Wilma Gillet Thomas

Henry II's wife – Catherine de Medici (queen mother regent for her sons Francis II [-1560] and Charles IX [1560-74] and Henry III [ ]. Catherine responsible for St. Bartholomew massacre of Huguenots which began in Paris, eventually killing 50,000. d. 1589.

The de Gylet/Jillit/Gillet/Gillett/Gillette family has been in America since 1630, ten years after the landing of the Mayflower at Plymouth. The Huguenot Emigration to America says William Gyllett, an ancestor of the Gillett family in America, is believed to have come from the town of Bergerac, Guyenne Province, France. In consequence of his continuing to preach the gospel he was banished, his property confiscated and his life put in eminent danger. The Gilletts fled from France to Scotland during the reign of King Henry OF FRANCE (1547-59) II. Persecuted Protestants It is believed that they remained in Scotland almost thirty years before some of the family removed to England.

A Jacques de Gylet was at the massacre of the French Protestants on St. Bartholowmew's Day, 24 August 1572. He fled to Scotland with his family and resided there. Later some of the Gillet family are found in England, so it is believed the Rev. Jacques de Gylet was the father of the Rev. William Gyllett, the Rector of Chaffcombe Parish, Somersetshire, England, in 1610. A Captain William Gillett was born February 1632, and married on 16 August 1678, to Katherine Morgan, the daughter of Capt. James Morgan, of Garth, Wales. Captain Gillett served in the Irish Wars of 1690-91, and was killed in the battle of Aughium on 12 July 1691, probably in charge of the French Huguenot Cavalry. Also, there is a record in the French Church, Spital Fields, London, England, of the marriage of Jacques de Gylet, a Bergerac Minister, to Jeanne Mestre, dated 11 October 1610. So it seems the Gylet/Gylletts of Scotland and England must have been related.

After the Rev. William Gyllett arrived in England he was instituted to Rector of Chaffcombe, County Somerset, on the 4th of February 1609-10. He died early in 1641, as his will was proved on the 16th of April of that year.(16) The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record of October 1910, pp. 282-283, gives clues from English Archives contributing to American Genealogy and it lists "Will of William Gyllett of Chaffcombe, Co. Somerset, dated 1641.* (*op. cit. XVII, No.I) my daughters Hebiah and Mary. Land which my son Nathan made over to me by letter of Attorney. My son, William, the next reversioner of said land, shall surrender his estate (therein) unto Thomas when requested thereunto. I give and bequeath unto my son Jeremiah my chattel (lease) of court ground. To all my children in England I give two silver spoons apiece. I give and bequeath unto my son William and his heirs my land called Bomers lease, on condition that he do pay out of the same one annuity of twelve pounds, vitz., to my daughter Hebiah 4 pounds,to my daughter Mary 4 pounds, and to my son Jeremiah 40 shillings. To Thomas, Jeremiah, Mary and Hebiah each of them one chayre and one frame stool. The rest of my goods I give to my son William, whom I make my executor, Mr. Joseph Greenfield, Mr. Luffe, my brother Richard, and my kinsman Henry Hutchins overseers, signed (William Gyllett). Witnesses none. Proved 16 April 1641,by the executor. (Taunton Wills, 1641, file 13)." An inventory was taken by Thomas Palmer and Lawrence Seley, two of William Gyllett's parishioners, and lists the value of the estate as 259 pounds, 14 shillings, 8 six-pence, which included 13 pounds of silver plate and an equal sum for books. It is thought by many genealogists that this phrase "to all my children in England," probably meant William had other children, unmentioned, who were not in England in 1641, and to whom he had presumably given their portion when they left home for the Colony. English Records show that the Rector of Chaffcombe had a son named Elias, who was not mentioned in the will, even though he was an Oxford graduate and presumably a credit to the family. This record is from the Alumni Oxonienses 1500-1714, by Joseph Foster, Oxford 1891, Vol. 2, pp 568: "Gillet, Elias, bro. of Jonathan ① s. of William of Chaffcombe, Somerset, sacerd. (Clergyman). New Inn Hall, matriculated 7 May 1632, age 20; B.A. 7 June 1632; M.A. 23 April 1635." Elias Gillet was probably the father of another nephew of Jonathan ① Rev. Elias Gillet, of Christ Church College, Oxford, ordained deacon 19 Sept. 1675, and priest 20 December 1679, and instituted to Rector Misterton, County Somerset, on 15 Feb. 1680-81. The second Rev. Elias Gillet died in 1703 and was the father of another clergyman, William Gillett, who matriculated at Wadham College, Oxford, 7 March 1703-04, age 18; B.A. 1707.(16)

Charles Banks, Topographical Dictionary of 2885 English Emigrants to New England, 1620-1650, lists pp 139, "Jonathan and Nathaniel Gillet, Chafcombe Parish, Somersetshire, England on the ship 'Mary and John' in 1630, to Dorchester, Massachusetts." It is thought another brother, Jeremiah, came to the Colony also. So three of William Gillett's sons had left England for the New World, however, Jonathan and Jeremiah made a return trip back to England.

No doubt Jonathan, Nathan and Jeremiah Gillet left England for the Colony because Charles I ruled as an absolute and irresponsible monarch in England, and Puritans and dissenters were crushed with despotic cruelty. Civil and religious liberty could not be had in England, but it might be found in the Colony. That was the spur that drove thousands across the seas. About three hundred of the best Puritan families in the Kingdom came to the New World. They were not adventurers or vagabonds, but brave, virtuous, courageous, well-educated men and women, who for conscience's sake left comfortable homes with no expectation of ever returning.

This record is from the Alumni Oxonienses 1500-1714, by Joseph Foster, Oxford 1891, Vol. II, p. [illegible]: "Gilbert, Giles, s. William of [illegible], [illegible] [illegible], Oxon[illegible]. Giles Gilbert, of Magdalen College, Oxford, ordained deacon 19 Sept. 1630, and priest 21 December 1633, and instituted to [illegible] [illegible], County [illegible], [illegible] 12 July 1663-81. Charles Banks, Topographical Dictionary of 2885 English Emigrants to New England, 1620-1650, lists at p. [illegible], "[illegible] and [illegible] Gilbert, [illegible] Parish, [illegible], England on the ship "Mary and John" in 1630, to Dorchester, Massachusetts." It is thought another brother, [illegible], came to the Colony also. It is as if William's [illegible] were [illegible] not left England for the New World, however, [illegible] [illegible] made a return trip back to England.

We should [illegible], William and Jeremiah Gilbert left England for the Colony because Charles I came to the throne and the [illegible] [illegible] in England, and [illegible] and [illegible] were [illegible] with [illegible] cruelty. father Gille(tt) came into new-englan the secon time in June in the yeare 1634, and Jonathan his sonne was born about half a year aftur he cam to land."(57)

Jonathan Gillet must have come to New England on his first trip in 1630, to 'spy out the land' and having found the land good returned to England to acquire a wife and together they returned to the Colony in the spring of 1634.(16)

Jonathan Gillet was made a freeman of the Massachusetts Bay on 6 May 1635.(16) His brother, Nathan, became a freeman on 14 May 1634.

This notice appeared in the Dorchester town record on 17 April 1635, "it is graunted to Jonathan Gillett to fence in halfe an acre of ground about his house, leaving sufficient highway and four more acres over against Fox Point,........"

Of the forty heads of families of the Dorchester Company who came on the "Mary and John" thirteen remained permanently in Dorchester, twenty-three removed to the site of Windsor, Connecticut, with Rev. Warham in the migration of 1635-36, and four settled elsewhere in Massachusetts.(6)

In the fall of 1635-36, sixty men, women and children from the Puritan settlements of Dorchester and Watertown traveled through the forests to join the Colony planted by Captain William Holmes at what is now Windsor, Connecticut. During previous summers a few pioneers had explored the beautiful valley and their report stimulated migration.

The exodus from Massachusetts Bay began late in October when frost and snow-flurries forcast an early winter. With oxen for tillage and beasts of burden, and cows for production of food these emigrants made their way on foot through pathless woods a hundred miles or more. Wading miry swamps, climbing rugged hills, fording swift streams, and carrying the smaller children over the rugged terrain, the settlers mong those who took the hazardous voyage in 1630 was a band of Puritans, one hundred and forty from Devonshire and adjoining counties in Southern England. Jonathan and Nathan Gillet were among this group who assembled at the "New Hospital," in Plymouth, England, on 30 Jan. 1630. The Rev. John Warham of Exeter formed the church group and Rev. John Maverick was the teacher. They sailed on the ship "Mary and John" and arrived at Nantasket (now Hull), Massachusetts on the Lord's Day, 30 May 1630, after several weeks voyage.(17)

Rev John White?

After landing, the Puritans were obliged to shift for themselves as best they could. Food was scarce but there was plenty of fish, muscles and clams from the streams. The Puritans traded with the Indians who came with baskets of corn and consequently had a variety of food.

Jonathan Gillet came to the Colony a bachelor in 1630, by 1633, he had returned to England, and during this time he married. In the Parish Register of St. Andrew's Church at Colyton, Devonshire, England, appears this marriage record: "1634 Jonathan Gillett (age 34) and Mary Dolbiar (age 27), 29 March."(16)

Mary Dolbiar/Dolbere was baptized at Colyton on 7 June 1607, the daughter of Rochy/Rochee and Mary/Marie (Mytchell) Dolbiar, yeoman, Chadhayne Parish, Colyton, England. Mary/Marie Mytchell was the daughter of John of Barretshayes.(16)

Perhaps Jonathan Gillet and Mary Dolbiar were betrothed before Jonathan's first trip to the Colony in 1630, or the marriage might have been arranged after he returned to England. By 1634, the bride and groom were back in the Colony. Henry Stiles', History of Ancient Windsor, Connecticut gives an account of the Gillet family and he says there is in the possession of a Windsor family a copy of the Geneva Edition of the Bible, dated 1599, and was brought to New England by Jonathan Gillet, Sr., and contains the following record: "my reached their destination at the Connecticut Valley, then blanketed with snow.(42)

At Windsor these emigrants built dug outs log huts in the snow, and here they passed a dreary, bitter, cold winter in great privation. Snow fell to great depths, many cattle suffered and perished for want of food. The settlers were threatened with the horror of a famine. In the face of this impending peril many of them made their way to the mouth of the river in vain expectation of finding their food-bearing vessel, which had been beaten to pieces on the rocks. While almost despairing, another vessel appeared in which they sailed to Boston. The settlers whom they left behind existed much of the time on acrons, indian corn and malt until spring opened and supplies were sent to them from Massachusetts.

From the birth records of Jonathan Gillet's children, we find this family made the trip to Connecticut during the summer of 1639. His daughter Anna 4th child was born at Windsor on 29 December 1639, and was specificially called in the Windsor Church Records, "Jonathan Gillet's first-born at Windsor." This group of Puritans, a hundred or more men, women and children walked through the wilderness. They lived on milk furnished by the cattle they drove with them and were fourteen days making the journey. They reached their destination on the banks of the Tunxis (now Farmington) and Connecticut Rivers in the latter part of June at what is now Windsor.(17)

Jonathan and Mary (Dolbiar) Gillet were included in Matthew Grant's Church List (Congregational) made thirty-seven years after settlement of "the twenty-one members who were so in Dorchester and came up with the Rev. Warham and are still of us." Jonathan and Mary Gillet were members number 16 from Dorchester. Jonathan paid 6 shillings to sit in the long pews and he gave 4 shillings to the Fund in Aid

An inventory of Jonathan Gillet's estate was taken by Matthew Grant, John Loomis and John Moore on 31 August 1677, and lists the estate worth 273 pounds plus. 1

GILLETT, Jonathan, with his brother NATHAN came to Dorchester, Mass., with Rev. Warham, and (both) to W. with the first emigration (see p. 157, Vol. I). Both he and his wife were members of the orig. D. and W. ch. (O. C. R.); D. W. P. thinks that he probably d. 2$^{6}_{7}$ Feb., 1697–8; O. C. R. says: "Jonathan, Sen.," d. 23 Aug., 1677, and in its list of persons taken into W. ch. "and are now living" (the date of this Rec. is Dec. 21, 1677) is mentioned "Wid. Gillett." The Rec. in Gillett-Holcomb Bible, referred to below (see, also, Note, p. 290), says "Father Gillett dyed in 1667." There is still extant, in the possession of a Windsor family, a copy of the Geneva edition of the Bible, of 1599, commonly known as the "Breeches Bible," because the fig-leaf garment made by our first parents in the Garden of Eden, and which in the King James's Version is called apron, is herein given as breeches. This Bible was brought to New England by this Jonathan Gillett, Senr., and afterwards passed into the hands of the present Holcomb family, prob. through Lois, who was the daughter of Jonathan Holcomb by his second wife, Wid. Mary Gillet, whom he married 28 June, 1721. Lois Holcomb, b. 5 July, 1748, was married July, 1772, to Noah (father of Perly, father of Dea. Anson) Cooley of North Granby, Conn. In the family, this Gillett-Holcomb Bible was familiarly known as the "Bear Bible," because it was once, in the olden days, placed in a window to keep the sash raised, when a bear, endeavoring to effect an entrance, clawed it, leaving the marks of his claws so deep upon the edges of its leaves, that they are still very plainly to be seen. In this Bible occurs the following manuscript record: "My father Gille[tt] came into new-inglan the secon[d] time in June in the yeare 1634 and Jonathan his sonne was born about half a yeare aftur he cam to land." [The italics are ours.] A jar now in possession of Mr. Norman F. Stoughton of So. Windsor, was, it is said, "brought over" by the first Jonathan Gillett. It is white with blue lines, 6 inches in height and 7 inches in diameter. Ch.:

PART I

THE "MARY AND JOHN"

ON THE TWENTIETH OF MARCH, 1630, a group of men and women, one hundred and forty in number, set sail from Plymouth, England, in the good ship, the "Mary and John." The company had been selected and assembled largely through the efforts of the Reverend John White, of Dorchester, England; with whom they spent the day before sailing, "fasting, preaching, and praying." These people had come from the western counties of England, mostly from Devonshire, Dorsetshire, and Somerset. They had chosen two ministers to accompany them: "men who were interested in the idea of bringing the Indians to the knowledge of the gospel." The Reverend John Maverick was an elderly man from Devon, a minister of the Established church. Anglican Reverend John Warham was also an ordained minister of the church of England, in Exeter, eminent as a preacher. There is some evidence that both of these men were in some difficulties with the church on account of their sympathies with the Puritans.

Edward Rossiter and Roger Ludlow, two men who were members of the government in England, were also chosen; and several gentlemen, middleaged, with adult families were next joined to the association. Among these were Henry Wolcott, Thomas Ford, George Dyer, William Gaylord, William Rockwell, and William Phelps. But a large portion of the company were young men, eager for adventure, such as Israel Stoughton, Roger Clapp, George Minot, Richard Collicott, and Nathaniel Duncan.[1]

So we came, writes Roger Clapp in his Memoirs, by the good Hand of the Lord, through the deep comfortably; having preaching or expounding of the word of God every day for ten weeks together by our ministers. When we came to Nantasket, Capt. Squeb, who was Captain of that great ship of four hundred tons, put us on shore and our goods on Nantasket Point, and left us to shift for ourselves in a forlorn place in this wilderness.

[1] Clapp, Ebenezer: History of the Town of Dorchester, 1859, published by Ebenezer Clapp, Boston, Mass., pp. 17-18.

It had been their original intent to land in the Charles River, but a dispute with Captain Squeb, the commander of the vessel, caused the whole company, on May 30, 1630, to be put ashore at Nantasket. The "Mary and John" was the first of the Fleet of 1630 to arrive in the bay. At that time there could not have been pilots, or charts of the channel, and it does not seem unreasonable that the captain refused to undertake the passage, but Roger Clap has sent Captain Squeb down to posterity as a merciless man.[2]

According to tradition they landed upon the south side of Dorchester Neck, or South Boston, in Old Harbor. Ten of the men, under the command of Captain Southcote, found a small boat, and went up the river to Charlestown Neck, where they found an old planter, probably Thomas Walfourd, who fed them "a dinner of fish without bread." Later they continued their journey up the Charles River, as far as what is now Watertown, returning several days later to the company who had found pasture for their cattle at Mattapan. The settlement was later called Dorchester, in honor of the Reverend John White, of Dorchester, England.

Roger Clap tells of the hardships that followed. They had little food, and were forced to live on clams and fish. The men built small boats, and the Indians came later with baskets of corn. "The place was a wilderness," writes Roger Clap. "Fish was a good help to me and to others. Bread was so scarce that I thought the very crusts from my father's table would have been sweet; and when I could have meal and salt and water boiled together, I asked, 'who could ask for better?' "

Here they lived for five or six years. Other boats arrived and other towns were settled. But the life at Dorchester was not entirely congenial to the lovers of liberty of the "Mary and John." The group of settlements around Massachusetts Bay was dominated by clergymen and officials of aristocratic tendencies. Their Governor, John Winthrop, had little sympathy with the common people. "The best part (of the people)," he declared, "is always the least, and of that best part, the wiser is always the lesser."

And the Reverend John Cotton put it more bluntly when he said, "Never did God ordain democracy for the government of the church or the people."

These principles were repugnant to the people of the "Mary and John," who had come to America to escape such restraint. They had no wish to interfere with the methods of worship of others, and they did not wish others to interfere with them. Too, they were land-hungry, after centuries of vassalage to the lords of the manors, leading hopeless lives without chance of independence. Perhaps they were influenced also, by the fact that a great smallpox epidemic had raged among the Indians, killing off so many that they were not the menace that they had been at first. The settlers turned their attention toward the fertile meadows of the Connecticut Valley.

A group under Roger Ludlow set out and reached the Plymouth Trading house that had been erected by William Holmes near the junction of the Connecticut and the Farmington Rivers, early in the summer of 1635. A little later sixty men, women and children, with their "Cows, heifers and swine," came overland from Dorchester. The winter was severe and the food scarce, and many returned to Massachusetts, but in the spring they came back to Connecticut with their friends, and by April, 1636, most of the members of the Dorchester Church were settled near the Farmington River, along the brow of the hill that overlooks the "Great Meadow." This in spite of the fact that the Plymouth people disputed their claim to the land. They built rude shelters, dug out of the rising ground along the edge of the river bank. The rear end and the two sides were simply the earth itself, with a front and a roof of beams. The town was later named Windsor.

In the following year, 1637, danger from the Pequot Indians forced them to abandon their dugouts and to come together around the area known as the Palisado Green. Their new homes were at once enclosed with a strong palisado.

In 1639 they began the construction of their first real meeting house. It stood in the center of the palisado, and was topped with a cupola and platform, where the sexton beat a drum to summon the people to attend services or public meetings. About the same time there was built and presented to the pastor, the Reverend John Warham, a corn mill, which is supposed to have been the first grist mill built in Connecticut. For many years it served all the settlements in the river valley, as far south as Middletown.

All over America today live the descendants of the fathers and mothers of the "Mary and John." Their sons and daughters have written their names on the pages of American History. They have filled the pulpits of famous churches; they have sat on judges' benches, and in the seats of Congress; they have occupied Governors' Mansions, and even the White House. Some fought at Lexington, and wintered with Washington at Valley Forge. They joined in the trek to the West, and one followed Brigham Young into Utah. One marched with Sherman as he burned and pillaged his way through Georgia, and perhaps one fought on the other side with Lee. One is called the "Hero of Manila Bay," and one was hanged! They learned strange names like Saint-Mehiel, Chateau-Thierry, the Argonne Forest and Sedan. Perhaps one lies in Flanders Field.

And even as this manuscript is being written, our boys are going again into strange lands: to Iceland, to Africa, and to Australia! One of our own correspondents wrote from Schofield Barracks in Hawaii.

An effort has been made to show through the ancestry of people living today, or through famous men of history, how this little group lived together, married and intermarried, even beyond the third and fourth generations. The names of descendants of the men and women who came to America on the "Mary and John" are found in every state of the Union.

Elizabeth, who is mentioned Nov. 16, 1632, in the will of Emma Escott of Bridgwater, England, but is not mentioned in the will of John Gilbert.[14]

In 1637 John Gilbert and his two sons were members of an incorporated body of forty who purchased of Sachem Massasoit about one hundred and sixty-two acres of land lying west of Plymouth, which was named Taunton. Here the family established itself, and here descendants were to be found for over one hundred and forty years. John Gilbert was made freeman of Taunton, Dec. 4, 1638, and was constable in 1640. In 1641 he received a grant of land from the town, with others, "for their great charges in attending courts, laying out lands and other occasions for the town." He was the first Representative from Taunton to the General Court. He bequeathed to his sons Thomas, Gyles and Joseph, and daughter Mary Norcross, and named Rev. Nicholas Street and Richard Williams overseers. He died in Taunton, Mass., in May, 1656-7. His will is on file in Plymouth, Mass.

INTRODUCTION

THE historians among our early ancestors were serious men. They approached their gigantic task with great earnestness, as well they might; names, facts, and dates all carefully tabulated for the confusion of future generations of boys and girls. But the details of the lives of these people, the marvelous stories of bravery and adventure, of love and intrigue, of bigotry and chivalry, are either lacking altogether, or are told in a few brief words. Much has been written about the cruel punishments of the times, of the witchcraft trials, of banishments into the wilderness; but little has been told of the men who were kind, and gentle, and good. Those were hard times, and some of the men were harsh; but others were among the gentlest people on earth. Reverend Maverick has been called "a man of exceedingly humble spirit." And Reverend Warham must have been a great and sympathetic man to have held his group together through all their wanderings. Even Governor Winthrop, who was considered a harsh man, laments the mistreatment of children discovered in one of the early schools.

Much has been said about the frequent marriages of our ancestors. If we consider the dangers of the times, we must realize that a woman could not live alone with a family of little children; nor could a man left alone with a new-born baby face life without a woman's help. It was wise and natural that the families joined together for mutual protection. Time and again in reading old wills, it will be found that a man has provided for the children of his wife, making no distinction between them and his own. And genealogies are full of marriages between these foster sisters and brothers.

Searching family records becomes in time a gentle vice from which the eager victim finds it impossible to escape. He (or more often she) pours over dull finely printed pages, over long lists of somber names: Abner, Nathaniel, Moses, Elijah, Daniel. And then—there it is! The very name for which you are seeking! Suddenly the story brightens; once more these people live!

BARBOUR Thomas Barbour or Barber, the immigrant ancestor, came to New England in the ship, "Christian," March 16, 1634. He settled in Windsor, Connecticut, in 1635, at the age of twenty-one, with the Saltonstall party, under Francis Stiles. He was a soldier in the Pequot fight. He married, October 7, 1640, Jane ——, who died September 10, 1662. He died September 11, 1662. Children: 1. John, baptized July 24, 1642; married (first) Bathsheba Coggins; (second) Widow Hannah Bancroft. 2. Thomas, see forward. 3. Sarah, baptized July 19, 1646; married Timothy Hall. 4. Samuel, baptized October 1, 1648; married (first) Mary Coggins; (second) Ruth Drake. 5. Mercy, baptized October 12, 1651; married (first) John (2) Gillett; (second) George Norton. 6. Josiah, born February 5, 1653-54; married (first) Abigail Loomis; (second) Sarah (Porter) Drake.

(II) Lieutenant Thomas (2) Barber, son of Thomas (1) and Jane Barber, was born July 14, 1644, died May 10, 1713. He removed to Simsbury, and was a carpenter by trade, building the first meeting house there. He married, December 17, 1663, Mary, who died in 1687, daughter of William and Mary (Dover) Phelps, the immigrants. Children: John, born November 1, 1664, married Mary Holcomb; Mary, born January 11, 1666; Sarah, born July 12, 1669, married Andrew Robe; Joanna, born 1670, married (first) Josiah Adkins, (second) Benjamin Colt; Thomas, born October 7, 1671, married Abigail Buell; Samuel, see forward; Ann, married Jonathan Higley.

(III) Samuel, son of Lieutenant Thomas (2) and Mary (Phelps) Barber, was born May 17, 1673, died December 18, 1725. He married, December 17, 1712, Sarah Holcomb, born 1691, died 1787, aged ninety-six, daughter of Nathaniel and Mary (Bliss) Holcomb. She removed from the old parish to West Simsbury in 1738 with her four sons, Samuel, Thomas, Jonathan and John, and daughters, Mercy and Sarah, the sons settling on the best land in the "centre school district." They were among the earliest and most prominent settlers of West Simsbury. Children: 1. Samuel, born 1714; married (first) Tryphena Humphrey; (second) Hannah (Humphrey) Case. 2. Thomas, born 1716; married Elizabeth Adams. 3. Jonathan, born 1717; married Jemima Cornish. 4. John, see forward. 5. Sarah, born April 1, 1722; married John Case. 6. Mercy, married Ephraim Buell, Jr.

(IV) John, son of Samuel and Sarah (Holcomb) Barber, was born December 4, 1719, died December 27, 1797. He married, January 22, 1746-47, Lydia Reed, who was born November 18, 1726, died October 1, 1806, a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Hill) Reed. Children: Lydia, born December 26, 1747, married Samuel Olcott; John, see forward; Reuben, born December 7, 1751, married Elizabeth Case; Sarah, born July 1, 1754, died April 15, 1761; Rhoda, born April 25, 1756, died June 1, 1761; Benjamin, born March 3, 1760, married Lydia Case; Jona-bushel of corn, or something equivalent thereto," the court approved the proposition and appointed two men in each town "to receive and seasonably to send in what shall thus be given by them." And William Gaylord and Henry Clarke were appointed for that purpose in Windsor. This contribution was continued for many years by the Connecticut Colony, for the "School of the Prophets" was very near to the hearts of the settlers.

In May, 1650, a Code of Laws, which has been previously alluded to, was completed. It contained, under the titles Children and Schools, the following important enactments, which remained, with only such trifling modifications as contributed to their greater efficiency, until the act of 1792, and the revision of the school law in 1801.

Read them, ye Windsor men, with honest pride that these, with other enactments of the Code of 1650, were the work of Roger Ludlow, a Windsor father; read them also, we trust you will, with a sincere appreciation of that Christian wisdom, therein displayed, which the experience of two centuries hath not gainsaid. Read carefully, for every word is pregnant with truth.

Children.

Forasmuch as the good education of children is of singular behoof and benefit to any commonwealth; and whereas many parents and masters are too indulgent and negligent of their duty in that kind.

It is therefore ordered by this Court and the authority thereof, That the selectmen of every town in the several precincts and quarters where they dwell, shall have a vigilant eye over their brethren and neighbors, to see, first, that none of them shall suffer so much barbarism in their families, as not to endeavor to teach by themselves or others, their children and apprentices so much learning, as may enable them perfectly to read the English tongue, and knowledge of the capital laws, upon penalty of [illegible] for each neglect therein; also, that all masters of families, do, once a week, at least, catechise their children and servants, in the grounds and principles of religion, and if any be unable to do so much, that then, at the least, they procure such children or apprentices to learn some short orthodox catechism, without book, that they may be able to answer to the questions that shall be propounded to them out of such catechism by their parents, or ma rs, or any of the selectmen, when they shall call them to a ial of what they have learned in this kind; and further, that ll parents and masters do breed and bring up their children nd apprentices in some honest, lawful calling, labor or employ-ent, either in husbandry or some other trade profitable for emselves and the commonwealth, if they will not nor can not ain them up in learning, to fit them for higher employments; nd if any of the selectmen after admonition by them given to ch masters of families, shall find them still neglectful of their uty, in the particulars afore mentioned, whereby children and ervants become rude, stubborn and unruly, the said selectmen, ith the help of two magistrates, shall take such children, or pprentices from them, and place them with some masters,— oys till they come to twenty-one, and girls to eighteen years of ge complete — which will more strictly look unto and force hem to submit unto government, according to the rules of this rder, if by fair means and former instructions they will not be rawn unto it."[1]

Schools.

It being one chief project of that old deluder Satan, to keep men from the knowledge of the scriptures, as in former times, keeping them in an unknown tongue, so in these latter times, by persuading them from the use of tongues, so that at least, the true sense and meaning of the original might be clouded with false glosses of saint seeming deceivers; and that learning may not be buried in the grave of our forefathers, in church and commonwealth, the Lord assisting our endeavors.

It is therefore ordered by this Court and authority thereof, That every township within this jurisdiction, after the Lord hath increased them to the number of 50 householders, shall then forthwith appoint one within their town, to teach all such children as shall resort to him, to write and read, whose wages shall be paid, either by the parents or masters of such children, or by the inhabitants in general, by way of supply, as the major part of those who order the prudentials of the town shall appoint; provided, that those who send their children be not oppressed by paying more than they can have them taught for in other towns.

And it is further ordered, That where any town shall increase to the number of 100 families or householders, they shall set up a grammar school, the masters thereof being able to instruct youths, so far as they may be fitted for the university, and if any town neglect the performance hereof, above one year, then

[1] The same wise and careful forethought which devised this admirable Code, did not neglect the interests of the poor Indian. As, however, it does not particularly concern the purpose of our history, we shall not discuss the matter.

ing there shall be a schoolmaster be got and the townsmen were to get one and the children to pay as to Mr. Cornish, and the rest by the town."

February 18th, 1679, the town voted Captain Clarke to keep school in Windsor for a year, six months on each side of Rivulet, and he engaged also to attend to the town business in making out rates, lists, &c., for all of which he was allowed £40.

Nearly ten years later, Windsor could boast two teachers, for, "at a meeting of the townsmen, December 20, 1685, it was ordered that the four pounds paid to the town by Tahan Grant for the rent of John Fitch's house for the two last years past, shall be paid to the two present school-masters; viz: to Mr. Cornish 30 shillings, and to Mr. John Loomis 50 shillings."

In 1690, the following enactment was made:

"This Court observing that notwithstanding the former orders made for the education of children and servants, there are many persons unable to read the English tongue, and thereby unable to read the Holy Word of God, and the good laws of this Colony, and it is hereby ordained, that all parents and masters shall cause their children and servants as they are capable to read distinctly the English tongue, and that the grand-jury men in each town do once in the year, at least, visit each family they suspect to neglect this order, and satisfy themselves that all children under age, and servants in such suspected families, can read well the English tongue, or in good proceedure to learn the same or not, and if they find any such children or servants not taught as their years are capable of they shall return the names of the parents or masters of the said children, to the next Court, when the said parents or masters are to be fined 20 shillings for each child or servant whose teaching is thus neglected, according to this order, after the order of 1690, unless it appears to the satisfaction of the Court that the said neglect is not voluntary, but necessitated by the incapacity of the parents or masters, or their neighbors to cause them to be taught as aforesaid, or the incapacity of the said children or servants to learn."

The next year the town of Windsor voted £20 a year for a school.

But the town was enlarging, quite a settlement had sprung up on the east side of the Great River (now East and South Windsor), and they also had children to educate. So in April, 1698, we find the town agreeing to hire a schoolmaster; and school was to be be kept three months on the east side of the Great River, and nine months on the west side, half on the north and half on the south side of the Rivulet; each quarter of the town to provide a suitable school-house without any charge to the town. The master to receive £20, "besides that which is given of gift-money." The Committee were Lft. Hayden and Lft. Matthew Allyn. They made (April, 1698) the following contract:

"Agreed with Mr. Samuel Wolcott to keep a reading, and writing, and cyphering, and grammer school for one full year, to begin on the twelfth day of this month [July]; to take none but such as are entered in spelling. His salary is to be thirty-five pounds in country pay or two-thirds of so much in money. The school is to be kept at the several places agreed on by the townsmen.

WEST OF THE CONNECTICUT RIVER.

In the year 1700, the town of Windsor was represented by its worthy minister, the Rev. SAMUEL MATHER, at that memorable gathering of clergymen who established Yale College. Deeply imbued as they were with the importance of their undertaking, and with a prophetic assurance of its ultimate success, they could not then have foreseen the immense influence which it was, in less than two centuries, to obtain; nor the position it now holds as the crown of Connecticut's educational system.

About the commencement of the last century (1701), the common school system of Connecticut embraced the following particulars:

1. An obligation on every parent and guardian of children, "not to suffer so much barbarism in any of their families as to have a single child or apprentice unable to read the holy word of God, and the good laws of the colony," and also "to bring them up to some lawful calling or employment," under a penalty for each offence.

[1] After 1702, the control of school matters became gradually vested in the ecclesiastical societies or parishes — and we shall therefore treat the history of the Windsor schools under their separate parochial divisions. The history of Poquonnoc and Wintonbury parishes, in the absence of any official records, can not be written.

he shall be paid at the country charge." And at the May session, 1650, was formally presented and adopted the first code of laws in the history of our state; of which it has been well said, that, "in view of the age in which it was formed, in view particularly of the circumstances of the Connecticut Colony, its newness, its family character, and its earnest and at times feverish estimate of the ends and claims of religion, no code was ever, upon the whole, more happily adapted to promote the interest, and sustain the growth of fresh emigrants, gathered in a new country to found a state."

By it, every personal right was amply guarantied, and every great interest of commerce, trade and agriculture, was protected with a wise and fostering care. Of these things however we do not now propose to speak. But we may be allowed perhaps to dwell awhile on some of its more peculiar provisions, which, as reflecting the habits and spirit of our forefathers, are not only amusing, but instructive and appropriate to the purpose of our history.

We find that capital crimes were much more numerous then than now. It was a capital offence to worship any other than the true God; to practice adultery, or the crime against nature, or rape; or to blaspheme; or to exercise witchcraft; or to steal men or women; or for children "unless brought up in unchristian negligence" to curse, or smite, or be stubborn and rebellious towards their parents. Horrible and barbarous! some readers may exclaim. And yet, when we consider that as late as the close of the last century, there were remaining on the statute books of Christian, enlightened England, 168 crimes, declared by act of parliament to be punishable by death, we must confess that the Code of 1650, was far ahead of its age; far more humane.

Lying, was in those days deemed a peculiarly heinous offence. As early as 1641, the General Court stigmatized it as a "foule and gross sin," and "Mr. Webster [of Hartford] and Mr. Phelps [of Windsor] are desired to consult with the Elders of both Plantations, to prepare instructions against the next court, for the punishment of the sin of lying, which begins to be practiced by many persons in this Commonwealth."

This committee brought into a subsequent court, a report that it should be lawful for the Particular Court to adjudge and censure any such party (convicted of lying) either by fine or bodily correction, as they shall judge the nature of the fault to require. In the Code of 1650, it is again severely denounced, and all persons above the age of 14 years, found guilty are made punishable with fines, stocks or stripes; and all children under that age who "offend in lying," are to be punished by their parents in the presence of an officer, "if any magistrate shall so appoint." In the records of the Particular Court, May 18, 1664, we find that

> "John Bissell having made complaint of S——— D——— for reproachful speeches which she hath spoken against the wife of the said Bissell, the Court having considered the complaint do order that H——— D——— or his wife shall severely correct their daughter with a rod on the naked body in the presence of Mrs. Wolcott and Goode Bancroft this day, and in case it be not attended to this day, the constable is to see it done, the next opportunity, and the said S——— is to give in security for her good behavior till the court in September next."

Swearing, drunkness, and contempt of the civil authorities were severely dealt with, as the following records will show:

> "Sept. 5, 1639. Thomas Gridley of Windsor was complained of for refusing to watch, strong suspicion of drunkness, contemptuous words against the orders of the Court, quarrelling, striking Mr. Stiles's man. He was censured to be whipt at Hartford, and bound for his good behavior" for which he entered a recognizance of £10. (Col. Record.)

> "June 2, 1664. Mr. Nicholas Stevens for his cursing at Windsor before the Train band last Monday is to pay to the public treasury 10 shillings."

> "May 12, 1668. Nicholas Wilton for wounding the wife of John Brooks, and Mary Wilton, the wife of Nicholas Wilton, for contemptuous and reproachful terms by her put upon one of the Assistants, are adjudged, she to be whipt 6 stripes upon the naked body, next training day at Windsor; and the said Nicholas is hereby disfranchised of his privilege of freedom in this Corporation, and is to pay for the Horse and Man that came with him to the Court this day, and for what damage he hath done to the said Brooks his wife, and sit in the stocks the same day his wife is to receive her punishment. The Constables of Windsor to see this attended."

> "1668. John Porter having been accused by this court for defaming of some who have been in authority in this court, do order that he make full acknowledgment of the same and manifest his repentance the next training day at Windsor, or else that he appear at the next county court to answer for his miscarriage therein."

In 1670, Owen Tudor "of Windsor was deposed from his office of Constable for swearing and drunkness."

Open contempt of God's holy word or ministers was rigorously dealt with. The first offence with public reproof and bonds for good behavior, the second by a £5 fine, and standing in the pillory upon a lecture day, bearing on the breast a paper duly labeled in capital letters, "AN OPEN AND OBSTINATE CONTEMNER OF GOD'S HOLY WORD."

Absence from church, was visited by a fine of 5 shillings.

Forgery, was punished by 3 days in the pillory, payment of double damages to the injured party, and disqualification as witness or juryman.

Fornication, by fine, whipping or prohibition to marry.

To nearly all these various punishments, was added that of disfranchisement of all civil qualifications in town and commonwealth, "until the Court manifest their satisfaction."

The censure of the General Court, the stocks, and the whipping post, were "peculiar institutions" of "the olden times," the latter two of which, thank God, are unknown to the moderns. Windsor, of course, possessed a pair of Stocks, from a very early day. In the annual exhibit of town payments in 1663, we find that worthy old carpenter William Buell charging "for a pair of stocks and mending some seats, 9*s*: 6*d*." In May, 1679, "Jacob Drake demands, for making a pair of Stocks;" and as late even as May 15, 1724, we find it recorded that "Friend Shivee sat in the pillory and his right ear cut off for making plates for bills." When the stocks were abolished in our town we do not know.[1]

The whipping post, as tradition says, stood upon the green (Broad street) where the present sign post stands, and was in use certainly as late as 1714, when Timothy Loomis records that "John F. was whipt at ye sign post, T. G. Whipper."

From this extract we might infer that it then served the double office of sign post and whipping post. Whipping was generally performed upon a lecture or training day; and very often "at the cart's tail," a peculiarly aggravating feature of the punishment. For example, in the first case of bastardy tried in the colony, in 1639, the court ordered as follows:

> "John Edmonds, Aaron Starke and Jno. Williams were censured for unclean practices, as follo.: Jno. Williams [Edmonds?] to be whipt at a Cart's [tail] upon a lecture day at Hartford. John Williams to stand upon the pillory from the ringing of the first bell to the end of the lecture, then to be whipt at a Cart's [tail] and to be whipt in a like manner at Windsor within 8 days following.
> Aaron Starke to stand upon the pillory and be whipt as Williams, and to have the letter R, burnt upon his cheek, and in regard of the wrong done to Mary Holt, to pay her parents £10; and in defect of such to the Commonwealth, and when both are fit for that condition, to marry her.
> It is the mind of the Court that Mr. Ludlow and Mr. Phelps see some public punishment inflicted upon the girl for concealing it so long."

Even as late as 1767, a Mulatto girl called Peggy, was convicted of stealing and ordered to be whipt 6 stripes on the naked body in some public place in Windsor.

Branding was a form of punishment, not uncommon, Burglary, or highway robbery, was blazoned with the letter B. A second offence was followed by a second branding, and severe whipping. If the offence was committed on the Lord's day, one of the culprit's ears was to be cut off. If repeated on the same day the other ear suffered likewise. If a third time, death followed.

> Sept. 1644. "James Hallet, for his theft, is adjudged to restore fourfold for what shall be proved before Captain Mason and Mr. Wolcott, and to be branded in the hand, the next training-day at Windsor." (Col. Rec.)

Hallet was probably incorrigible, for he had previously been remanded by the court from the house of correction, and given in charge to his master Barclet, who was "to keep him to hard labor and course diet, during the pleasure of the court, provided that [the said] Barclet is first to remove his daughter from his family before the said James enter therein."

Our chapter would hardly be complete without some notice of the sumptuary policy of our ancestors. And here we are well aware that we tread upon disputed ground. Upon this feature of their legislation, have been heaped obloquy, ridicule and contempt; and the so called Connecticut Blue Laws have been the butt and scoff of scores of writers of later generations, whose reverence for their forefathers was as slight as their knowledge of history. For, however foreign and repugnant to our ideas, those laws may be which restrain or limit the expenses of citizens in apparel, food, furniture, &c., it must be remembered that they were perfectly in accordance with the best and highest views of the political economy of that day. They existed in every civilized government of Old Europe, as well as in every American Colony, then and for more than a century after. They had their origin in the then prevalent belief that simple habits and frugality were essential to the healthy growth of sound civil liberty, and that private and social extravagance in any form tended to check that growth, and thereby embarrassed and destroyed the state. And even as late as 1778, in Connecticut and some other states, the prices of labor and its products, tavern charges, &c., were regulated by law, while in England, many such laws remained in force until 1824.

Following out, therefore, the line of policy in which they had been educated, and which the customs of the age sanctioned, our fathers, from time to time, enacted such laws as in our day would be universally resented as an unwarrantable interference with private affairs. In 1641, noticing an increasing, and, as they deemed it "an unseemly" increase of extravagance in dress, which they term an "excess of apparel," and desiring to nip the nascent evil in the bud, the General Court required the constables of each town to take notice of any person so offending within their several limits, and present them to the Particular Court.

Yet there are sufficient indications that even the much dreaded "censure of the Court," could not entirely check the growing evil, and that some little "innocent finery" would from time to time crop out, in spite of spying constables.

Stiles

The General Court in June, 1641, regulated the scale of laborers' prices, &c. They ordered that "able carpenters, plow wrights, wheelwrights, masons, joiners, smiths and coopers, should not take above 20*d* for a day's work, from the 10th of March to the 9th of October, nor above 18*d* a day for the rest of the year."

The working day was set at 9 hours per day in the summer time, "besides that which is spent in eating and sleeping," and 9 hours in winter. Mowers were only allowed 20*d* for a day's work. Artificers, handicraftsmen and chief laborers were not to take above 18*d* per day from 10th March to 9th of October, and 14*d* per day the remainder of the year. When work was done by the job, its price was to be valued, in the same proportion.

Sawyers could "not take above 4*s* 6*d* for slitt work or three inch plank, nor above 3*s* 6*d* for boards, per hundred." The price of boards was also regulated at 5*s* 6*d* per hundred.

The hire of 4 of the "better sort" of oxen and horses "with tackling," should not be valued at above 4*s* 10*d* per day, for 6 and 8 hours work (according to time of year), except they be employed in breaking upland ground, for which they were allowed 4*s* 15*d* for 6 hours.

In May 1647, the court passed the following curious order, which would in these days seem very harsh to the tobacco growing settlers of Windsor, and the tobacco loving Yankeee nation in general.

> "Forasmuch as it is observed that many abuses are crept in and committed by frequent taking of Tobacco, it is ordered by the authority of this Court, that no person under the age of 21 years, nor any other that hath not already accustomed himself to the use thereof, shall take any tobacco until he have brought a certificate, under the hand of some who are approved for knowledge and skill in physic, that it is useful for him, and also that he hath received a license from the Court for the same. And for the regulating those who either by their former taking it, have to their own apprehensions made it necessary to them, or upon due advice are persuaded to the use

Francis Gibbs. Probably from Devonshire, where the name is common. Was a first comer at Dorchester.

Thomas Bassett. Came to Windsor with Mr. Stiles's party, 1635, afterwards removed to Fairfield.

William Hill. An early settler at Dorchester, where he had land granted Nov. 2, 1635. He probably did not come to Windsor with the first company.

Lieut. David Wilton. Probably came to Dorchester in 1633, thence to Windsor — from here he removed "from Windsor Church to go to Northampton to help to further a church there the beginning March 25, and now Feby. the 6, 1667 he was b[uried] here in Windsor, he died the day before" (Old Church Record). He bought out the lots of his neighbors, Hill, Gibbs and Bassett, prior to 1654, when his name appears as sole proprietor on Grant's Plan of the Palisado. He made a contract in 1651 with the town, to keep the burying ground properly cleared and fenced, &c. The present First Congregational Church, probably stands near the south line of his lot, a little east of the middle of it.

These lots cover the ground now occupied by the new part of the burying ground; the First Congregational Church; and the residence of Henry Sill, Esq. Next to them on the land now occupied by the road to the bridge, the residence of the Misses Stiles, &c., were the lots of

Sgt. Walter Fyler. Probably at Dorchester in 1630. His well is still in existence on the lot occupied by the Misses Stiles.

Thomas Thornton. Was at Dorchester probably as early as 1630 — was one of the keepers of cows for that town in 1635. Sold his lot to John Strong, who lived there in 1654. (See Palizado Plan.) This property is now owned by

One night last week, a panther having killed nine sheep in a yard at Windsor, the owner of the sheep, one Mr. Phelps, the next morning, followed the panther by his track into a thicke about half a mile from his house, and shot him. He was broug to this town, and the bounty of five pounds allowed by law wa paid for his head.—New London Gazette, No. 172.

From the Connecticut Courant, dated Hartford, August 10, 1767.

"Last Tuesday two transient persons were taken up Windsor, for committing, each of them, two thefts, and receiv sixteen lashes on each of their backs; eight for each offenc The next day they were committed to Gaol in this Town, to tak their trial at the Superior Court next month, for breaking ope and robbing a house at Windsor."

From the Connecticut Courant, dated Hartford, September, 1767.

"Last week, David Campbell and Alexander Pettigrew, we indicted before the Superior Court, sitting in this Town, f breaking open and robbing the house of Mr. Abiel Abbot, Windsor, of two watches, to which Indictment they both ple guilty, and were sentenced each of them to receive 15 stripe to have their right ears cut off, and to be branded with a capi letter B on their foreheads; which punishment was inflicted them last Friday. Pettigrew bled so much from the amputat of his ear, that his life was in danger."

From the Connecticut Courant, No. 191, dated August 22, 1768.

"On Saturday, the 13th inst., the following melancholy ac dent happened in Windsor, viz.: Four young women wh names were Thrall, who had been at work abroad in the af noon, after they had completed their labor, agreed to di themselves in the water, in a small river at that pl Accordingly they pulled off their stockings and shoes, and j ing hands, immediately went into the river; but not be acquainted with the depth of the water, and the bottom be very uneven, the young woman that was foremost fell in deep place, which she did not discover till it was too la save herself, and pulled two of her unhappy companions a her, by which means they were all unfortunately drowned; the other very narrowly escaped sharing the same fate. T of the above young women were sisters, one of which was a 21, the other about 19 years of age. The other was a relation. Their bodies were soon after taken up, and the day decently interred. The Rev'd Mr. Russell preached a mon suitable to the occasion.

A few days after, one Henry Chapman of the same p accidentally fell from a beam in a barn, upon a cart that upon the floor, and split his head, and died instantly. He was about 40 years of age."

Tradition relates that Mr. Chapman, at the time of this accident was at work for a neighbor on the north side of the Rivulet; his own residence being on the south side. That afternoon, his wife sent a little daughter up to Hoyt's Meadow, to look after or drive home the cows. The child went, but shortly returned, crying violently and appearing greatly frightened and agitated. On being questioned as to the cause, she affirmed that on reaching the pasture where the cows were, she had seen her father standing on the stump of a tree, and covered with blood.

In a few minutes after, word was brought to the family, of the sudden accident by which the husband and father had lost his life. It was undoubtedly one of those cases of premonition which sometimes precede coming events, but which all our philosophy fails to explain.

"We hear from Poquonock, a parish in the western part of Windsor, that about half an acre of the surface of the ground there has lately sunk or fallen to a considerable depth below the common surface or level; not unlike to what is frequently occasioned by earthquakes, though attended with no eruptions, either of water or fire; for which event no natural cause has as yet been assigned. And it is more unaccountable, as the ground that is sunk was not contiguous to or bordering upon any precipice or declivity, nor adjacent to any collection of water that should occasion it to sink."—Conn. Journal, June 22, 1770.

thereof, it is ordered, that no man within this Colony, after the publication hereof, shall take any tobacco publicly in the street, nor shall any take it in the fields or woods, unless when they are on their travel, or journey of at least 10 miles, or at the ordinary time of repast commonly called dinner, or if it be not then taken, yet not then above once in the day at most, and then not in company with any one. Nor shall any inhabitant in any of the towns within this jurisdiction, take any tobacco in any house in the same town where he liveth, with and in the company of any more than one who useth and drinketh the same weed, with him at that time; under the penalty of 6 pence for each offence against this order, in any of the particulars thereof, to be paid without gainsaying, upon conviction by the testimony of one witness that is without just exception before any one Magistrate."

The constables of each town were to make presentment of such offence to each particular Court. Puritanic and blue as this may seem, Connecticut was not alone in pronouncing against the weed. Queen Elizabeth of England enacted edicts against its use, James I, not only followed her example, but added the weight of his pen and personal influence; and Charles I, made another attempt to put it down. Russia made its use a capital offence; Popes have thundered against it and threatened excommunication, and in nearly every great power of Europe, it has been made a matter of penal legislation. But in spite of all, and over all — tobacco, filthy, poisonous, useless — is triumphant, and counts its votaries by tens of thousands.

About the same time, "for the preventing that great abuse which is creeping in by excess of wine and strong water," the court "order, that no one shall remain in any common victualling house in the same town where he liveth above half an hour at a time in drinking wine, beer or waters," nor should they be allowed to drink more than three pints at a time. Venders of the same were forbidden to deliver wine to any one "who came for it unless they bring a note under the hand of some one master of a family, and an allowed inhabitant of the town."

This law is in some respects identical with the famous Maine law, which some two centuries later, so widely agitated the public mind of America.

We have thus endeavored to present our readers with a clear and summary sketch of the government under which Windsor and her sister plantations in the colony, had their beginning and their growth. It is an interesting subject to every student of American history; and especially so to those who reflect that these laws under which their fathers lived, were the work of Roger Ludlow, Wolcott, and others, men whose names, through long lines of descent, have been honorably associated with the town of WINDSOR.

This year was one of great sickness and mortality in Connecticut, as well as in New England generally. Religious controversy, and the implacable animosity of the Indians, gave constant alarm to both rulers and people. The crops also were unusually light, and "it was a year of fear, perplexity and sorrow."

1651? December 13. "At a meeting of the five men,[1] it was determined that provision should be made upon the top of the meeting house, from the Lanthorn to the ridge of the house, to walk conveniently, to sound a trumpet or drum to give warning to meetings." (Bk. I, 37.)

1658–9, January 8. "At a town meeting, was voted that Samuel Grant should try and seal measures for the town."

"Also, that Peter Brown that keeps the mill should take but single toll, or the sixteenth part of all grain for his grinding; only of Indian corn it was voted by the Major part that he should take toll and half, from this time until the 25th of March next ensuing, but no longer."

"Also, that John Bartlett is to continue the keeping of the ferry, and is not to put in any man without the Townsmen's approbation, and the Townsmen are to see to the providing of some stones and timber to build him a cellar at the ferry house; and he is to pay the cost of it out of this ferry rate, and when he leaves the keeping of the ferry, or does not give honest content in the place, but the Townsmen must seek another, then he is to leave the cellar, and the town must give him for it as it is worth." (Bk. I, 37.)

1659, March 27. "The trumpet was sounded again to give warning to meeting." (Bk. I, 38.)

June 1. "Also this day, terms agreed upon about the tolls at the mill; Mr. Warham is to have the sixteenth part, or two quarts upon a bushel, of all English and malt grinding, and for Indian corn a twelfth part, or three quarts upon a bushel grinding." (Bk. I, 39.)

Dec. 10. "Also, it is granted by the town that Capt. Cooke shall have half the ordinary pay, in the next town rate, for seven young wolves taken out of an old one."[2] (Bk. I, 40.)

[1] The Townsmen previously appointed.

[2] Feb'y 16, 1659–60. Capt. Cook was again paid for "4 wolves." Judging from the frequency of similar items on the town records, the Captain, and his townsman Daniel Hayden, were the Nimrods of Windsor. They certainly made great havoc among the wolves of that neighborhood. Many years after the settlement of the country, these animals were very numerous and committed frequent depredations. As early as 1647, the General Court offered a bounty of 10*s*. for every wolf "killed within 10 miles of any plantation in this Commonwealth," which bounty was to be paid by the town in which the animal was killed, or by the nearest town. The earliest town act of Windsor, which is preserved in 1650, adds 5*s* to this 10*s* offered by the Court. This sum was afterwards increased, until 1667, when the whole bounty amounted to 25*s*. The Indians, likewise, were especially encouraged to kill wolves, for each of which they were to be paid 20*s* in wampum, at the rate of 6 pieces for a penny. Wolves were generally caught with baited hooks, or in pits dug for the purpose. In 1656, the Court decreed that "what person soever, either Indian or English, shall take any wolf out of any pit made by any other man to catch wolves in, whereby they would defraud the right owner of their due from the town or the country, every such offender shall pay to the owner of the pit 10*s*, or be whipped on their naked bodies not exceeding 6 stripes."

The following shows the names and number of the householders of Windsor, and the manner of their "seating" in the meeting house. It is extracted from an old Book of Rates:

January 18, 1659–60. "A note [was] taken what dwelling houses are in the town, that the owners of them have paid for seats in the Meeting house, and how much and by whom. For those that have been placed in the two rows of long seats were first seated by five in a seat, and were to pay to Wm. Buel 3*s* a person, or 6*s* for a man and his wife; and that made up his pay when he had finished them with doors. Also, those that were placed in the short seats at the first, were to pay 3*s* a person, as they in the long seats; but when it was agreed that those seats should be raised higher for more convenient hearing, they were to pay Wm. Buel 6*s* a person more, so that for a man and his wife 7*s*. First I set down those that have paid, and were placed in the long seats where they paid.

to keep the ferry over the Rivulet for one year from the 25th of March ensuing. He was to carry all who call from sunrise to evening. No one should have power to take the boat from him. He was to have "s [—] pounds" per annum in wheat, peas and Indian corn, in equal proportions. "He is to take pay of strangers that pass through the town, but he is not to receive pay for such as come about any business in the town, which are of Hartford or Wethersfield." "Also the town are to make a place fit for him to dwell in before the 25th of Dec., to be 10 feet in breadth and 15 in length. Also he is to have his wages brought in by the 8th of January next. Also if it should so fall out that the [house] be not ready by the time aforesaid, the town shall provide a house to put his corn in, and he is to attend two several days which shall be appointed to receive his wages, but if all his wages should not be brought in those two days aforesaid, then the townsmen are to cause the rest to be brought in. Also he is to have a penny for every single person that he shall fetch over in the [boat] but if he shall fetch over more than one at a time, he is to have but a half penny a person, and 2 pence for a horse, and * * * if he fetch them over the river. * * * * but if he carry them up to Mr. Warham's[1] he is to have 3 pence for a horse [and] man, except such as shall be employed in [public] service shall pay nothing. (Bk. I, 2, 3.)

May 5th. "At a meeting of the townsmen Mr. Clarke was appointed to sit in the great pew." (Bk. I, 5.)

Mr. Clark had been appointed a magistrate the year previous—and according to the custom of the day was honored with a seat in the "great pew," which was wainscotted and expressly designed as a place of special dignity.

October 8. "After lecture it was voted, by the inhabitants then present, that Mr. Warham should have £100 for his labours for this year ensuing, and for after time as the town shall see meet. Also Mrs. Hewit to have £20 the year ensuing." (Bk. I, 5.)

"Likewise the same, September 29th, 1652."

This annuity to the widow of their beloved teacher was continued from the time of his decease in 1644 to 1656 or thereabouts.

November 16th. "Samuel Eagelstone began to beat the drum to give warning to meetings on the Lord's days, twice in the morning seasonably, and once after dinner: and also on lecture days twice, and is so to continue for a twelve month following, and is to have 10*s* for his labours." (Bk. I, 6.)

1651–2, January 13th. "Articles of Agreement made between the Townsmen of Windsor the one party, and Thomas Parsons the other party, about keeping the passage over the Rivulet for one year, to begin on the 25th of March next ensuing, the date above written, and so continue until that time twelve months. His daily time, to begin to give his attendance, is by the rising of the sun, and to continue till the shutting up of the evening; and for any that shall have occasion to pass over in the evening after his day is ended, shall pay for one single person 1*d;* and if above one, 2 for a penny, and for a horse and man 2*d;* and for strangers that pass upon any occasion to pay a ha'penny a person, and for a horse and man 2*d;* and in flood time, when they go to the other side of the meadow, 3*d*, horse and man. Likewise Indians halfpence a piece. Only Hartford men are to pass free at all times, and on lecture days, and that come to lectures. He is to have a great Boat for horse, and a little canoe besides, delivered into his hands with chains for [them], and a lock for the great Boat; and he is to secure them, and deliver them up to the Town again when his year is out. And no man shall have liberty to take them for any use without his consent; also if any man have more than ordinary occasion in the morning before the sun rising, they calling, he shall help them over; also any that go about public occasions for country service, as Magistrates, Deputies, Jurors, to come free.

And in consideration of his labour, he is to have £18, for a year, paid in wheat, peas and Indian corn, besides what he gets by strangers: The corn in equal proportions, and to be brought into Thomas Parsons house: £9, on the 29th September next, and the other £9 in the beginning of March following. He is also to have a little house set up at the Town cost, 12 feet in length, and 8 feet in breadth — this is to be done by the 25th of March next, finished to his hand. In witness whereof we have inchangably set our hands."

senting the different deeds, either in full, or in abstract, just as we find them on the Land Records of Windsor; simply arranging them in the order of time, and connecting them by a slight framework of suggestions and notes. Thus we believe that, with the aid of the Map of Indian Purchases, the reader will be able, easily and satisfactorily, to trace out and comprehend the whole subject. In the construction of this map we have been greatly indebted to the researches and labors of our friend Mr. JABEZ H. HAYDEN, of Windsor Locks, Conn. Indeed, the outline, or skeleton, so to speak, of the chapter is his work; ours has been its arrangement and the elaboration of detail, in every step of which we have to acknowledge his aiding and guiding hand.

We have not thought it worth while to give the references to our extracts of deeds, &c. They are derived from the 1st and 2d Book of Land Records of Windsor. The first volume was carefully copied by order of the town in 1710–12. From the original, which is still in existence, altho' some what the "worse for wear" we have made our notes, supplying all lost words and passages from the better conditioned copy. The Indian signatures, having no uniformity, have no value as autographs, and are, therefore, not reproduced.

One fact is most conclusively proved by this array of documentary evidence, that the whole of Ancient Windsor was honestly bought, and even rebought, by our ancestors, of the native proprietors. A strict sense of justice actuated our fathers in all their dealings with the Indians, and so far as we can learn, no taint of dishonesty or overreaching rests upon the broad acres of Old Windsor.

I.

When the Plymouth Company erected their trading house at Matianuck, in 1633, they purchased "for a valuable consideration," from Sequassen and Nattawanut, "the rightful owners," a tract of land west of the Connecticut River. This purchase, extending from the great swamp near the bounds of Hartford on the south, to about a quarter of a mile above Mr. Francis Stiles's (the Ellsworth Place) on the north; bounded east by the Connecticut, and on the west extending "into the country as far as Sequasson and Nattawanut's proprieties," was the first land owned by the English within the present town of Windsor, and was transferred to the Dorchester settlers in 1637.

This whole tract was afterwards (July 14, 1670) repurchased by the town of Windsor, from Nattawanut's successors, Arramamett and Repequam. In this sale, which was probably a mere matter of confirmation, the lands are described as extending from Hartford to "Nassahegan's propriety already sold to the inhabitants of Windsor" (Poquonnoc), and from the Connecticut River running seven miles westward "into the wilderness." They were sold "with all the trees, woods, underwood, brooks, rivers, waters and ponds lying therein for a valuable parcel of Trucking cloth."[1]

The north line of this purchase is indicated on the accompanying map by a dotted line.

II.

The land described in the foregoing deed of confirmation as "Nassahegan's propriety already sold to the inhabitants of Windsor," was situated in the Poquonnoc District. It was bought some time in 1635, by William Phelps, Sen., who afterward, not being able to prove full payment of the same, honestly bought it over again. The transaction is thus detailed in a deed, dated March 31, 1665.

> "These presents testify, whereas there was a parcel of land purchased formerly by Mr. William Phelps, Sen., living at Windsor, about 30 years since, of Sehat, an Indian, a Paquanick sachem, and I [Phelps] not being able to prove full payment of the said purchase, in consideration whereof I now engage to make up the full payment by paying to the said Sehat's kinsman, Nassahegan, sachem of Paquanick, 4 trucking coats, or what upon agreement shall satisfy them to the value thereof. The said Nassahegan engaging to make said parcel of land free as shall be expressed from any challenge or demands for future time of himself, his heirs, or successors, or any other Indian or Indians whatsoever. And Coggerynosset, Sehat's son and his sister, and the said Nassahegan's own sister shall subscribe to the said premises. The said parcel of land is thus bounded, as

The Petition of Inhabitants on the east side of the Great River, 1680.

(Copied from the State Archives).

To The Honored The Gen^l Assembly of ye Colony of Connecticott now sitting in Hartford:

The Humble Petition of Sundry proprietors and Inhabitants of Lands on the East side of Connecticott River in the Townshipp of Windsor, Shows, et cetera.

That whereas by the good providence of God who hath appointed all men ye bounds of their Habitations, and his blessing upon us, your Petitioners. have their lands and many of us having dwellings on the East side of the Great River, and are increased to very considerable number of Persons. And there being a continual accession of families to that side of the River, likely yet more to increase the number of Dwellings etc; And it having pleased this Hon^l Assembly at a late Session to Grant an addition of five miles to our town, or former bounds, for ye Incouragement and accomodating of a Plan- tation there; and also to take notice by a committee (formerly) of the capacity of that place for such end, and were by their return well (assured) satisfied that with be aforesaid addition it would be well furnished both as to meadow and upland for a Particular township. Your petitioners by long experience having proved the difficulty of attending the Public Worship of God, at so great a distance from having the Great River always to pass, and that in every Great peril both by Storms in Summer and Ice in winter and finding it also impossible to have the weaker persons in their families along with them to the ordinances of God as is their duty and desire. And considering also how ready this Hon^d Court hath been to forward the wealth of the People in those and such like respects, we are upon these Premises both necessitated and Incour- aged Humbly to Petition the Hon^d Assembly to Grant that all those lands on the said East side Connecticott River, at present in the township of Windsor, may hence forward be a distinct and particular township; and that the In- habitants & Proprietors of those lands and that place may be by your authority invested with the Power and Privileges of a Particular township, or Planta- tion, for the Settling the Ordinances of God in his Public Worship there and the attendance of such other public occasions, &c. and duties as shall attend- ing to your regulations be put upon us — which as we hope will be much to the Glory of God, Our Edification with our family and beyond what we now enjoy so also an Increase of our outward prosperity and an Inabling us to be more serviceable to the Public weal of this Colony, which that we may obtain we shall for this Hon^d Court ever pray, etc.

(Collected from the private papers of its first pastor, Rev. TIMOTHY EDWARDS.)

The Covenant that those have owned that are under Church watch in ye Second Church of Christ in Windsor.

You do now sollemly in the presence of ye most Great and dreadfull God, the Holy Angells, and this Assembly, avouch the Eternall Jehovah, one God in three persons, ye Father, ye Son, and ye Holy Ghost, to be your God; viz, you Own him to be the Living and the true God, and desire to Choose him to be, & promise that by his grace you will Serve him as your God, by Seeking of, and waiting upon him for his grace in his Ordinances, and in the Constant and diligent Improvement of all his appointed means, and by faithfully and conscientiously endeavouring to avoid all Sin, and yield Obedience to all his Commandments. And you also acknowledge yt you are by nature Children of Wrath, being born into the World in a State of Sin and misery; and that there is no way to obtain Mercy, and Salvation, but Only by faith in the Righteousness of the Lord Jesus Christ, Who is the Eternall Son of God, and the alone Saviour of Sinners, in whom you desire to trust for eternal Life & Salvation and promise that by his grace you will above all earthly things Labour to make Sure of an Interest in his Righteousness and that he may be your Lord, and Saviour, that so you may be found in him, at the great day, and not in your Sins or your own Righteousness, And you also now Sollemnly promise and bind yourselves to Submit to his Government, In this Church, and by God's help to walk with his People therein in all things according to the Rules of the Gospell.

utterances of prayer, which sounded strangely amid these solitudes, they pursued their hazardous undertaking. After a wearisome journey of two weeks, through swamps and thick forests, over mountains and hills, across rivers and many streams of water which were passed often with great difficulty and peril, they reached their place of destination, the Connecticut river; but before all the company and their cattle could be transported across the river, the winter closed upon them. Winter setting in unusually early, the river was closed on the fifteenth of November, and as yet the vessel containing their household goods and provisions had not arrived, nor were there any tidings of it. The rude shelter and accommodations, which had been provided for themselves and their cattle, proved to be quite insufficient to protect them against the extreme inclemency of the season. They were able to get only a part of their cattle across the river, the remainder were left to winter themselves as best they could, on the browse of the trees, acorns and roots of the forest.

At this time (Nov. 26) a party of thirteen, driven by hunger and distress, attempted to return to Massachusetts, through the woods. One of their number fell through the ice and was drowned and the remainder would have perished "but that by God's providence, they lighted on an Indian wigwam."[1] As it was, they were ten days in reaching the bay. By the first of December the condition of the infant colonies on the river was perilous in the extreme. Many were destitute of provisions, those who were not, were unable permanently to relieve their neighbors, and the only alternative was to reach their vessel, which was supposed to be fast in the ice below. A company of seventy, of all ages and both sex, now set out in search, intending doubtless to winter on board the vessel. Shelterless and scantily supplied with food, they toiled on, day after day, through snows and storms, hoping at every turn of the stream to discover the wished for relief. Who can picture the sufferings of that painful march, or their inexpressible disappointment as they approached the sea, in not finding the vessel for which they were so anxiously looking. But God, in whom they trusted, was not unmindful of His suffering ones. A small vessel, the Rebecca, of sixty tons, which had attempted to ascend the river to trade, before the winter set in, had become entangled in the ice twenty miles from the river's mouth. Fortunately, a storm of rain came, which, though it drenched the sufferers, released the vessel, which came to their relief, and in five days they reached Boston. The few who remained in Connecticut through this fearful winter, suffered much, as did their cattle also, from insufficiency of both food and shelter. They literally lived on acorns, malt, and grains, with what food they could gain by hunting, and such as was given them by the Indians. Their losses were very heavy, that of the Dorchester people being as much as £2000 in cattle alone.[1]

In the month of March, 1636, Connecticut was set apart as a colony, under a commission, granted by the general court of Massachusetts, "to several persons to govern the people of Connecticut for the space of a year next coming." The commissioners named were Roger Ludlow and William Phelps of Windsor; John Steel, William Westwood and Andrew Ward of Hartford; William Pyncheon of Springfield; and William Swain and Henry Smith of Wethersfield.

With the first dawn of spring, April 16, 1636, those brave hearts who had survived the toils and exposures of the previous winter, again turned undauntedly their footsteps towards Connecticut. They comprised the largest part of the Dorchester church, with, as some say, their surviving pastor, Mr. Warham.[2] Their settlement, at Matianuck, was named Dorchester, in honor of the plantation from which they had emigrated, which name they retained until 1650 when it was changed to Windsor.

About the same time also, Mr. Pyncheon and others from Roxbury, Mass., settled at Agawam, now the city of Springfield. And in June following, came the venerable Hooker, with his companions from Cambridge, Mass., who settled at Suckiaug, now the beautiful city of Hartford, where a few settlers had "made a goodly beginning a little before." Wethersfield had been precariously settled in 1634, by a few who "managed to live" through the trying scenes of 1635–6.[3]

Such were the trials, exposures, hardships, and sufferings through which the first settlers of Windsor, the ancestors of many of the

BROWN ANCESTRY

Descendants of Peter Brown

Peter Brown of Plymouth and Dorchester, Mass., born in England about 1600; died in Plymouth, Mass., 1633; was one of the Signers of the Compact on board the Mayflower, 1620, was one of the seven which remained of all the Company of the Mayflower, able either to nurse the sick or to bury the dead, took charge of digging the graves and burying the dead of the Mayflower. Married (first) about 1623, Martha Ford, a widow and had 2 children, viz.: Mary and Priscilla; married (second) about 1628, Mary, and had 2 children, viz.: Peter and John.

He was admitted a freeman in 1633. Mary and Martha Brown, probably his wife and elder daughter, had divisions of cattle with him in 1627. It is supposed that his first wife was Martha, and that Mary and Priscilla were her daughters and the two mentioned by Governor Bradford as married in 1650. In 1644, the daughters were placed in the care of their uncle, John Brown, a leading citizen of Duxbury. Peter Brown died in 1633, before October 10, and his estate was settled by the court, Nov. 11, 1633. Administration was granted to the widow Mary. He had several children, among whom was Peter mentioned below:

BROWN

PETER^2, son of Peter^1 Brown, was born in 1632. He settled at Windsor, Conn., and lived to be nearly sixty years old. He died at Windsor, March 9, 1692, leaving an estate of four hundred and nine pounds to be divided among his thirteen children.

"Savage's Gen. Dictionary," Vol. I, A. C., also says that Peter, Plymouth, I suppose son of Peter of the same, born after 1627, as his name does not appear after the division of cattle that year, was with Gov. Bradford, with others among the first purchase of Dartmouth. Supposed to be the same Peter of New Haven.

The Order of the Court in the settlement of Peter^1 estate mentions his having had "divers children by divers wives;" Martha was probably his first wife in Salem, though he may have been married in England; Mary was his second wife and administratrix; he settled 15 £ on his two daughters, Mary and Priscilla; Mary was placed in care of John Dean, and Priscilla in care of Wm. Gibson, the remainder of his estate was devised to his widow, for the support of the young family; in 1644, Mary and Priscilla were placed with their uncle John Brown of Duxbury (Hinman, who collected the facts from W. R. Russell, Esq., Reg. Deed. and Old Colony Records).

Peter born 1632; married Mary Gillet, July 15, 1658; owned land in Windsor, in 1658-64; he died March 9, 1691/2, age 60; estate 409 £ 15s 6d.

BURT ANCESTRY

DESCENDANTS OF HENRY BURT

In my researches in English records I have found that the Burts were there an ancient family, their name being derived from the Anglo-Saxon word "beort," signifying "bright" or "illustrious." The earliest mention of the name I have found is in Bloomfield's great history of Norfolk county, where it is recorded that, in the year 1199, a manor in that county was granted to Sir Hamo de Burt which was alienated by his grandson, Sir Thomas de Burt, in 1290. I have found records of the Burts in several English counties, notably in Leicester, Dorset and Surrey, as also in London, and all in honorable connection, but to none of them could I trace our ancestor. Before leaving the English branch, I would mention the high character of Thomas Burt, the present member of Parliament for Morpeth, the first laboring man elected to that august body, and concerning whom you will hear more fully from our cousin, Mr. Henry M. Burt. I will add that the wife of the great German marshal, Von Moltke, was an English girl, Mary Burt, whose father, John Burt, had taken the marshal's sister for his second wife.

It appears from the early records of Roxbury, Massachusetts, that Henry Burt probably came to America in the ship James in 1635.

Whatever may have been Mr. Burt's original intentions as to the time of his moving to Agawam, they were suddenly decided by the burning of his Roxbury house, in September, 1639, and soon after that calamity he moved, with all his family, to the new settlement there, where he lived until his death, in 1662. He immediately took an active part in all the affairs, religious and secular. He was chosen one of the first selectmen, an office he held for several years; he was a member of the divers committees to lay out and allot the lands and "for the ordering of the prudential affairs of the Plantation;" he was elected "the Clarke of the Writs," an office analagous in its duties to those of our town and county clerks. In 1650, and at other times during a vacancy in the position of minister, he conducted the religious services of the town, entered in the list at a given price; so also of cattle, horses, swine, &c. An exception to this rule of listing occurred in 1675, when in raising the tax for the support of the rivulet ferry, it was thought more equitable to lay the tax on persons and such property as was to be the most benefited. The taxpayers were divided into five classes. The first class was headed "Family, horse and four oxen." Of this class there were 29. Of "Family, horse and two oxen," there were 42; of "Family and horse," 37; of "Only families," 15; "Single men," 24, of whom 17 owned horses.[1]

April 12th, 1654. There were four men chosen to take a view of the estate of the town for the year ensuing, according to the order of the Court.

David Wilton; Mr. Allen, Commissioners; Daniel Clark, Matthew Grant.

June 8, 1657. At a town-meeting there were chosen three men to take a list of the town estate according to order of court.

Mr. Wolcott, Commissioner; Mr. Terry; Mr. Hayden.

In this connection we present our readers with a curious piece of poetry composed by Governor Roger Wolcott, who not unfrequently amused himself in his leisure hours in "stringing rhymes."[1] It is entitled, "The List of Mr. Roger Wolcott's Rateable Estate in former daies."

Sparkish Listers, alias Misters that do take the List that you may here attend with feare and be exceeding whist

Acres of meadow land I've foure
But know withall it is but poor three quarters of one acre more have I to add unto the score

I have a horse, but he's so thin
His bones appear most threu his skin
A winter milks, and new milk kine
I like wise have and two poor swine.

A yearling calf, a pretty creature.
handsom in carriage and in feature another calfe I had last yeare but where he's now I cannot heare.

Which fills my heart with siths and groans,
for feare the croos have picked his bones,
he was so poor before he died
they gather gauped for his hide but now hee's gone both he and I
In sorrow both a Sympathy.

Pray take this for a perfect list for I think there's nothing mist that doth belong to my estate for which I ought to bear a Rate.

Besides their town organization, the first settlers of Windsor had, in connection with their sister plantations, Hartford and Wethersfield, a State organization, dating from the very first month of their permanent settlement in 1636. Simple and almost patriarchal at first, enlarged by degrees as necessity or experience dictated, established and defined by the wise and admirable Constitution of 1639, and perfected by the Code of 1650, this organization has gradually developed itself into a State Government, which, by its permanency and efficiency at the present day, does honor to the wisdom, the Christian integrity, and the political sagacity of those who framed it. Moulded as it was by the exigencies

[1] This morceau of gubernatorial poesy and humor, was copied by us from a diary or commonplace book kept by Timothy Loomis, whilom town clerk of Windsor, and is undoubtedly genuine.

ginning here, come next September is 40 years." Few men, indeed, filled so large a place in the early history of Windsor, or filled it so well, as honest Matthew Grant. His name figures in almost every place of trust, and the early records of the town show that his duties were always conscientiously performed.

The chimney viewer was a sort of primitive fire-marshal, whose duty was to carefully examine all the chimneys of the town at regular intervals, and to exact a heavy fine for any failure to clean them. Ladders were to be provided for every house, "or trees in place of ladders," and the frequent orders of the town upon this subject show that great care was taken to prevent any accident by fires. One of the earliest orders remaining upon the Windsor records is to this effect:

> "February 24, 1650. It was ordered by the townsmen that whereas there is a former order that there shall be a good ladder provided for each house to prevent damage by fire, it is now further ordered that all that shall be found defective the first of April next, not having a sufficient ladder to reach to the top of their dwelling house, shall pay the penalty of 12*d* per week for all the time they shall be defective."

There were fence viewers also, who were to examine the fences and to see that they were "good and sufficient." They were to protect fences as well as the lands and crops which they enclosed, against the "felonious entrance" of unruly swine and cattle, or the equally felonious but more subtle "intent" of dishonest neighbors.

> "At a County Court, holden at Hartford, Sept. 2, 1669: Present — Mr. Samuel Wyllys, Mr. John Allyn, Mr. James Richards, Mr. Anthony Hawkins, Assistants.
> "Nicholas Palmer complains of John Fitch for removing of his landmarks and setting them up again upon his the said Palmer's land, which was acknowledged and owned in court by said John Fitch. The court having heard and considered the complaint, do judge it to be an offence of an exceeding heinous nature, and that it ought to be duly borne witness against; and yet, in regard there is no law doth exactly determine what punishment shall be inflicted for such an offence, this court is willing to show what mercy they may in bearing witness against such evils, and therefore do adjudge John Fitch to be kept in prison 'till the first Monday in October, and then to be conveyed to Windsor, where the offence was committed, by their constable, and there to be publickly and severely whip'd, that others may hear, and fear to do any such wickedness."

> In "May. 1654. Mr. Newbury and Thomas Orton [were chosen] to view the fences on the south side of the river. Nicholas Denslow and Walter Fyler on the north side of the river."

Twin brother to the fence viewer was the pounder. Woe to the cattle of "high or low degree," who fell under the fence-viewer's condemnation, or were found innocently straying away from their proper sphere. All such were carefully and summarily jugged. The records of the town show that the pound was a very important public institution. In Matthew Grant's annual exhibit of town expenses, in 1661, is mentioned "for making 2 new pounds, £4;" and in 1675 "there must be pay ordered to make 2 new pounds, £6."

CONSTABLE

There were waywardens then as now, for we find many such records as this: "May 10, 1654, Goodman Moore and Samuel Gaylord were chosen to be surveyors of the highways for the year ensuing."

The office of perambulator, or bound-goer, was one in almost constant commission, owing to the frequent disputes between different towns relative to their boundary lines. And although it was no sinecure, yet it seems to have been held in high honor, if we may judge from the perquisites attached thereto. The item of "Liquor for boundsgoers" occurs year after year, among the town expenses, with almost unfailing regularity. In 1669 is charged, "Mr. Wolcott for liquors for boundsgoers," the small amount of 6*s.* 3*d.;* and the next year, "Mr. Wolcott for liquors going the bounds, 2*s*. 6*d*." In 1675 "Nathaniel Bissell for three days himself to run lines and a quart of rum demanded, 10*s*;" also, "John Bissell himself and horse 4 days east side of river 10*s*, and for 2 gallons cider he will have 2*s*."

February 14th, 1654. "Thomas Ford and John Strong chosen to be constables the next year. Also to go bounds or perambulation when Hartford men call, Matthew Grant, Jacob Drake, and Simon Wolcott."

February 16th, 1665. "At a town-meeting the capital laws were read. Also, Jonathan Gillet and Abraham Randall were chosen constables. Also, Thomas Buckland and John Moses way-wardens, and to go bounds with Hartford men, Thomas Stoughton, Nath. Loomas, Samuel Grant."

There were also collectors, or bailiffs; as, for example: Dec. 31. 1672. "Ebenezer Dibble was by town vote chosen for town Baylif for this year ensuing, to go forth when required by the townsmen to fetch in town rates of those that refuse or neglect to pay their rates when demanded, and the Baylif is allowed to take three pence upon a shilling for his pains."

The brander of horses was a dignitary of no small degree. First established by the General Court in 1665, in each town, he was not only to brand, but "shall make an entry of all horses so branded, with their natural and artificial marks, in a book kept by him for that purpose, who shall have 6*d* for each horse so branded and entered," and a penalty of £20! for every one who neglected so to do. The Windsor mark was the letter I. There is still in Windsor, a book kept by Timothy Loomis, whilom town clerk, containing all the marks, &c., of every man's horses, put down with a particularity which evidences the importance attached to it.

CONNECTICUT.

For severall good considerations moueing herevnto, It is now ordered and enacted by the General Court of Conecticut, this instant October, the seaventh, sixteen hundred and sixty.

1. That Capt. John Cullick, in behalf of his now wife and her children, shal from henceforth haue ful and free libertie to possess and improue the estate of George Fenwick Esq^{r}, lying in

From Col. Records of Conn. 1636-1665

As to what you write concerning o^{r} admittance of the Maquaes into o^{r} Townes, the enemie being so farr off of us, there will be no occasion for it; & we cannot engage for those upper townes of Springfeild, Westfeild, Northampton, Hadly & Hatfield, they belonging to anoth^{r} Colony. Yet we thinke at first it may be best, if the Mowhakes haue any occasion to com neer those Townes & are in want of prouission, that they send some small party to fetch such necessaryes as they want; & that a signe by your Hon^{r} be given & signifyed to the people there, by which they may be knowne; (some yallowe cloath may be best;) and that those that come may haue your Hon^{rs} certificatt with them; and we shall advice them to comply with the same; for we would not in y^{e} least giue any just occasion of prouocation to the Maquaes, whoe haue, euer since o^{r} first coming into these parts, carryed peaceably towards vs.

As for those Ind: your Honour mentions, which you haue sufficiently secured, as Caspechy &c., they, viz. Caspechy & som others are persons, as we are informed, whoe haue most perfidiously broken there written covenant wth y^{e} English, made since the warr begun, and don great spoyle upon them by fire & sword; & doubt not but your Hon^{r} will doe what is requisit therein.

The hazard of trauelling by land thorow the woods, in this time of war, when we cannot pass in any safty without a sufficient guard of men, [tho' the Dutch may,]* and the time being so short you allowed your messengers to stay, doth forbid us the sending of any fit person to wayt upon your Hon^{r} at this time; and hope that these o^{r} lines are so inteligable that you will fully understand o^{r} mindes, wthout any other messenger. We haue not to ad but y^{e} tender of o^{r} respects & the assurance that we are, Honrd S^{r}, Your affectionate neighbours & servants,

The Councill of Conecticott, &c.

At a meeting of the Councill, July 10, 1676.

Wm. Leet Esq. Gov^{r}; Mr. Willys, Major Tallcott, Capt. Allyn, Capt. Newbery, Mr. John Wadsworth.

A letter was sent to the Com^{rs} and millitary Com^{n} officers in Northampton, Hadly and Hatfield to inform them that we had received a letter from Major Andross, wherein he signifyed that there were about 300 Maquaes ready to goe out against the enemie, and desired to know where we would giue them enterteinment &c: and allso to advice them if they did come to their townes with signes &c. they should entertein them &c: as p^{r} the letter on file will appeare.†

* The words in brackets are crossed out, by strokes of the pen.

† Doc. 101. c. This letter (to Northampton, Hadley and Hatfield,) rehearses, in substance, the contents of Gov. Andross' letter and of the Council's reply; and advises the people of those towns," if the Mowhawkes com that way, to carry it so curteously towards them that they may not have any just occasion to be disgusted with you." &c. * * "The Govern^{r} sayth they have allready don great execution upon the enemie; the bearer of his letter sayth they haue kild & taken a 140: in his letter he sayth Caspechy & 15 more & some women & children haue deliuered themselues vp to him whome he hath sufficiently secured; what way of securety he hath taken we know not. The bearer sayth this Caspechy is on of Springfeild sachems, named Cogepeison." &c.

A letter allso to Mr. Fitch was sent to moue him to goe out wth o^{r} army next March: a coppy whereof is on file. And another letter to Mr. Buckingham, to desire him to goe forth wth the army, in case Mr. Fitch should fayle.

[Doc. 101. b.]

Reverend S^{r}. We are very thankefull unto you for your great & good service you haue don in marching along wth o^{r} army these two last expeditions, & we find your seruice so acceptable not onely to vs but to o^{r} souldiers that we should much rejoyce to find you willing to goe forth againe wth them next weeke, they being then to march agayne. But we doe allmost despayre of your grant; & we are not willing to command that service of you, least we should to much impose, not knowing how your occasions may be, and how prejudiciall it may be to you. Yet your assistance is so accommadating to the design & to all o^{r} officers & souldiers, that we doe propound it to you, that if you can ouerlooke the difficulties & march out agayne wth o^{r} army, as is propownded, it shall be very acceptable & contentfull to vs, & desired of vs. Please to consider of it, and if you can comply wth o^{r} desires herein, signify the same to vs by an express on Thursday next at farthest. We allso request your assistance in incourageing Moheags & Pequots to march out agayn, according to o^{r} desires in o^{r} letter to Capt. Mason. Not haueing els, we rest your affectionate freinds.

p^{r} order,

July 10, 1676.

John Allyn, Sec^{r}y.

For the reverend Mr. Fitch, at Norwich.

The Councill, being informed that through the good hand of God upon vs, o^{r} people of this Colony, haue bountifully according to their abillity, affoarded som supply for o^{r} brethren in distress in o^{r} neighbo^{r} Colonyes, haue thought meet to desire that o^{r} bretheren of Windsor would improue what they haue gathered of the good people there, to supply those in want that are removed by reason of the rage [of the] enemie into their towne: and y^{t} the remaynder of it be distributed amongst the people of Springfield in distress, and those upper townes, according to the good discression of Deacon Jn^{o} Moore, John Loomys, Jonath: Gillet Sen^{r} and Jacob Drake.

At a meeting of the Councill, July 13th, 1676: in Hartford.

Wm. Leete Esq. Gov^{r}; Mr. Sam^{ll} Willys, Major John Tallcott, Mr. Henry Woolcott, Capt. John Allyn, Capt. Benj^{m} Newbery, Mr. John Wadsworth.

The Councill ordered that Mr. Beltcher should haue liberty to purchase and transport a parcell of corn that Mr. Willson hath in his hands, which he hath giuen in for security for some the s^{d} Willson hath allready transported to Boston.

development in New England, where there was an institution to encourage it and where facilities were unexcelled, and the interest has increased year by year, gradually spreading over the whole country.

The limited time allowed for an epitome of the Society's history for ninety years does not admit of enlarging upon its many activities and the use made of its facilities.

Frequent energetic appeals for members have met with a gratifying degree of success, the present enrolment in all classes being close to 2500, less than two and a half per cent being noncontributory, a great contrast to the nonpaying contingent at the end of the first thirty-year period.

It seems hardly necessary for this audience to be told about our service to members and the public in general, in creating, enlarging, and maintaining a specialized library of some 80,000 volumes, unexcelled by any in the country, with its lending facilities for the benefit of nonresident members, and also about our monthly meetings, with the presentation of valuable historical and genealogical papers, as well as some of a more popular nature, many being illustrated by our own lantern equipment. There they are, behold and use them, and aid us in any possible way to carry on this great work, so that the one hundredth celebration, ten years hence, will see no recession from the standard maintained to the present time.

President Chase then, at 3.15 P. M., introduced Hon. James Montgomery Beck, whose address, given in full above, was broadcast through the courtesy of the Shepard Broadcasting Service, Inc., operating Station WNAC in Boston, the radio carrying the timely message of the distinguished speaker to all parts of New England and even beyond its borders.

The audience heartily applauded Mr. Beck's address; and at the conclusion of the broadcasting, at 4 P. M., the meeting was dissolved, and refreshments were served in the adjoining tea room.

DR. THOMAS STARR, SURGEON IN THE PEQUOT WAR AND HIS FAMILY CONNECTIONS

By Hosea Starr Ballou of Brookline, Mass.

Under the ancient oak at Newtowne (now Cambridge), Mass., on the Indian trail from Charlestown to Watertown, "The Governor and Company of the Mattachusetts Bay in New England" often held meetings three centuries ago. Opposite the present Kirkland Street, on the easterly side of Cambridge Common, a fitting stone tablet and a thrifty scion of the famous Washington Elm now mark the historic spot. There the freemen met in General Court at 1 P. M. on 17 May 1637. It was Election Day. Action also was to be taken on war against the Pequot Indians and on the suppression of Mistress Anne Hutchinson. Gov. Henry Vane presided. It was a turbulent meeting. Vane's bitter enemy, Rev. John Wilson, climbed up into the branches of the ancient oak to harangue the freemen of the Bay Colony. Wilson was John Winthrop's spokesman. Back to the Bay from the Pequot region came John Winthrop, Jr., to advocate the war against the Pequot Indians and by his vote to help his father to win. It was not so one-sided a contest as Winthrop's "Journal" represents. Winthrop, Deputy Governor for 1636–37 with Governor Vane, defeated Vane, Coddington, Dummer, and Hough, up for re-election, on 17 May. Winthrop was ready with plans, fully matured, to prosecute the war, which recent new English settlers from Watertown, Dorchester, and Newtowne to the Connecticut River Valley had already, on 1 May 1637, declared against the Pequot Indians. The full list of officers and deputies chosen appears in the first volume of "Records of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay in New England." Among them were Richard Bellingham, Roger Harlakenden, and Increase Nowell, who appear to have been mainly responsible "to send fourth the souldiers wch are more to be sent against the Pecoits," as the record reads, with power "to impress," in order that the expedition "may be sent fourth within ten dayes if possible." Capt. John Underhill of Boston, with nineteen men, had already been sent to Saybrook Fort. On 17 May the Court ordered: "Leift Howe to go leift to Capt. Patricke, Leift. Damfort to have charge of the armes & amunition, Srgent Tomlins to be gunnere, Will: Fuller gun smythe, Starr for chirurgeon." In 1637 Capt. Daniel Patrick, formerly of Watertown, lived at "Captain's Island" in Newtowne, Lieut. Daniel Howe was a deputy from Saugus (Lynn), and was one of four then chosen "for raising 50 men more to be sent fourth," Lieut. Damfort was Richard Davenport, who was a deputy from Salem, Sergt. Timothy Tomlins was a deputy from Saugus (Lynn), William Fuller was of Ipswich, and Dr. Starr, "chirurgeon," was Thomas Starr, surgeon, then in his twenty-second year, born in 1615 at Ashford, co. Kent, England, son of the distinguished surgeon, Dr. Comfort Starr (1589–1659), with whom the young surgeon was living on the estate at what is now Harvard Square, Cambridge, which his father had bought of William Pantry (Peyntree). Probably he witnessed the tumult near-by, under the ancient oak on Cambridge Common.

Already at a Court on 18 Apr. 1637 £600 had been appropriated, and a levy made for 160 men from the Bay. The quota by towns, including men who had already gone, follows: for Boston 35, for Salem 24, for Ipswich 23, for "Saugust" (Lynn) 21, for Watertown 10, for Dorchester 17, for Charlestown 16, for Roxbury 13, for "Newtowne" 12, for Hingham 8, for Weymouth 7, for "Newberry" 6, for Marblehead 4, and for Medford 4—a total of 49 more than the 160 called for; but it is said that when Rev. John Wilson was made chaplain, instead of Rev. John Eliot, none of his Boston congregation would serve.

There is no complete list of soldiers in the Pequot War of 1637, such as exists for other American wars. We even know who served in the "First Encounter" with the Indians at Great Meadow Creek, 8 Dec. 1620. In 1920 the present writer assisted at the dedication of a bronze tablet there bearing their names, erected after three centuries.

With Dr. Thomas Starr as surgeon, Captain Patrick's company of forty or fifty men appears to have started overland for Providence in the Narragansett country more promptly than was expected by the General Court on 17 May. By 20 May it is probable that they assembled on the same spot, under the ancient oak on Cambridge Common, as John Oldham (perhaps) in 1634 and William Pantry's Hartford Pioneers had done in 1635, and as Rev. Thomas Hooker's followers had done in 1636, and began their march along the Indian trail through Watertown and through the lower reaches of the Charles River Valley. Then, turning southwest by the great domain of Rev. William Blaxton, the first English settler of Boston, at Lonsdale on the Blackstone River, and passing over the ford, they proceeded southerly to Roger Williams's new plantation at Providence.* From Providence Captain Patrick sent a messenger to Captain Mason, who had come by boat from the Connecticut River to the so-called "King's Province" (organized 23 June 1636 by Joseph Dudley, John Winthrop, John Fones, and associates), on the west shore of Narraganset Bay, in Miantonomah's domain, asking Mason not to proceed on the expedition until he arrived. It is known that Mason received the message on Wednesday, 24 May. Captain Patrick hurried south by Prudence Island, which Canonicus, the friendly chief of the Narragansetts, had given or sold to John Oldham. But Captain Mason disregarded Captain Patrick's "orders," left his boats, and, with Captain Underhill and his twenty men from Saybrook Fort and his Indian allies, marched overland to the Mystic stronghold of Sassacus, the Pequot sachem. Thereupon Dr. Thomas Starr and Captain Patrick's company went on board Mason's vessels and sailed for the Pequot River.

On Friday, 26 May 1637, the English expedition aimed a terrific blow at the war-thirsty Sassacus. Surprised in the night, his Indian fort on the right bank of the River Mystick, near Long Island Sound, was burned, and the Indian warriors, together with their fleeing squaws, were ruthlessly slaughtered. The Pequot loss was six hundred to seven hundred. The loss to the English was only two killed and about twenty wounded. Casualties among the Indian allies of the English (about seventy Mohegans, two hundred Narragansetts, and two hundred Nyanticks) are not reported. Captain Patrick's company helped to rescue Mason's men from three hundred Pequots. John Winthrop wrote to Plymouth on 28 July 1637 that John Galop in his shallop carried their "wounded to ye pinnas, wher our cheefe surgeon [probably Dr. Starr] was, with Mr. Willson being about 8 leagues off."*

"About one Month after the Fight at Mistick" of 26 May 1637, says Captain Mason, Capt. Israel Stoughton of Dorchester, with about one hundred and twenty men, arrived in the Pequot River from the Bay. Already the remaining Pequots had "fled towards Manhattance" (Manhattan, New Amsterdam). After conference in Pequot Harbor the English concluded to pursue them. Near Quinnypiac (New Haven) the Pequots were found encamped in a great swamp. Mason relates that he and Captain Patrick and Captain Trask met in "Council," and he names one "Sergeant Thomas Stares" and "Ensign Danport" as there. Few Indians in the swamp were slain, but many broke through Captain Patrick's quarters, says Mason, who adds: "The captives we took were about One Hundred and Eighty; whom we divided, intending to keep them as Servants, but they could not endure that Yoke." In Stoughton's report to Governor Winthrop he asks for himself a particular Indian squaw, "the fairest and largest that I saw amongst them . . . for a servant." It appears by his letter, that, when Stoughton asked Winthrop for her, he already had given her "a coat." Indian men and boys taken captive were separated from their families, and were taken in 1637 by Capt. William Pierce in his ship, the Desire, of Salem, to Providence in the Bahamas, and were sold as slaves. There four years later, in 1641, Spaniards killed Capt. William Pierce.

Of some three thousand Indians in the Pequot region in 1636, Captain Mason reported that after the Pequot War only "about One Hundred and Eighty or Two Hundred" were left. Of these, said Mason, Onkes (Uncas), the Mohegan sachem, took eighty, Miantonomah eighty, and Nyigrett, sachem of the Nyanticks, the balance. Sassacus, sachem of the Pequots, fled to the Mohawks, and "they cut off his head." The victors seized the Pequot lands.

Capt. John Mason, Lieut. Lion Gardiner, and Capt. John Underhill, all eye-witnesses, wrote detailed reports of the Pequot War, as did also Rev. Philip Vincent, an English traveller, perhaps then on Long Island Sound, under date of 9 Nov. 1637. Vincent says that the Pequots, with bows and arrows, hatchets and knives, as their feeble weapons, could not successfully "encounter white men with their hot-mouthed weapons, which spit nothing but bullets and fire." Governor Bradford, in his "History" (pp. 218–226), helps to visualize the background. The reader is referred to those five narratives, varying in their personal bias, and also to two letters written from the vicinity of Windsor, Conn., by Mr. Jonathan Brewster, one of 6 July 1635 to Plymouth and the other of 18 June 1636 to John Winthrop, Jr., who was then at Saybrook Fort. Earlier explorations, before 1633, by Mr. John Oldham, in the Pequot region are matters of tradition. See also a letter of Thomas Prence, President of the Commissioners of the United Colonies, from Plymouth, 13 Sept. 1661, to Rhode Island (Rhode Island Records, vol. 1, p. 451), and a letter from Roger Williams in 1636, printed in 1846 in Collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Third Series, vol. 1, pp. 159–161.

On 3 Aug. 1637 Sir Henry Vane, with Lord Lay, sailed from Boston for England, and Vane retired to his quiet retreat, "Belleau," in Lincolnshire.

Meanwhile the Bay forces were returning by water to Boston, where they arrived 26 Aug. 1637. Dr. Thomas Starr had been in the Pequot country about three months. Now he returned to his father's home, the house built in Newtowne (Cambridge) by William Pantry (Peyntree) in 1633, in front of the present Wadsworth House. In 1910 the cellar walls of that Pantry-Starr house were shown to the writer as excavation for the Cambridge subway was going on.*

*Aside from Dr. Thomas Starr, we find only one other surgeon in the Pequot War. Lion Gardiner mentions "Mr. Pell" as surgeon with the Connecticut soldiers—Mr. Thomas Pell of Saybrook Fort and New Haven, no doubt, who, at the age of twenty-two and a "tailor," sailed in the Hopewell from London in April 1635 and reached Boston in June. In 1637, at the age of twenty-four, possibly Pell was referred to by Winthrop as "cheefe surgeon," then with Mr. Wilson of the Boston church. About 1646 Thomas Pell married the widow of Francis Brewster of New Haven. "Surgeon Thomas Pell," 1613–1669, was of the same family as John Pell, 1643–1703, of Pelham Manor, N. Y., says Howland Pell.

*See the location of the Pantry-Starr house as shown on a blue print of the Boston Elevated Railway (Plan No. C-11841) and a photograph of the wall taken by the present writer in 1910. Since the writer's comments on William and Margaret Pantry were printed in 1910 and 1926 (Register, vol. 64, p. 73, and vol. 80, p. 131) it has been discovered that they were married 25 Nov. 1619 at Willesborough, some three miles east from the Comfort Starr home at Ashford, co. Kent, England, and that the bride's name was Margaret Wibourne. It may be significant that Dr. Comfort Starr's brother, Mr. Jehoshaphat Starr of Canterbury, owned real estate at Willesborough.

BRIGADIER GENERAL LUCIUS BARNES BARBOUR, B.A.

By Harold Clarke Durrell, Historian

Lucius Barnes Barbour, of Hartford, Conn., elected a resident (annual) member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society 2 October 1907, was born at Hartford 1 February 1878, the only son of Gen. Lucius Albert 9th ~~and~~ Harriet Elizabeth (Barnes) Barbour, and died at Fenwick, in Old Saybrook, Conn., 29 July 1934.

He was eighth in descent from Thomas[1] Barber, who came to New England in the Christian in 1635, aged 21, probably lived for a while at Dorchester, Mass., took part in the Pequot War, and settled finally at Windsor, Conn., where he died 11 September 1662; and the line of descent of Lucius Barnes Barbour from Thomas[1] Barber to John[6] Barbour of Canton, Conn., and from John[6] Barbour on may be found in the memoir of his father, Gen. Lucius Albert[8] Barbour of Hartford, a resident member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society from 4 May 1904 to his death at Hartford on 6 November 1922 (Register, vol. 78, pp. 98–99).

The subject of this memoir attended the public schools of his native city, was graduated at the Hartford High School in 1896, and entered Yale, where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1900. From 1914 on he was secretary of his college class.

On leaving college he embarked on a business career which extended over some thirty years, in the course of which he was called to many positions requiring executive ability of a high order and a thorough knowledge of finance. He was treasurer (1901–1903) and secretary-treasurer (1903–1906) of the Hatch & North Coal Company, president and treasurer (1908–09) of the Baker Electric Company, vice president and treasurer (1909–1923) of The Edward Balf Company, contractors in paving and concrete work, and office manager (1924–1928) and special partner (1928–1931) of Roy T. H. Barnes & Company, dealers in investments and securities. He was also treasurer (1925–1929) of the Hartford Dispensary, and a director of Landers, Frary & Clark of New Britain, Conn., the Riverside Trust Company, the Barnes Associates, Inc., and the American School for the Deaf. He retired from active business in 1931.

He served his native city as a member of the Council (1905–1907) and a member of the Board of Aldermen (1908, 1909).

Interested in military affairs, he enlisted in 1911 as a private in Troop B, Connecticut Cavalry, was commissioned a second lieutenant in the First Regiment of Infantry in July 1913, was soon promoted to be a first lieutenant, and in 1915 was commissioned a captain. In 1916 he returned from sick leave in order to train his company and recruit it to full strength for service on the Mexican border. But before his regiment left for the border he was taken seriously ill and was sent to a New York hospital, where he underwent the third in a series of surgical operations. The hospital surgeon, however, refused to certify him as fit for active service, and he resigned his command. After the United States entered the World War he was commissioned, on 2 November 1917, a captain in the National Army, and was assigned to the staff of the Provost Marshal General in Washington, D. C., for special work connected with the selective draft. He was honorably discharged on 3 May 1919, and was commissioned a major in the Officers' Reserve Corps. In the two-years administration (1921–1923) of Everett John Lake as Governor of Connecticut he served on the Governor's staff as quartermaster general, with the rank of brigadier general. From 8 March 1920 until 31 January 1922, when he gave up this command, he was major, commander of the First Company, Governor's Foot Guard, and in this capacity he had charge of most of the arrangements for the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization.

On 1 July 1911 official recognition was given to Mr. Barbour's interest in the preservation and publication of the public records, especially the vital records, of the State by his appointment as assistant State librarian and first permanent examiner of the public records of Connecticut. Through his persistent efforts a great improvement was brought about in the methods employed by the town clerks in continuing and preserving the town records, and in the last twenty years of his life he was able to do much to promote the publication, under the auspices of various historical and patriotic societies in the State, of the vital records of several Connecticut towns. He copied many such records and also the inscriptions found in scores of Connecticut graveyards, in many cases visiting all the known graveyards—great and small—in a town. Highly appreciative of the work done by the New England Historic Genealogical Society in collecting and preserving genealogical records for the public benefit, he served from 1913 on as a member of the Committee on Epitaphs and of its successor, the Committee on Epitaphs and Records—he was chairman of the latter committee from February 1934 until his death, and he gave to the Library of the Society copies of thousands of his inscriptions from Connecticut gravestones, many of which have been published in the REGISTER. His generous gifts of such records to the Society entitle him to a place among the Society's notable benefactors.

Besides his membership in the New England Historic Genealogical Society, Brigadier General Barbour was a member of the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of Connecticut (of which he was genealogist, 1916–1921, and registrar from 1921 on), the Order of Founders and Patriots of America, the Society of Colonial Governors, the Society of Sons of the American Revolution, the Connecticut Society of Sons of the Revolution (of which he was registrar from 1922 on), the Society of the War of 1812, the Military Order of Foreign Wars, the Military Order of the World War, the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society (of which he was a corresponding member from 1929 on), the Connecticut Historical Society, the Connecticut Committee of the American Historical Research Fund, the Hartford Oratorio Society, the Farmington Country Club, and the Fenwick Golf Club. He was enrolled also in the higher orders of Masonry and was a member of the South Congregational Church of Hartford.

He married, 2 October 1901, Charlotte Cordelia Hilliard, daughter of Elisha Clinton and Alice Cordelia (White) Hilliard, who, with two children, Lucius Hilliard Barbour of Hartford and Mrs. Moreau D. Brown (Alice Cordelia Barbour) of New York City, survives him.

Catalog of Names of Puritan Settlers in Col. of Conn. [A-D]

INTRODUCTION AND HISTORICAL FACTS.

It is calculated that about one-half of the present population (exclusive of foreigners who have come to New England, since 1800,) are the descendants of the Puritan settlers of the four first Colonies in New England. A large portion of the present population, within the old bounds of the Colony of Connecticut, have some curiosity to learn, who their first ancestors were in this country; where and when they landed; what was their condition to live in the wilderness, surrounded by savage men, more dangerous to their future welfare than the beasts of the forest.

The object of the compiler, is to issue six numbers, revising the five numbers before published, depending as little as possible, upon tradition, but upon the Town, Church, Probate, Colony and Court Records, in different towns in the Colony, and giving to the public the names of the first settlers who located in the Connecticut Colony; the ships they came in, where landed, their standing and condition in life, as far as discovered.

Most of the settlers of New England, previous to 1700, came first into the Plymouth or Massachusetts colonies, and those who afterwards settled in Connecticut, removed from those two colonies. Many of the first settlers of Connecticut remained several years at Watertown, Newtown and Dorchester, in Massachusetts, before they removed to Connecticut. And it is yet quite difficult, from all the records discovered, to settle the point satisfactorily, what town was first settled by the white people in this colony. I am inclined to believe there is little question, that the first Dutch people were at Hartford, before any English settlers were at either Windsor or Wethersfield. Both the English and Dutch claimed to have been the first discoverers of Connecticut River, and both purchased lands on the river. Mr. Winslow probably had information of the river before the Dutch, yet it appears from history that the Dutch had erected a fort at Dutch Point, in Hartford, probably with the intention of holding the lands on the river, and as a trading-house. The best evidence is, that this was as early as 1633. Gov. Winslow and Mr. Bradford visited Gov. Winthrop to induce him to join with the Plymouth Colony in a trade with the Indians in Connecticut, in 1633, and erect a house for this purpose. Gov. Winthrop declined the offer of uniting, and gave his reasons for so doing. The Plymouth people, Dr. Trumbull says, "determined to undertake the enterprise at their own risk." In 1633, "John Oldham and three others with him," travelled through the woods to Connecticut, to view the country and trade with the Indians. It appears by Dr. Trumbull's account of it, that the Dutch were located at Hartford, when Capt. William Holmes of Plymouth, with his vessel and company, with a frame and materials for a house, went up the river. The Dutchmen stood by their cannon and ordered Holmes to strike his colors, or they would fire upon him: Holmes assured the Dutch he had a commission from the governor of Plymouth to go up the river, and he must (and did) obey his orders. And the house was erected in Windsor, in October, 1633, and fortified against the Dutch and Indians by palisadoes.

Dutch

These facts show that the first white men, located settlers on the Connecticut, were the Dutch at Dutch Point, in Hartford, as early as October, 1633, and were there when Capt. Holmes went up the river with his company, to erect a trading-house at Windsor. Windsor appears to have been the first town settled by the English, and Wethersfield was probably the next, but it is by no means certain that the English were not in Hartford, nearly at the same time they were at Windsor and Wethersfield. We find Nicholas Clark the joiner, sent to Hartford by John Tallcot, Sen., to build him a framed house in Hartford, in 1635, a year previous to Mr. Hooker and his company removing to Hartford. (See Note A in Appendix.) Nicholas Clark is found at Hartford one of the first settlers, and a son of John Talcot, Sen., wrote these facts in his manuscript copy of the first history of Hartford, which is now, and ever since has been, in possession of his descendants. Nicholas Clark in the summer of 1635, built the kitchen part of the house, and in 1636, the upright part adjoining the kitchen, &c. This he could not, or at any rate, would not have attempted to do alone or with a few men, if surrounded by savages and wild beasts. I am inclined to believe that these three towns had many inhabitants in each of them, as early as 1635.* The first Court Record now preserved, was held at Newtown, (Hartford,) April 26, 1636: this was about two months before Mr. Hooker and his company of Hartford settlers started upon their journey for Hartford. Yet we find the five Judges were chosen from the three new towns, Dorchester, Newtown, and Watertown, and appointed a constable for each of the three towns: not only so, if there had been no white English population before 1636 in Hartford, Mr. Hooker would not have brought his delicate wife on a litter, upon men's shoulders, from Massachusetts to Connecticut, when he had no house provided for her, on their arrival.

In 1621, and for many years after, all the settlers for New England landed in the colony of New Plymouth, or Massachusetts, and emigrated from thence to Connecticut. For several years after 1635, there were no settlements by

* Dr. Trumbull, under date 1636, remarks, "as soon as the spring advanced, and the travelling would admit, the hardy men began to return from Massachusetts, to their habitations on the river." Vol. I. page 64. It may be inferred from this remark that many settlers in the three towns on Connecticut River, had been the year previous, and built houses, and had returned to their families in the autumn of 1635, and returned to Connecticut in the spring of 1636. The first Court held in Hartford, was upon the 26th of April, 1636, and Mr. Hooker and his company did not start for Hartford, until June, 1636. Trumbull's record, and Winthrop.

the English in Connecticut, except in the towns of Windsor, Hartford and Wethersfield, and a few at Saybrook. In 1634, some of the Watertown settlers came and erected a few houses in what is now Wethersfield. (Mr. Weeks in his manuscript claims Wethersfield to be the oldest town on the river.) In 1635 the congregation of Mr. Wareham, at Cambridge, settled upon moving to Connecticut, and some few had come to Windsor, and made preparations to move their families. The people of Watertown also many of them moved to Wethersfield, and the people of Newtown were preparing to move to Hartford in the spring of 1636—though some had come in 1635. John Winthrop, a son of Gov. Winthrop, of Massachusetts, arrived at Boston in 1635, as agent for Sir Richard Saltonstall and others, for the purpose of erecting a fort at the mouth of Connecticut River, and was appointed by the Company, (whose agent he was,) Governor of the River Connecticut, for one year after his arrival. He soon built the fort and erected houses—which was the commencement of the building and settling Saybrook. Many of the Dorchester people who had settled in Windsor, occupied land near the Plymouth trading-house—this greatly disturbed Gov. Bradford, as the Plymouth people had purchased the land of the Indians, and taken possession of it by building their trading-house upon the land. About October, 1635, the Dorchester people commenced moving to Windsor; about 60 men, women and children started through the wilderness with their horses, cattle, swine, &c., without roads, bridges, or even huts to cover them, sleeping in the open air—but they arrived safely, though the journey was long and tedious. Much of their provisions and household furniture had been sent round by water for Dorchester, (Windsor,) and were cast away and lost. The sufferings in the Colony in the winter of 1635 were most severe;—their provisions failed, and bedding lost, so that many to save life returned to Boston for the winter. But those who remained in the Colony through the winter came near perishing by famine, notwithstanding all they could procure of the Indians and get by hunting. Much of the winter they subsisted on acorns, roots and grains. Many of their cattle died.

Reason for leaving Mass

In the spring of 1636 the emigration began again in companies from Massachusetts to Connecticut, and sent their provisions by water. In June, 1636, the Rev. Thomas Hooker, Mr. Samuel Stone and about one hundred others, of all ages and sexes, started through the wilderness, guided only by a compass, to Hartford—with no cover but the heavens, and no lodging but the ground, and subsisted on the milk of the cows which they drove with their other cattle, numbering one hundred and sixty in all. They carried their packs upon their backs, and their arms for protection in their hands. Mrs. Hooker was so feeble in health that she was carried the whole journey upon a litter, and they reached Newtown (Hartford) in about two weeks. In September, 1636, as many of Mr. Warham's people had moved to Windsor, he started for Windsor to take charge of his church, but left his family at Dorchester, until he could prepare to receive them; so that at this time the three towns upon the river were permanently settled by many inhabitants, with Mr.

Warham in charge of the church at Windsor, Mr. Hooker and Mr. Stone at Hartford.

Rev. Mr. Philips who had been the minister for the emigrants to Wethersfield, at Watertown, Mass., did not remove to Watertown, Conn., with his people. Mr. Mather and Mr. Warham had amicably agreed with the church at Dorchester, that Mr. Mather should remain with the church at Dorchester, Mass., and Mr. Warham should remove with such of his church as preferred to remove with him to Dorchester, Conn. All emigrants to Connecticut firstly came to some one of the three old towns on the Connecticut River: indeed after the first settlement at New Haven, some of their emigrants, passed from Massachusetts by land, on the track made by the Connecticut settlers from Boston to Hartford.

Dorchester became WINDSOR →

It will be recollected by the reader, that Mr. Warham and Mr. Hooker had been ordained, one at Dorchester, and the other in Newtown, in Mass., before they and their churches moved to Dorchester and Newtown, in Connecticut. They gave the towns where each resided in this Colony the same names of the towns from which they had removed; Hartford was called Newtown—and Windsor, Dorchester—and Wethersfield, Watertown. But at the General Court of the Colony, in February, 1637, (as time is now reckoned,) they gave the several towns their present names.

It will be discovered then, that here were three towns located in the wilderness, with a large number of inhabitants, (as many must have come into the colony, before either of the churches moved as a colony) without any law to govern them, either civil, military, or criminal; and the principles and much less the practice and forms of an independent government, in a great measure unknown to men who had been educated under the crown of England and had learned only to obey. The first year (1635) no courts were organized, not even a town organization formed, and much less any thing like a General Court formed to enact laws and punish offences. The officers of the several churches governed their own members according to the rules and discipline of the church; and as no other law existed in the Colony, all offenders, if any were tried before 1636, must have been tried by the Mosaic law, by the churches. But as the law of Moses made no provision to punish a white man for selling a gun to an Indian, it therefore became necessary that some civil body of men should be so organized as to enact such laws as would prevent or punish offences not provided for in the Bible. The placing of fire-arms in the possession of the Indians was considered one of the most culpable offences in the Colony, which endangered not only the property but the safety and lives of the English settlers. At this time it was discovered that Henry Stiles had traded a gun with the Indians for corn. Therefore on the 26th day of April, 1636, a court was organized by five of the best men in the Colony—whether they constituted themselves a court or were elected by the people, the record gives no account. The Court consisted of Roger Ludlow, as chairman, and Mr. Westwood, John Steel, Andrew Ward, and William Phelps, as his associates. The first act of the Court was to try Stiles for the offence. He was found guilty, and ordered by the Court to regain the gun from the Indians in a fair and legal way, or the Court should take the case into further consideration. The Court then enacted a law, that from henceforth no one within the jurisdiction of the Court should trade with the Indians any piece or pistol, gun or shot, or powder, under such penalty as the Court should see meet to inflict. This was the first court, the first trial, and the first law ever enacted or had in Connecticut.

As the members of the court resided in the three towns before mentioned, they assumed the power (as no law had been enacted by them, and the Mosaic law had not provided for it,) to appoint and swear constables for Dorchester, Newtown and Watertown, for the then ensuing year, or until new ones should be chosen. This it appears was considered by the Court as an organization or incorporation of the three towns. For many years after, and long after the Confederation of Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield, all that was done by the General Court to incorporate a plantation or town, was to appoint and swear a constable, and the remainder was left to the inhabitants of the plantation to finish its organization or incorporation. Even as late as 1662–3–4, in many of the towns upon Long Island, also at Westchester, where they were claimed by the Colony, or placed themselves under the government of Connecticut, a constable was appointed or approved by the General Court, and the towns at once became liable to be taxed by the Colony, and had the privilege of being represented at the General Court. The Court thus formed for the trial of Henry Stiles was continued from session to session and from year to year, and was called "The Corte, a Corte, in May, 1637, it is recorded 'Generall Corte,' April 11th, 1639, called 'General meeting of the Freemen,'" (The Court of Election.) The day the Charter (which bears date April 23d, 1662,) was publicly read before the people of Connecticut, to wit, October 9, 1662, it is recorded the "General Assembly," (under the Charter.) Here the reader will see that the origin of the present General Assembly of the State of Connecticut was the formation of a Court of five men, in 1636, to try Henry Stiles criminally, (without law,) for selling a gun to an Indian.

Windsor

The General Court soon discovered the propriety of adding a House of Representatives to the first Court formed in 1636, particularly upon great occasions. Therefore in May, 1637, the several towns were represented at the General Court by the name of Committee, by three from each town—and took their seats with the magistrates who had previously constituted the Court. The object at this time of enlarging the number of the General Court, was an event which has never been surpassed in importance to the Colony or State since. It was whether they should declare war against the most warlike and powerful tribe of Indians in New England. The future safety of property and life in the Colony depended upon the result. The Pequots had stolen not only the property of the English, and murdered some of the inhabitants, but had abducted from Wethersfield two young ladies, and carried them among the Indians by force. But not to add to this interesting narrative further. The General Court, feeble as the inhabitants were in numbers, and deficient in means, trusted in God for the result, and boldly declared war against the Pequots. Ninety men were ordered to be raised—munitions of war were at once prepared,—Rev. Samuel Stone was selected as Chaplain for the little but valorous army. They went down Connecticut River in three small vessels, with Captain Mason as commander, (and to be brief,) they met the enemy at the Mystic Fort; and though the colonists lost two, with sixteen wounded, they fought like men who were fighting for the future welfare of the Colony—for the lives of their wives, children, and their own lives and property. When all was closed nearly six hundred Indians lay dead upon the battle ground—about sixty or seventy wigwams burned to the ground, and the Fort in ashes. So valorous and complete was the victory that the Pequots became extinct as a nation. Sassicus fled with a few of his warriors to the Mohawks; others united with other tribes, particularly with the Mohegans.

It will therefore be seen that what is now styled the Senate, originated, as has been stated; and the formation of the House of Representatives originated in the necessity of having more councillors in the declaration of war against the Pequot Indians. After which meeting of the Committee, in 1637, the Committee met in the General Court as the House of Representatives, and the two houses were styled the Commissioners and Committee until after the union of Windsor, Hartford and Wethersfield, in 1639, when the government was formed by adding a Governor and Deputy Governor. The Upper House was styled the House of Magistrates, and during 1639 the Lower House retained the name of Committee; but in April, 1640, the Lower House, or popular branch, was styled the House of Deputies.

From the organization of the General Court in the Colony, in 1636, to the confederation of the three towns upon Connecticut River, in 1639, being three years—there was no other court in the Colony, except the Particular Court of 1637, which did little business. The General Court took cognizance of divisions in churches—of all criminal offences—of all civil matters—the appointment and confirmation of all officers in the jurisdiction—declared war—regulated commerce—formed and governed the militia;—indeed every thing in the Colony came under their supervision. They ordered that no young unmarried man unless a public officer, or he kept a servant, should keep house alone, except by licence of the town, under a penalty of twenty shillings per week; and that no head of a family should entertain such young man under a like penalty, without liberty from the town. The object of this law probably was, to compel early marriages, to aid in settling the colony, and to prevent their keeping bad company.

As early as 1640, the General Court intended that the inhabitants should measure their apparel by the length of their purses—the court being the judges. The constable in each town was ordered to take notice of all persons, and if he judged any person exceeded their rank and condition in life, in their attire, to warn them to appear before the Particular Court to answer for the offence. All excess in the price of labor, in 1640–41, was expressly forbidden by law. All artificers and other laborers were priced, as well as the labor of horses and oxen. Most of the penalties attached to the criminal laws, were accompanied with flogging and pillory; so much so that a law was enacted in 1643, which made it imperative upon all the towns on Connecticut River, to appoint a whipper to do execution upon offenders.

As Massachusetts and Plymouth were settled a few years earlier than Connecticut, and had become somewhat organized as a government, many of their laws were copied into the code of laws enacted by Connecticut. Labor and dress were regulated by law in those colonies before it was in this. Their laws upon these subjects were much more severe than in this jurisdiction. They had a law that ladies' dresses should be made so long as to cover their shoe buckles. They prohibited short sleeves, and ordered the sleeves to be lengthened to cover the arms to the wrists. They forbid by law, immoderate great breeches, knots of ribbon, broad shoulder bands, silk roses, double ruffs and cuffs. Even as late as 1653, John Fairbanks was solemnly tried for wearing great boots. He was acquitted on trial. The colonies were poor, and it appears the object of the law was to prevent all kinds of extravagance, and to compel the inhabitants to govern their living, strictly by their means.

As there were no printing presses in the colony or country in the early settlement of Connecticut, the laws enacted at each session of the General Court, were promulgated to the inhabitants of each town, by copies of the laws being made out by the Secretary of the Colony, and sent to the constables of each town, and read by them at public meetings to the people. This inconvenient practice was continued in the Colony nearly forty years, until 1672. This year all the laws in force were prepared and sent to Cambridge to be printed, and bound with blank paper interspersed in the book, to enter laws which should be afterwards enacted. It was a small folio. The book is now a curiosity of ancient days. Its introduction to the public is vastly better fitted for Watts' Psalms, than a code of laws. After the book was printed, the General Assembly ordered that every family in the Colony should have a law book. The blank pages in the book were not filled until nearly thirty years after. The New Haven Colony at a much earlier period, procured a code of laws to be printed for that Colony, of about one hundred pages, entitled "New Haven's Settling in New England, and some Laws for Government; published for the use of that Colony." This early and first volume of laws was printed in London, for the New Haven Colony. I know of only two copies extant of the edition of five hundred that were printed.—RECORDS OF CONN., WINTHROP'S JOUR., DR. TRUMBULL.

1 GILLETT, Jonathan, with his brother NATHAN came to Dorchester, Mass., with Rev. Warham, and (both) to W. with the first emigration (see p. 157, Vol. I). Both he and his wife were members of the orig. D. and W. ch. (O. C. R.); D. W. P. thinks that he probably d. 27 Feb., 1697–8; O. C. R. says: "Jonathan, Sen.," d. 23 Aug., 1677, and in its list of persons taken into W. ch. "and are now living" (the date of this Rec. is Dec. 21, 1677) is mentioned "Wid. Gillett." The Rec. in Gillett-Holcomb Bible, referred to below (see, also, Note, p. 290), says "Father Gillett dyed in 1667." There is still extant, in the possession of a Windsor family, a copy of the Geneva edition of the Bible, of 1599, commonly known as the "Breeches Bible," because the fig-leaf garment made by our first parents in the Garden of Eden, and which in the King James's Version is called apron, is herein given as breeches. This Bible was brought to New England by this Jonathan Gillett, Senr, and afterwards passed into the hands of the present Holcomb family, prob. through Lois, who was the daughter of Jonathan Holcomb by his second wife, Wid. Mary Gillet, whom he married 28 June, 1721. Lois Holcomb, b. 5 July, 1748, was married July, 1772, to Noah (father of Perly, father of Dea. Anson) Cooley of North Granby, Conn. In the family, this Gillett-Holcomb Bible was familiarly known as the "Bear Bible," because it was once, in the olden days, placed in a window to keep the sash raised, when a bear, endeavoring to effect an entrance, clawed it, leaving the marks of his claws so deep upon the edges of its leaves, that they are still very plainly to be seen. In this Bible occurs the following manuscript record: "My father Gille[tt] came into new-inglan the secon[d] time in June in the yeare 1634 and Jonathan his sonne was born about half a yeare aftur he cam to land." [The italics are ours.] A jar now in possession of Mr. Norman F. Stoughton of So. Windsor, was, it is said, "brought over" by the first Jonathan Gillett. It is white with blue lines, 6 inches in height and 7 inches in diameter. Ch.:

a factory and repair shop at Grafton, until 1889, when he came to Bellows Falls, Vermont, where he has since that time been in the same line of business. In 1913 he had been in the carriage-making business for sixty-one years. He has an excellent plant at Bellows Falls, stands high in the business community and is a well known and highly respected citizen. In politics he is a Republican.

He married, November 23, 1852, Lucy Ellen Gowing, who was born at Grafton, Vermont, September 17, 1833, and died February 24, 1895, a daughter of Levi S. and Mary Ann (Davis) Gowing. They had one son, George Dexter, born at Grafton, Vermont, October 16, 1853, who was admitted to partnership by his father, when he was a young man, and who has continued in the firm, the name of which is George N. French & Son, to the present time. George Dexter French married, December 1, 1880, Minerva Ann Walker, who was born December 10, 1856, in Grafton, a daughter of Metcalf and Mary Ann (Ayers) Walker. They have one daughter, Marion Walker French, born January 23, 1896.

GILLETTE Jonathan Gillette or Gillett, the immigrant ancestor of this family, was with his brother Nathan, of the company of one hundred and forty Puritans from the counties of Devon, Dorset and Somerset, England, sailing with Rev. John Warham and Rev. John Maverick, as pastors, in the ship "Mary and John," March 20, 1630, and locating at Dorchester, Massachusetts. Both he and Nathan came with Mr. Warham with other Dorchester men to form the settlement at what is now Windsor, Connecticut, about 1636. He had a lot seventeen rods wide, near John Warham's lot, and opposite Alexander Alvord's. Jonathan and his wife Mary are included in the list of church members made by Matthew Grant, thirty-seven years after the settlement, among "the twenty-one members who were so in Dorchester and came up with Mr. Warham and are still with us." These members were privileged, having paid six shillings, to sit in the long seats of the meeting house. Jonathan contributed four shillings six pence to the fund in aid of the settlers at Simsbury and Springfield, who had suffered from Indian raids, and he was one of a committee to distribute the fund. He died August 23, 1677, and his wife died January 5, 1685. Children: 1. Cornelius, married Priscilla Kelsey. 2. Jonathan, married (first) April 23, 1661, Mary Kelsey, who died April 18, 1676, (second) December 14, 1676, Miriam Dibble, who died April 18, 1687. 3. Mary, married Peter Brown. 4. Anna, born December 29, 1639, married, October 29, 1663, Samuel Filley. 5. Joseph, baptized at Windsor, July 25, 1641, settled at Deerfield, killed in King Philip's war; married Elizabeth Hawks. 6. Samuel, born January 22, 1642. 7. John, born October 5, 1644; married, July 8, 1669, Mary Parker. 8. Abigail, baptized July 28, 1646, died in 1648. 9. Jeremiah, born February 12, 1648; married, October 15, 1685, Deborah Bartlett. 10. Josiah, mentioned below.

(II) Josiah Gillette, son of Jonathan Gillette or Gillett, was baptized at Windsor, July 14, 1650, died January 23, 1735. He married, June 30, 1676, Joanna Taintor, born April, 1657, died October 29, 1736, daughter of Michael Taintor, of Branford, Connecticut. He removed in 1702 to Colchester, Connecticut, where he was one of the first settlers. Children: Josiah, mentioned below; Joanna, married, October 28, 1680, Josiah Strong; Elizabeth, born January 16, 1682; Jonathan, June 28, 1685; Mary, March 8, 1687; Dorothy, April 15, 1689; Samuel, October 1, 1690; Joseph, March 3, 1695; Mindwell, February 4, 1696; Aaron, March 8, 1699; Noah, December 5, 1701.

(III) Josiah (2), son of Josiah (1) Gillette, was born November 24, 1678, at Windsor, died October 14, 1742, at Colchester. He married, March 7, 1711, Sarah Pellett. Children, born at Colchester: Daniel, born February 2, 1714, settled in New Haven county; Josiah, December 7, 1715; Sarah, June 24, 1717; David, June 13, 1719; Elizabeth, April 15, 1721; Timothy, mentioned below; Charles, April 22, 1728; Esther, November 24, 1734.

(IV) Timothy, son of Josiah (2) Gillette, was born at Colchester, June 27, 1723. He was a soldier in the revolution (p. 471, Connecticut Revolutionary Rolls), in the company of Captain Jonathan Buttolph, of Southwick. The regiment marched to New York in August, 1776, the Eighteenth Connecticut. Isaac and Levi Gillette were in the same company and may have been sons, doubtless were near relatives. Timothy Gillette settled at Granby, Hartford county, Connecticut. In 1784 he came from Granby to Wilmington, Vermont. He married Lydia Waters. Children: Timothy, mentioned below; Oliver, Lydia, Deborah, Sylvia.

(V) Timothy (2), son of Timothy (1) Gillette, was born in Connecticut about 1758. It is possible that the record of revolutionary service described above belongs to him, instead of his father. In 1790 there was but one Timothy Gillette living in Connecticut and none in Vermont, according to the first federal census. Timothy Gillette, of Granby, Connecticut, had in his family one male under sixteen and two females. In the same town we find reported in this census as heads of families, Joab, Oliver, Nathaniel and Nathaniel Gillette Jr. These were doubtless of the same family, and perhaps some of them were brothers of Timothy Jr. If the census is correct, Timothy removed after 1790 to Wilmington, Vermont. He married Beulah Fitch. Children: Fitch, Waters, mentioned below; Calista, Elliott, and one who died in infancy.

(VI) Waters, son of Timothy (2) Gillette, was born at Wilmington, Vermont, December 7, 1801, died July 7, 1892. He married, June 28, 1832, Brittania Whitney, born October 18, 1805, died September 8, 1885, daughter of Moses Whitney (see Whitney VIII). DISTRIBUTION OF HOME–LOTS OF THE FIRST SETTLERS OF ANCIENT WINDSOR.

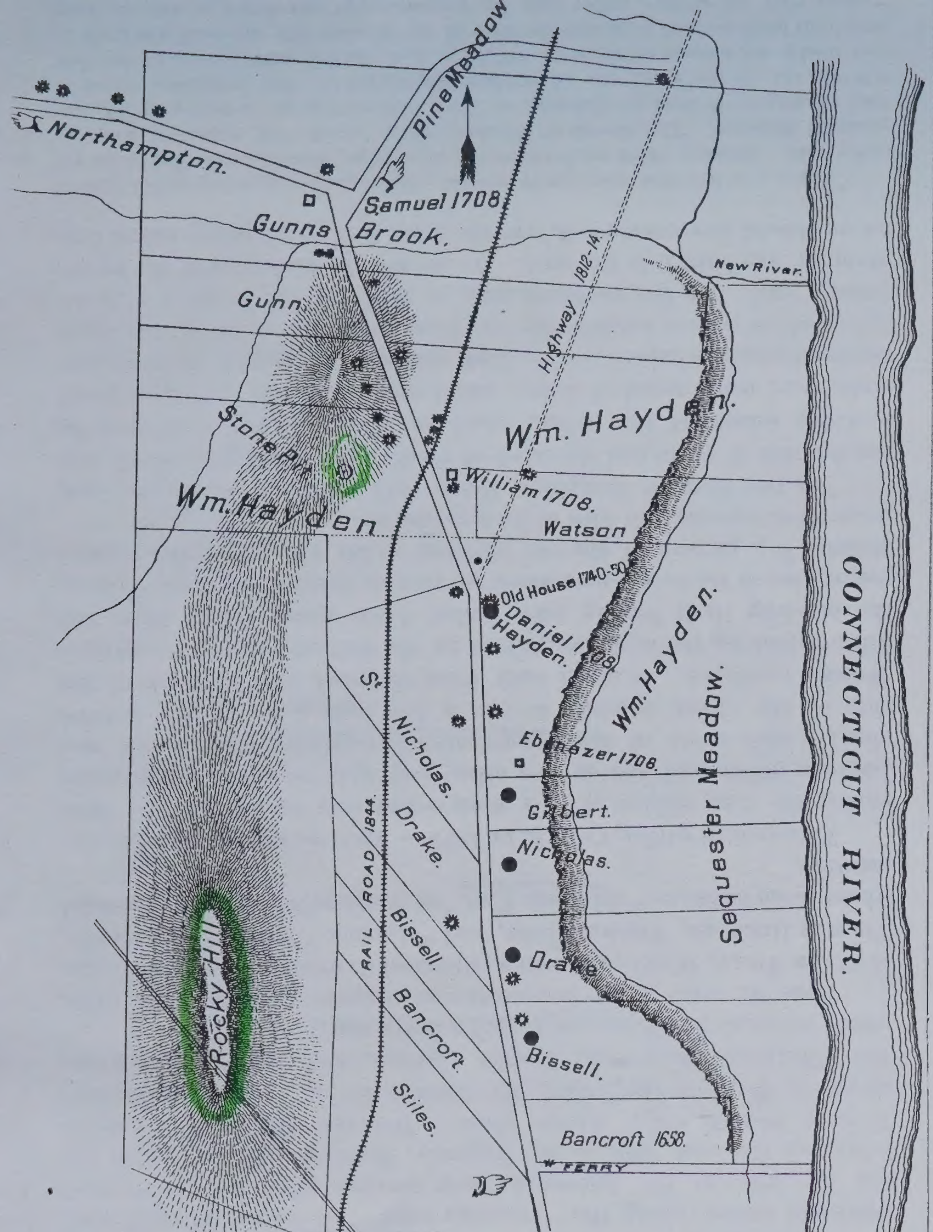
We here present a list of early Windsor settlers and the location of their home-lots, by Mr. JABEZ H. HAYDEN, comprising his full notes of the article upon this subject, which he prepared for the Hartford County Memorial History (1883), and containing a large amount of detail necessarily omitted in that work. It contains the matured results of his thirty years' investigation of the subject, since the publication of our original history; and forms a reliable list of all those persons who can be traced to Windsor before 1650. Most of these names appear upon the Windsor Land Records, in Matthew Grant's Old Church Record, Colonial Records, etc., etc. Removals are taken from land records, town histories, and a hundred incidental sources of information. The History of Dorchester is voucher for those "who came up hence," and who are designated in the following list by the letter D. The dates given do not absolutely mark the coming of the families to Windsor, but give the time of their first appearing upon the records. Doubtless some who were among the very first settlers bear date later than 1640, through their neglect to "bring in" a description of their lands to the recorder at that time. The map shows the position of each person's home-lot; the list gives its breadth, whether set off by original grant or by purchase, its transfer to successive owners, etc. All genealogical details have been referred to the genealogies in another part of the work, which should be carefully studied in connection with this list.

(The grants made to these settlers of lands on the East side of the Great River, and at Pine Meadow, will be noted in another portion of this volume.)

ALEXANDER, George, in 1644, bo't Jasper Rawlins' place, S. E. fm the Old Mill: res. there until 1655; then sold to William Filley; and name disappears from records.

ALFORD (Alvord), Alexander, 1645, bo't lot, W. of Thos. Barber; length 66 r., 18 r. wide; sold, 1654, to Josiah Ellsworth, who sold to Cornelius Gillett, 1658 (known, 1859, as the Oliver S. Gillett pl.). Jonathan G. (formerly Warham) had a lot W. of Alvord on the W. side where A. was 52 r, S. S. W. by the Mill Brook. "Alexander Alford hath granted by virtue of purchase his home Lott six acres, more or Less, ye bredth is Eighteen rods, bound West and norwest by John Warham & there is in length fifty Two rod, bounds E.S.E. by Thomas Barber, and is there in length Sixty-six rods on N.N.E. bdd by John Helier." "Also, six acres of Swamp on the Mill Brook in length by ye bank (threscore): [ ] rods, in bredth at the S—— Twelve rods in ye midst twenty rod, bds S. by John Drake."

"Also, by Gift from his Father Richard Voar, in the woods forty-two acres, in length six scoore rod, in bredth fifty-seven rod — bd S. by Jonathan Gillet, N. by Thomas Bascomb." [No date.]



Map of Haydens
WINDSOR Conn. 1645.
by Jabez H. Hayden. Sept. 2nd 1885.

EXPLANATORY KEY TO THE MAP OF "HAYDEN'S."

(This map was prepared for and used in The Hayden Genealogy; and its author, Jabez H. Hayden, has reluctantly consented to my using it in this History, in deference to my earnestly expressed opinion that it possessed interest to a much wider circle of readers than those of the work named. —H. R. S.)

The five black balls mark the sites of houses in 1645, viz.: St. John Nicholas, "a person of note," sent over funds, had lands taken up in his name, and this house built, but never came to occupy it. It was sold soon after by his attorneys to John Drake; was evidently a temporary structure, and is not heard of again. Thomas Gilbert also sold to Drake, and thenceforth (probably before 1650) Bissell, Drake, and Hayden owned all of Sequestered Meadow, and (with exception of Bancroft) appear to have been the only families in the neighborhood during the first two generations.

The three hollow squares mark the homes of three of the grandsons of William Hayden; and about the date of their erection, the fourth grandson occupied the original homestead; and there were no other families between or beyond them during that generation.

The first star designates the site of the late Levi G. Hayden's house. Beyond this, westward—until recently—there were but three houses; thence the road runs across The Plains, 5 miles to Suffield.

The second star: House built 1737 by Samuel Hayden; once a famous tavern; the white oak which overshadows it was doubtless of respectable age when the forest was cut away around the (then) new house. Its present owner, Lucinda H. (daughter of Levi) Hayden, celebrated here her 90th birthday, 26th September, 1891. When she was 2 years old she saw her great-grandfather, Deacon Nath'l Hayden, æ. 94; and he, when 4 years old, saw his grandfather Daniel, born 1640, who saw the beginnings of the settlement!

The third star: Site of the once famous Pickett's Tavern, now tenantless.

The fourth star: House built about 1770, by John Hayden; now a tenant-house.

The fifth star, near the angle of the road: A brick house built by Capt. Nath'l Hayden before the Revolution; now occupied by his grandson, Samuel B. Hayden.

The sixth (double) star, Haydens' Chapel, owned by the First Congregational Church of Windsor, erected by the residents of this locality.

The next two stars, on the hill, west, and two stars on east side of the road, mark houses built by parties who located here because of the railroad facilities between Haydens' and Hartford.

The next two stars, on the hill, on west side of road, belong to the family of the late Moses Allen, and are of older date.

Below them a circle marks the Stone-pit, or Hayden quarry, from which was taken the gravestone of Rev. Ephraim Huit, 1644—probably the first gravestone put up in New England, any bearing earlier dates having been more recently erected.

The three stars opposite mark the present railroad station.

The next star designates a house on the site (designated by a square) of house occupied, 1708, by one of the grandsons of William Hayden; this was built by Bildad Phelps, 1780, and now owned by Henry Osborn.

The star further east of Osborn's marks a house built about 1830 by James Drake, which has had frequent changes of occupants; and small lot, bounded northerly by Grant, west by Gaylord, southerly and easterly by the Palisado Common.

The star at extreme upper right hand corner of the map, on the same road, marks a house built about 1840 by the late Nath'l L. Hayden, and still occupied by his family.

Having completed our survey of the Palisado, we pass out at the northeast corner, along the "common road"[1] or "Main Street," tracing the lots of the following early settlers (the houses of most being on the east side of the highway, between it and the river), THOMAS DEWEY, Capt. AARON COOKE, WILLIAM HOSFORD, NICHOLAS DENSLOW, Mr. STEPHEN TERRY, Mr. GEORGE HULL, THOMAS BUCKLAND, Dea. WILLIAM ROCKWELL, JOSEPH CLARKE, and ROBERT WINCHELL, where we come to the present Bissell's Ferry road.

Then we come to the home-lots and residences of JOSHUA CARTER, WILLIAM TILLY, WILLIAM HANNUM, RICHARD SAMWAYS, PHILIP RANDALL, THOMAS HOLCOMB, THOMAS GUNN, and "Ancient" THOMAS STOUGHTON, whose stone house, or "old Stone Fort," as it was called, deserves a special mention.

This ancient edifice, (which, in 1859 — while we were engaged in preparing the first edition of this work — was only remembered by Miss Lucretia Stiles, and one or two other very aged persons,) was situated about a mile north of the Congregational meeting-house, on the east side of the street, opposite to and a few rods north of Mr. Lemuel Welch's residence. It stood back from the road, near the brow of the hill overlooking the meadows, where an old well still marks the spot,— the building itself having been pulled down about 1809. From the description of the before-mentioned old people, living in 1859, we "reconstructed" a picture of the old building which will afford the present generation a pretty fair idea of its appearance.

The Old Fort, or Stoughton House, was composed of two portions, one builded of stone and the other of wood. The stone part, which was probably somewhat the oldest, stood parallel with the road, and its walls were constructed of heavy, uncut stones, pierced with two small diamond-paned windows, set in lead, and with numerous lurking portholes, which peeped suspiciously out from under the eaves of the high-peaked roof. At the northern end, or gable, of the house, a gigantic chimney was built into the wall. At the east, or back part of the house, as we should now consider it, was the door, framed of heavy oaken tim-

[1] Roads, which at first were barely passable, were located where they could be most easily built. Streams which needed bridging, or swamps, were to be avoided at the expense of distances. The records of Windsor, under date of 1656, define the street or road running north from the Palisado, as "four rods wide as far as any house lots are laid out, viz., to the upper side of William Hayden's lot." The serpentine course of that road is not because of swamps; but, as each of the first settlers north of the Palisado built his house and barn near the brow of the meadow hill, the road was built to accommodate the settlers, rather than the generations of travelers who were to come after them.

Witches in Windsor. — In relation to this subject, I venture to reproduce an article which I contributed to the Hartford Evening Post of July 29, 1885.

SIR: I have seen frequent allusions in your paper, of late, to "Windsor Witches"; and I wonder not that this is a subject of great interest to your Hartford gentlemen. Being myself of Windsor and Hartford descent, and being, withal, much given to antiquarian researches, I have the best of reasons for knowing that, for the past 250 years, the Hartford witch-hunters have taken genuine delight in the pursuit of Windsor witches. And, indeed, it could not be otherwise; for to my knowledge and to yours, Mr. Editor, so winsome have ever been the features, form, and manners of the genuine Windsor witches, that no one, knowing the nature of man, could blame the men of your town for going beyond "Hartford bounds" in the pursuit of such fair game And knowing, as we do, Mr. Editor, the virtue, discretion, and "faculty" (to use a good old New England term) of these Windsor witches to be equal to their other charms, we can better appreciate the life-long joy, peace, and domestic bliss which many a Hartford man has ensured to himself by securing and domesticating one of them. And, since the genuine breed is by no means extinct in Windsor (as I have had ample means of judging within the last few days) I wonder greatly at the folly of some who are now trying to dig up a specimen more than two hundred years old. Surely this (when one of the present generation, sixteen years old, is so much more bewitching and satisfactory in all her winning ways) is a wilful despising of "the good which the gods provide." It somewhat reminds me of Bunyan's "man with the muck-rake," moiling and grubbing amid the dirt and cast-off rubbish of the earth, and totally unobservant and blind to the brightness and beauty of the world around him. Still, as such a "witch-hunter" is now afield with his rake, and seems disposed to produce for our inspection a very shabby and altogether doubtful specimen of the witch-genus, which he would credit to Windsor, I feel impelled in defense of the good name of the real witches of that goodly town to examine the evidence.

In The Connecticut Post of August 11 and 18, 1883, under the headings of "A Witch of Windsor," and "Our Witch Histories," appeared a couple of articles which, as we believe, affixed a most unjust stigma upon that ancient town. The writer having chanced upon a hint that one Mary Johnson, who was executed at Hartford about 1648 for witchcraft, was a resident of Windsor, proceeded to "interview" Rev. Mr. Wilson, the present pastor of the old church of Windsor; and getting but little satisfaction from that gentleman, he wandered into the Windsor graveyard, apparently expecting to find therein the gravestone of Mary Johnson as proof of his theory. He found it not, but fortunately for his proposed article, he found enough quaint and interesting epitaphs to enable him to reel off a column or more on general antiquarian topics. In the succeeding week's issue (the 18th) he returned to the charge with another column of matter about the old gallows-tree at Hartford, the indictment and trial of Mary Johnson, and some remarks on the literature of Connecticut witchcraft, all treated in the usual loose, disjointed fashion of such sensational articles. The totally irresponsible character of this "interviewer" of Mary Johnson's ghost is especially manifest in his statement that "Dr. Stiles, in his history of Connecticut, deliberately asserts that there were no trials nor executions" for witchcraft in the State. We may remark that Dr. Stiles wrote the history of Windsor, not of Connecticut; and that he made no such statement as the above. Rev. Dr. Trumbull, however, in his history of Connecticut, said that "after the most careful researches, no indictment of any person for that crime, nor any process relative to that affair, can be found."

Our own immediate business, however, is not with the general subject of witchcraft in Connecticut, but with the statement which endeavors to fix upon Windsor the equivocal honor of having been the residence of this Mary Johnson.

We call then upon the Hartford "witch-hunters" to prove that Mary Johnson belonged in Windsor.

"Mary Johnson, for theuery, is to be pr'sently whipped, and to be brought forth a month hence at Wethersfield, and there whipped." See the records of a court held August the 21, 1646, in Trumbull's Public Records of the Colony of Connecticut, Vol. I., p. 143.

No better proof is needed that her home was at Wethersfield, and not at Windsor.

Was Mary Johnson the first person who was hanged as a witch in New England?

She could not have been hanged before the action of "the particular courte, this 7th December, 1648," which action is thus recorded in Col. Rec. of Conn., Vol. VIII., p. 171: "The jury finds the Bill of Inditement against Mary Jonson, that by her owne confession shee is guilty of familiarity with the Deuill."

Having fixed her home at Wethersfield, and fixed a date before which she could not have been hanged, her history, if it has not already been sufficiently told, may well be left to the witch-hunters of Hartford.

What authority can be found for the assertion that Mary Johnson, or any other witch, belonged in Windsor? None, so far as history goes, except in Winthrop's Journal, or Winthrop's History of New England (edition of 1853, Vol. II., p. 374; former edition, p. 307), as follows: "One [blank] of Windsor arraigned and executed at Hartford, for a witch." This assertion, without date, without name, without any statement of authority; not made at the time of the alleged occurrence, nor in the regular sequence of the journal, but in a blank space formerly left therein, by a writer in Boston, one hundred miles from Windsor, and wholly unsupported by contemporary records or statements, is all that has been brought against the good fame of Windsor in that respect. And we respectfully submit that it is no more to be accepted as historical truth than would be a similar charge made by a paragraph-writer in a Boston newspaper, under similar circumstances to-day.

What have others said about the "first case"? Dr. Holmes, in his American Annals (I., 345; second edition, I., 287–288,) under date 1648, June, says: "The first instance of capital punishment for witchcraft in New England, occurring in colonial history, was in this year. Margaret Jones, of Charlestown, was indicted for a witch, found guilty and executed."

It is evident that he considered Governor Winthrop's allusion to Windsor, a year earlier, as too vague to have any force or value; and who can say that he was in error?

Hubbard's New England (published by the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1815) page 530, says: "In June, 1648, one Margaret Jones, of Charlestown, was indicted for a witch, and executed for it."

Hutchinson (2d edition, 2 vols., published in London MDCCCLX) vol. I., page 150, says: “The first instance I find of any person executed for witchcraft was in June, 1648, Margaret Jones of Charlestown was indicted for a witch, found guilty and executed.” Drake, in “Annals of Witchcraft in New England, 1869,” refers to each of these three cases, but makes no comment on that mentioned by Winthrop against Windsor except: “No circumstances have been found, nor the name of the sufferer.” He puts it under the year 1646.

What was the dictum of Judge Savage in the case? In commenting on the vague statement of Winthrop, he said: “Nothing of this is found in the ‘History of Connecticut’ by Dr. Trumbull, yet it is deserving of melancholy commemoration as the first instance of delusion in New England, too soon infectious. We may presume the unhappy woman was tried as well as arraigned before execution, if the wretched ceremonies in such cases deserve the name of trial.” See Trumbull, I. 8, in preface, where he says: “After the most careful researches, no indictment of any person for that crime, nor any process relative to that affair can be found.” Perhaps there was sense enough early in the colony to destroy the record; but, at least, we know that in 1670 the court, after conviction of Catharine Harrison, of Wethersfield, for that capital crime, had firmness and cunning in their decision to dismiss her from her imprisonment, she paying her just fees: willing her to mind the fulfillment of removing from Wethersfield, which is that will tend most to her own safety, and the contentment of the people who are her neighbors. The Connecticut law, December, 1642, may be read in three lines of Trumbull's Col. Rec., I., 77, including the authorities from Exodus, Leviticus, and Deuteronomy. Massachusetts borrowed every letter and figure of the text and comment.

Returning to the subject, in his Genealogical Dictionary of New England, (II., 559, article Johnson), Judge Savage says: “The first person in New England guilty of the impossible crime of witchcraft, and executed at Hartford, was a Johnson of Windsor; and one of the most distinguished was Rev. Samuel Johnson, born at Guilford, 14th October, 1696, the first President of Kings College at New York, who died 6th January, 1772.”

In the same volume, page 568, he says: “Margaret Jones, the woman executed as a witch, 15 June, 1648, was the second example of such infatuation in New England, the first being at Windsor a year before.”

Wonderful wisdom. In each of the references he calls the Windsor case the first, though Winthrop had said no such thing. In the first he had learned the sex, and in the second the name of the person in question, though Winthrop had given neither, and though she whose name he gave belonged in Wethersfield, not Windsor. and was not tried, and so certainly not hanged, till six months after the well-authenticated case of Margaret Jones, the first, though Savage makes her the second. “Melancholy commemoration,” indeed! If he meant to class Rev. Samuel Johnson as “the most distinguished person in New England, guilty of the impossible crime of witchcraft,” he ought to have given some evidence of his guilt. If he really meant to call him the most distinguished of the Johnsons, he should not thus have grouped him with the most unfortunate.

Would not his purpose have been just as well served if he had charged upon Windsor the responsibility for Goodwife Elizabeth Johnson, who probably suffered in 1652 for committing one of the twelve crimes which were capitally punished under Connecticut laws. And who can tell which he really did mean? The anacronism is scarcely worse in one case than the other. And who can tell why all cases of offenders except for murder, under those twelve capital laws, should be called cases of witchcraft by the modern witch-hunters? Why did Judge Savage attempt to reverse the decision of those historians who had preceded him? Perhaps because they had left the introduction of witchcraft into New England to appear as a “Boston notion,” the trial and execution having taken place there; and he, a Boston man, desired to shift the doubtful honor upon the people of some other place.

A later historian, Rev. Samuel Orcutt, in his History of Stratford, Conn., gives a chapter on “witches and witchcraft,” in which (at page 156), under the heading, “Witchcraft in Connecticut — Authentic Records,” he repeats the erroneous statements already made.

Mather's Magnalia (Book six, chapter seven, “Thaumatographia Pneumatica,” or “Wonders of the Spirit World”), gives as the “eighth example” a history of Mary Johnson, which the Hartford witch-hunters have read in that book, but it is curious that he gives it no date; while his first example was that of the Greensmith woman in Hartford, who, in 1662, so troubled “Ann Cole, a person of serious piety,” that she could only be “happily delivered from the extraordinary troubles wherewith she had been exercised” by the execution of Mrs. Greensmith, or, possibly, as shown by the History of Stratford, by the execution of both Greensmith and his wife at Hartford, and the flight of the two others “from the country.”

Would it not be well for the Hartford witch-hunters to work out a full history of “Greensmith and his wife,” and of the “two others” who “fly from the country” in 1662; as well as of Elizabeth Seager of Hartford, who, in 1665, was found guilty, but escaped by an informality in the verdict,— before hunting too much in other towns?

They might then restore Mary Johnson to Wethersfield, look up her full history, and also that of Catherine Harrison, who, in 1670, was convicted, “but allowed to pay costs and leave the town.” It might also be pertinent to inquire if Dr. Savage was correct in his identification of Nathaniel Greensmith as the “husband” of the woman there executed for a witch in 1662; and to show, if he was not also executed, why his own conveyance of his property might not have been allowed, instead of appointing Mr. Samuel Willys, Captain Tallcott, and the secretary to convey it to Andrew Benton. The property can probably still be identified, and it would be pleasant to know if Benton or his successors have ever suffered inconvenience from the visits of the spirits of the witches to their former haunts?

When Hartford and Wethersfield shall have been fully worked, the experience there gained may help in the Windsor hunt. This ought not to be seriously difficult, for Matthew Grant, the first town clerk of Windsor, whose veracity has never been questioned, was in the habit of putting on record every occurrence which was of interest to Windsor people. If his records, either public or private, fail to show such facts, then the inference will be that no such facts existed; but if he did make such records, then we must accept them as true, even if they involve the best families of the colony.

H. R. S.

Since the above was written, I have heard that, upon the inside of the cover of a diary kept by Matthew Grant, and in his own handwriting, is an entry to the effect that, on a certain day in 1647, “Achsah Youngs was hanged for being a witch;” and that the date corresponds with about what would be the date intimated in Winthrop's entry in his Journal (Vol. II., p. 374) above referred to — which would seem to be from the context, in March, 1647, N. S. Such a record, by Matthew Grant, giving the name of the person executed, with a date fitting in with the imperfect record of Winthrop, would be quite conclusive; if our information as to the Grant record was fully satisfactory.

We know that a John Youngs bought land in Windsor, of William Hubbard, in 1641, which he sold in 1649; and thereafter disappears from record. He may have been the husband or father of “Achsah,” the witch; if so, it would be most natural that he and his family should leave Windsor.

It is but fair to admit, however, that there does seem to have been a "witch case" which may be fully credited to Windsor; and it was with the design of obtaining, if possible, more information about it that the above letter was written. In the lack of any further testimony, we proceed to tell what we know concerning the real Windsor witch case, which, however, dates as late as 1653–4, and therefore does not help the case of the "Hartford and other witch-hunters" who are trying to fasten the Mary Johnson case upon Windsor.

This "real, original," Windsor witch case, the author is happy to say, is intimately connected with the history of his own ancestry. The Stileses, never having had even a "family ghost" to prop their ancient greatness, can at least claim the honor of an ancestor killed by a witch! Smile not, gentle reader, at what to you may seem a singular and a trifling resting-point for family complacency. But hundreds of "high-born" families have held themselves above their fellow creatures, for successive generations, on much slenderer grounds of self-respect.

HENRY STILES, the eldest of four Stiles brothers who came to Windsor in 1635, a carpenter by trade, and a bachelor, was killed Oct. 3, 1651, at the age of 58 years, by the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of Thomas (son of Mr. Matthew) Allyn, of Windsor, and, as tradition avers (Pres. Stiles Mss.), "in a military Train waiting upon Gov. Winthrop when he was embarking for England to procure the Connecticut charter, which he obtained 1662." The records of the Particular Court (Vol. II., fol. 29), which met at Hartford on the first Thursday of December, 1651, contain the following proceedings of "The Grand Inquest upon the death of Henry Stiles,"— the jury being Edward Stebbins, John Drake, John White, Humphrey Pinney, Will Gibbons, Steph. Terry, John Moore, Anthony Hawkins, Richard Goodman, Peter Tilton:

"INDITEMENT OF THOMAS ALLYN.

"Thomas Allyn, thou art indited by the name of Thomas Allyn that not having that due fear of God before thine eyes for the preservation of the life of thy neighbor didst suddenly, negligently, carelessly cock thy piece, and carry the piece just behind thy neighbor wch piece being charged and going off in thine hand, slew thy neighbor to the great dishonor of God, breach of the peace, and loss of a member of the Commonwealth, what saist thou, art thou guilty, or not guilty?

"The Inditement being confessed, you are to Inquire whether you finde the fact to bee man-slaughter, or Homiside by misadventure.

"The said Thomas Allyn, being Indited for the fact, the Jury finds the same to be Homicide by misadventure.

"The Court adjudge the said Thomas Allyn to pay to the County as a fyne £20 for his sinfull neglect and careless carriage in the premises and that hee shall be bound to his good behavior for a twelvemonth, and that hee shall not beare Armes for the same terme.

"Matthew Allyn Acknowledgeth himself bound to this Commonwealth in a Recognizance of £10, that his sonne Thomas Allyn shall carry his good behavior for the spase of a yeare next ensuing."

Henry Stiles's inventory of estate was also presented to the same court, and distribution ordered.

Subsequently, as appears from the records of "A Particular Court, held at Pequott, 24th of March, 1653–4" (folio 51, same vol.) an attempt was made to fasten the blame of this accidental death of Henry Stiles upon witchcraft, and the following indictment was presented against one Lydia Gilbert, who was probably a member of the family of Thomas Gilbert, of Windsor.

"Lydia Gilburt, thou are herein indited by that name of Lydia Gilburt, that, not having the feare of God before thine eyes, thou hast of late years, or still dost give Entertainment to Sathat[an], the great Enemy of God, and mankinde, and by his helpe hast killed the body of Henry Styles, besides other witchcrafts, for which, according to the law of God, and the Established law of this Commonwealth, thou deservest to dye."

It is not absolutely certain whether the court which tried her was that held the first Monday of September, 1654, or that of November 28, 1654. If the former, the magistrates were Mr. Wells, Mr. Wolcott, Mr. Clark, and Mr. Talcott. The names of the grand jury at either court are not given; but there is the grand jury list of the court held first Thursday (7th) December, 1654. The charge to the grand jury preceding the record of Lydia Gilbert's indictment is:

"You shall swear by the ever living God that you will diligently enquire and faithfully present to this court whatsoever you know to be a breach of any established law of this jurisdiction, so far as may conduce to the glory of God, and the good of this Commonwealth, as also what criminal offenses you shall judge meet to be presented as you expect from God in Jesus Christ."

The record further says: "Ye party above mentioned is found guilty of witchcraft by ye Jury." But of the subsequent issue of the trial, or the fate of the unhappy Lydia, no further mention is to be found. It is a part of that mystery which seems to envelop the history of all cases of witchcraft in the Colony of Connecticut.

Some items of the "Account of debts due from Henry Stiles, Sr., to Thomas Gilbert, "which accompanied the inventory of Stiles's estate, as presented to the Court, throw a little light upon the connection of Lydia with Stiles's death. They show that Henry Stiles, being a bachelor, boarded with Gilbert; that the last settlement made between the two, prior to Stiles's death, was on March 25, 1649, and that he was then paying Gilbert "three shilling per week for diet." Gilbert had also charges for his own service "about building his [Stiles's] cow-house," 28 days at 1*s*. 6*d*.; also one-half the services and half the diet of John Burton [prob. Stiles's 'hired man'] since April, 1651, and for dieting harvesting hands, two harvest seasons, etc. Gilbert was living in a house which he had purchased, in 1647, from Mr. Francis Stiles, and which was separated only by an 18-rod-wide lot (Wm. Gaylord, Jr.'s) from Henry Stiles's lot. Evidently Stiles and Gilbert were intimately associated in their daily work and interests, and it is quite possible that Lydia Gilbert may have taken some offense with their boarder, and that this feeling was sufficiently known to their neighbors to bring her under the suspicion (so common in those days) of having invoked the aid of witchcraft to compass his death. What relationship she bore to Thomas Gilbert we do not know, for he seems to have had no children born to him at Windsor, nor mention of any wife. She may have been his sister; but, whoever she was, we are left to infer that she bore not the best of reputation in the community, since the record of her indictment says "thou hast, of late years, and still dost give entertainment to Sathan . . . and by his help hast killed the body of Henry Stiles, besides other witchcraft."

Shortly after this trial Gilbert sold his property in Windsor to Thomas Bissell, and moved to Hartford, where he had brothers. In a few years (1659) he died; and in a letter received from Hon. S. O. Griswold, of Cleveland, Ohio, October, 1886, he says, as the result of a close examination of records, etc., "In the settlement of his debts, as given in the Probate records, the distribution of his estate appears, with the names of his children, among which that of the alleged witch does not appear. She must have died, either by a natural death, or was executed. I think the reasonable probability is that she was hanged."

WINDSOR, AS REPRESENTED IN THE BENCH AND BAR OF CONNECTICUT.[1]

The General Court, the first in the colony, consisted of eight gentlemen commissioned by the General Court of Massachusetts, March, 1635–6, "to govern the people at Connecticut for the space of a year next ensuing." Two were from Windsor, viz.: Roger Ludlow, first-named in the commission, and therefore presiding judge: and, virtually Governor of the new Colony, and William Phelps. This court was legislative, judicial, and executive in its character.

The Particular Court, the highest strictly judicial body in the colony, existed from 1638 until 1665, and consisted of two branches — the first composed of magistrates elected by the "freemen" at large, and presided over by the Governor, or Deputy-Governor; the other branch consisted of deputies sent by the several towns. Its sessions were held at Hartford, and of the thirty-five who, at one time or another, occupied its bench, the following Magistrates were from Windsor:

Allyn, Matthew, 1658–62.[2]
Clarke, Daniel, 1659–60.
Clarke, Henry, 1650–56, 59–62.[2]
Ludlow, Roger, 1639–54.
Mason, John, 1642–62.[2]
Phelps, William, 1639–43, 56–62.[2]
Wolcot, Henry, 1643–56.

[2] Until superseded by the charter.

The Court of Assistants, consisting of at least seven members sitting at a session, chosen from the assistants in the General Court, was established in 1665; its jurisdiction extended to higher matters than those in the jurisdiction of its predecessor, the Particular Court. Of the fifty who served on its bench the following were from Windsor:

Allyn, Matthew, 2d, 1710–34.
Clarke, Daniel, 1662–64, 66–68.[3]
Clarke, Henry, 1662–October, '62.[3]
Ellsworth, Oliver, 1780–85, 1802–08.
Newberry, Benjamin, 1685–90.
Newberry, Roger, 1790–1809.
Wolcott, Erastus, 1786–90, East Windsor.
Wolcott, Henry, 1662–81.[3]
Wolcott, Roger, 1714–18, 20–42.
Wolcott, Roger, Jr., 1754–60.

At the Court of Sessions at Hartford, 1687/8, during the Andros Government, among the justices present was Benjamin Newbery of Windsor, and the following Windsor men were on the Grand Jury: John Bissell, John Moore, Return Strong, and Nathaniel Loomis of Windsor.

The Superior Court of the Colony, established 1711 (colonial to 1776; State to 1798; since then a County Court); after 1819 it became a single-judge court:

Governor Roger Wolcott of Windsor was a chief judge of this court.
Governor William Wolcott Ellsworth of Windsor and Hartford.

Supreme Court of Errors, constituted 1784–1806:
Governor Oliver Wolcott, Jr., East Windsor and Litchfield, chief judge, 1787–1796.

General Roger Newberry, Windsor.
Governor William Wolcott Ellsworth of Windsor and Hartford, associate judge, 1847–61.

" " Peletiah Mills of Windsor, 1728.
" " Roger Wolcott, Jr., of Windsor, 1731–1753.

WAR OF 1812
AN OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

Found among the papers of Benoni Gillet of Granby, Conn. pensioner of the Revolutionary War. All these names are old residents of Granby.

" Whereas great pains have been taken to impress the public mind with the ideas that the war in which we are engaged with Great Britain is extensively unpopular, and that it will notbe supported by the ~~by the~~ people of New England, The undersigned think proper to declare, that while they lament the necessity of a war, they are fixed in the determination to support it till the attainment of an honorable peace.

Compiler's note:
Benoni^{5} Gillet was a Rev. war soldier and the following were his sons: Aaron, Almond, and Philo. Joseph^{5} was a brother to Benoni and Joseph Jr. was his son. Goodrich, Griffin, and Kendall were family related. In Sept. of 1813 Philo was inducted into the Conn. Militia and served 3 months. Some of the others most likely were too.

The 1800 census of Granby shows, 1 male 10-16 years; 1 male 26-45 years; and 1 female 16-26 years. Elijah Gillet's first wife died 15 May 1800, age 50 years.(30) He married (2) widow, Sarah Smith and she died 25 January 1802 at Granby, Connecticut.(30)

Elijah Gillet was a Private in the Revolutionary War (Pension File #17436) and served, among other tours, with Brig. Gen. Erastus Wolcott's Brigade at Peekskill, New York from March through June 1777. One tour of duty was to help guard the Torries that were confined in New Gate Prison at East Granby, Connecticut.(53)

In 1812, Elijah bought land in Franklin (which later became part of Delaware County), Ohio from Martin Case. In 1827, he sold this land (described as Range 19, Twp. 3, Sec. 4, Lot 12), to Watson Case and returned to Granby, Connecticut and was living there when he died. ELIZABETH GILLET^{5} (Joseph^{4}, Benjamin^{3}, John^{2}, Jonathan^{1})

- born	14 Oct 1743	Simsbury, Conn.(13)
- married	ca 1761	EZEKIEL HOLCOMB, Sr.
- died	ca 176-	Simsbury, Conn.

Elizabeth (Hayes) Gillet's will #1127, dated 1805, Granby, Connecticut, requested $1.00 be paid her grandson, Ezekiel Holcomb, Jr., at her death. This was the only grandchild mentioned in Elizabeth's will. One Holcomb record mentions Ezekiel Holcomb, Sr., according to one source, was married first to Elizabeth Gillet and the will of Elizabeth (Hayes) Gillet would verify this data.

Ezekiel Holcomb, Sr. and his wife were members of The First Congregational Church, Simsbury, Connecticut, in 1765. After Elizabeth (Gillet) Holcomb's death Ezekiel Sr. married (2) Jemima Griffin, widow of James Adlerman.

Ezekiel Holcomb, Sr. and Junior served in the Revolutionary War, pension file #W21358. In 1777, Ezekiel Jr. was a substitute for his father. He served in the Militia with Capt. Adonijah Burr's Co., Col. Chandler's Regt. at West Point, New York, and six months in the Light Infantry under Captain Henry Ten Eycks Co., Col. Smith's, Regt. Ezekiel Holcomb, Sr. was the son of David and Mehitable (Buttolph) Holcomb, and was born ca 1738, at Salmon Brook, Simsbury, Connecticut, and died in 1805, at Granby, Connecticut.

State Library has him designated as Benjamin.

Among the papers I am sending you:
An oath of allegance for the war of 1812 has the signatures of your Joseph^{5} and Joseph^{6}. I thought you might like this.
In the Richard Austin history there is mention of Benjamin Gillet marrying Elizabeth Austin on p.11.
I am also sending you pages from my own compilation of the Gillet's as concerning my wife, a direct descendant of Jonathan Gillet. She is the 9th generation of an unbroken line of descent. I have all of the pedigree charts done back to 1600 and where possible, all of the family group sheets. After the Index is completed I am going to publish it. I compared different family histories and used the published records of families and after finding the different sources in agreement I then entered the statistics in my own book. I am as sure as I can be that all names, dates and places are correct and verifiable.

I can help you in a lot of areas. I need help in family records where it gives a man's marriage as marrying a "Mary Who". My wife's great grandmother was a Mary Ann "who" born in VA. 27 July 1816. I would sure like to solve this one. KEEP IN TOUCH.

JOSEPH GILLET ^{4}

Father of Benoni

Born March 15,1712 in Suffield,Conn.
Married March 20,1739 to Elizabeth Hayes
Died July 1776 in Simsbury,Conn. (per information in his will filed in Grandby: will # 1132.)

Joseph was the father of three Revolutionary soldiers,Joseph,Elija,and Benoni^{5}.He was also the grandfather of several War of 1812 soldiers which included Philo ^{6}.His family is listed in the now published "Simsbury Public Records".They were charter members of the Ist Congregational Church.

Elizabeth Hayes was born in Simsbury Oct.17,1721. She was the daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Wilcockson)Hayes.She died Aug.31,1805 at Grandby,Conn. N.Grandby was formerly Simsbury).Samuel Hayes,son of George Hayes was born circa 1699 in Simsbury.He received a land grant of 60 acres at Simsbury in 1723.

Three of Joseph's son-in-laws served in the military also.He indeed had family patriotism beyond the call to the cause of Independance.(All six are listed in the patriot's index of the D.A.R.

An early "Simsbury Courier" of Aug.1774 published the town resolution.It stated that the governing fathers voted to go on record as supporting the cause of Independance and admonished the town folk to give of their time,talent,and treasure to support their local militiamen.This included such things as a horse and wagon,hay,food and blankets.It was well received and backed.We are sure that Joseph Sr.did all and whatever he could to back his patriotic offspring.

There are 29 Gillet's listed as serving in the Rev.War and is presumed that they were all related in some form.Joseph had to be a proud patriot to have three sons and at least threeson-in-laws fighting for the cause of Independance. I presume Joseph Sr. himself did patriotic duty (being a farmer)by giving horses,hay,produce and support to the cause.He died in July of 1776.

This document pertains to Joseph^{6} Gilbert (#264, pp. 280-281, op. cit.) given as the son of Theodore^{5} and Mary (Waters) (#112, pp. 191-192). Note, there is a discrepancy between the birth date of Joseph Gilbert as given on p. 192 ("abt. 1753") and p. 280 ("about 1748-9"). It should be noted that Theodore^{5} Gilbert was married 11 June 1850, five months before his 20th birthday.

In this affidavit Jonathan Marsh states that his sister married Joseph Gilbert's brother. John^{5} Gilbert (#119, p. 198), son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Marshfield), married Theodosia Marsh, daughter of Jonathan and Theodosia (Kellogg), of New Hartford, Conn. According to the "Marsh Genealogy" (1895), pp. 190-191, Theodosia, wife of John Gilbert, had a brother Jonathan, born 1 March 1757, the affirmant of this affidavit. If his sister was the wife of Joseph Gilbert's brother, as he stated, then Joseph, too, must have been a son of Benjamin^{4} and Elizabeth (Marshfield), and his name should be included in the record on page 126 as another son.

This relationship is born out by the fact that Joseph and Miriam (Hopkins) Gilbert named their second son, Joseph Marshfield. Marshfield occurs as a "middle name" of another grandchild of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Marshfield) Gilbert, Benjamin Marshfield, son of Elnathan Gilbert (#116, pp. 195-196).

According to "The Gilbert Genealogy" (p. 280) Miriam Hopkins, wife of Joseph Gilbert, was "probably daughter of Consider Hopkins, Jr., of Hartford and New Hartford". Note that their first son was named Elias, and the second daughter, Miriam Webster. According to "The History and Genealogy of the Gov. John Webster Family" (1915), p. 87, #4, Miriam Webster married (1), Elias Hopkins and had a daughter Miriam, born in 1755; married (2), William Sedgwick; married (3), in 1777 John Marsh of New Hartford. Miriam (Hopkins) Gilbert, widow of Sgt. Joseph, stated in her application for a pension, 1837, that she was in her 83rd year, hence born about 1754-1755. Moreover, Miriam Webster's third husband, John Marsh, was an uncle of Jonathan Marsh, who made the affidavit.

Joseph and Miriam (Hopkins) Gilbert named another daughter Theodosia, obviously after Theodosia (Marsh) Gilbert, wife of Joseph's brother John. They had also a daughter Clarice, born in New Hartford 30 June 1783 (New Hartford records), who is not named in "The Gilbert Family".

In her own statement in her application for this pension Miriam (Hopkins) Gilbert stated that she married Sgt. Joseph Gilbert 20 March 1773 ("The Gilbert Family" gives the date as 21 March), and that he died 11 Nov. 1812.

Note also on p. 192 of "The Gilbert Family", that Theodore^{5} Gilbert is given a son named Jesse who is #266, p. 282, and married Lucy Chapman. Benjamin and Elizabeth (Marshfield) Gilbert, p. 126, are also given a son named Jesse who "m. Lucy Chapman". The eldest daughter of Joseph and Miriam (Hopkins) Gilbert was Lucy, born 28 Aug. 1774. Could she have been named after an aunt Lucy, wife of Jesse Gilbert? Was not Jesse, called a son of Theodore^{5} on p. 192, identical with Jesse, son of Benjamin, on p. 126?

Note also, on p. 192, that Theodore^{5} Gilbert is given a daughter Mary, who "m. Theodore Cowles?" Compare this statement with that made on p. 197 under #118, the third child of Benjamin^{5} Gilbert (brother of John and Joseph and another son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Marshfield), p. 126): "Mary . . . m. Aug. 1, 1785, Theodore Cowles".

Thus it appears that Theodore^{5} and Mary (Waters) Gilbert (#112, pp. 191-192) had only two known children: Theodore, b. 5 Oct. 1751; and Asa, b. 14 Nov. 1755. This is confirmed by a family Bible which Theodore^{5} gave to his son Asa,^{6}

With the Dorchester Church and Rev. Mr. Warham, he and Nathan removed about 1636 to Windsor, Conn., where he "had a lot granted to him seventeen rods wide" near Mr. Warhams, and across the Poquonnoc road from Alexander Alvord of the same company, whose descendant, Henry of Bolton in the sixth generation, married Mary W. of Colchester in the sixth generation from Jonathan. He and his wife Mary are included in Matthew Grant's church list, made thirty-seven years after the settlement, of twenty-one "members, who were so in Dorchester and came up with Mr. Warham and are still of us." They were also privileged, having paid six shillings, to sit in the long seats in church. He gave 4s. 6d. to the fund in aid of sufferers by the Indian war at Simsbury and Springfield, and was one of the committee of distribution. He died Aug. 23, 1677, and his wife Jan. 5, 1685. THE BROTHERS JONATHAN AND NATHAN GILLETT AND SOME OF THEIR DESCENDANTS

Compiled by ALICE LUCINDA PRIEST, B.L., of Brookline, Mass.

The descendants of the Puritan brothers Jonathan and Nathan Gillett of Dorchester, Mass., and Windsor, Conn., were and almost surely are, numerous, yet there is an interesting opportunity for much further investigation of records to identify all the lines through the genealogical reference library at 9 Ashburton Place, Boston.

Source

The April 1893 NEW ENGLAND HISTORICAL AND GENEALOGICAL REGISTER published a very able nine-page record of* "Descendants of Jonathan Gillet of Dorchester, Mass., and Windsor, Conn.", compiled by Salmon Cone Gillette and arranged and enlarged by the Rev. Henry Clay Alvord, A.M., both descendants. Their record is altogether concerned with the descendants of Jonathan's youngest child, Josiah. Another very important publication is the April 1939 American Genealogist ten-page report of John Insley Coddington, A.M., on "Jonathan Gillett of Dorchester, Mass., and Windsor, Conn., and Mary Dolbere or Dolbiar, his Wife." As the title indicates, its important and convincing mission was to establish the fact of the marriage and the genealogical background of the bride and the believed background of the groom, with no purpose of a record of descendants beyond their children.

Josiah inherited the family estate. See will.

Source

This present record concerns principally the early line of Jonathan's third son, Joseph, and, because of later-date opportunities, can correct a few errors in earlier records, make additions, and enlarge on some interesting items.

That Jonathan and Nathan Gillett were brothers is proved by the 8 August 1677 will of Jonathan. To quote: . . . "my wife . . . shall have . . . the Housing & Lands of both my Houselotts, my one and that which was my Brother Nathan Gillett's, ..."

Source

Henry R. Stiles, A.M., in his 1892 second edition of "Ancient Windsor, Conn." states: "Jonathan Gillett, with his brother Nathan came to Dorchester, Mass., with Rev. Warham, [June 1630] and (both) to Windsor with the first emigration. Both he and his wife were members of the original Dorchester and Windsor churches. . . . There is still extant . . . a copy of the . . . Bible, of 1599 . . . This Bible was brought to New England by this Jonathan Gillett, Sen^{r}, and afterwards passed into the hands of the present Holcomb family. . . . In this Bible occurs the following manuscript record: 'My father Gille(tt) came into new inglan the secon(d) time in June in the yeare 1634 and Jonathan his sonne was born about half a yeare after he came to land.'" The foregoing record proves that Jonathan Gillett's wife accompanied him on his second trip from England to New England; and very strongly suggests that he had married her in England on his return trip to his native land.

Therefore Mr. Coddington's 1939 opening statement is even more than the strongest kind of circumstantial evidence. It is as follows:

"The Parish Register of St. Andrew's Church at Colyton, co. Devon, contains the following marriage record:

"1634 Jonathan Gillett & Mary Dolbiar, 29 March

"This is the answer to the question of the long-sought identity of Mary, wife of Jonathan Gillett, the emigrant from England to Dorchester, Mass., and settler at Windsor, Conn."

Mr. Coddington's next statement is: "There can be very little doubt but that Jonathan Gillett was the son of the Reverend William Gillett or Gyllett, Rector of Chaffcombe, co. Somerset, who was instituted to that benefice 4 Feb. 1609/10, and who died early in 1641", etc. And there are five valuable pages on the ancestry of Mary Dolbiar (Dolbere) that should all be read. They include the Colyton baptisms: "1607 Mary, d. of Rockye Dolebeere, 7 June." "1571 Rawkey, s. of Robarte Dolber of Caddhayn, 17 August." The marriages: "1563 Robert Dolbere of Cadden & Agnes, d. of one Samson, of Hawkechurche, 26 April." "1602 Rockye Dolber, s. of Robert Dolber of Cadhaine & Marie, d. of John Michell of Barretshaine, 10 October."

As is amply confirmed by records to follow, Mr. Coddington states also that the child Jonathan Gillett, Jr., was the first son; and that Cornelius Gillett was named for his mother's brother, Cornelius Dolbere, and was the second Gillett son. (See "Colonial Records of Connecticut", Trumbull, 1850, for lists of Windsor men "made free before the Court." Vol. I, page 297, date 21 May 1657, gives a list of 65 men, and the 5th name is "Jonath: Gillet, Junir." Page 315, date 20 May 1658, gives 70 names, with the 62nd, "Cornel: Gillet." Vol. II, page 100, date 8 Oct. 1668 states "Those presented to stand for freemen" of Windsor, has first of 11 names, "Joseph Gillett." Page 519, date 11 Oct. 1669, freemen of Windsor alphabetically arranged under initial capital letter, one name below another, under "G" has: "Jonathan Gillet, Senr.—Nathan Gillet—Jonathan Gillet, Jr.—Cornelius Gillet—Josep Gillet.") Jonathan, Jr., was admitted to the Windsor Church 6 April 1662; Cornelius, 16 Jan. 1665–6. The order of ages is shown also by the father's 1677 will in listing legacies. (See "Early Connecticut Probate Records", Manwaring, 1904, vol. I, page 200.)

As was customary in certain regions in old England, Jonathan's youngest son, Josiah, was to continue at home and take care of his mother and own the old home place. But if Jonathan, Sr., and his wife Mary should both die within four years, his will states, "my son Josiah shall pay some legacies, as to his Brother Jonathan Gillett £4 and a gunn, and to his Brother Cornelius Gillett £4 & to my daughter, Peter Browne's wife, £2, and to my daughter, Samuel ffyllyes wife £2, and to ye two children which I have taken that ware my son Joseph's Dec'd, as ye little son Jonathan £5, and ye garle £5. My son Jonathan is to have the other 20 acres of Woodland . . . Also Jonathan and Cornelius my sons to have my 11 acres . . . And my son John Gillett to have . . . and Jeremie to have . . ."

There can be no question about Jonathan, Jr., being the oldest son, Cornelius the second, the two married daughters third and fourth, and the deceased son Joseph the fifth child; and that son John was older than son Jeremiah. This is supported by the Windsor records of births and baptisms from 1639, birth of Anna, to 1650, Josiah's baptism.

The fact that the Windsor church record of the birth of Anna or Hannah, 29 Dec. 1639, specifically notes that she was Jonathan Gillett's "first-born in Windsor," seems proof that the entire family was not permanently located in the new town until after the births of the three older children. And the reason might well have been the protective care of the infants. But it is clear that Nathan Gillett went to Windsor in 1636, and remained there, serving in the Pequot War in 1637.

Jonathan Gillett, Sr., died in Windsor 23 Aug. 1677, fifteen days after making his will, and his wife Mary died there 5 Jan. 1685–6, over eight years later, which obviated the payment of legacies by son Josiah. It is important to read the entire will, as well as those of fourteen others of the Gillett family, all to be found in "A Digest of the Early Connecticut Probate Records, Hartford District", 3 volumes, by Charles W. Manwaring, 1904.

What had it meant to Jonathan and Mary Gillett and their seven sons and three daughters to live in New England rather than in Old England? One thing surely, and far the heaviest part of the price, was that not quite two years before Jonathan died they lost their third son, Joseph, aged 34, at the Deerfield, Mass., Bloody Brook Indian massacre: and eight months and a day later, lost their fourth son, Samuel, aged 33, at the Turners Falls, Mass., battle with Indians. Both young men had paid with their lives for going to new settlements along the Connecticut River above the Colony of Connecticut. At a 10 July 1676 meeting of the Connecticut "Councill" (consisting of the Governor, a major, two captains, two "Mr's",), thankfulness was expressed that the people of that Colony have "bountifully" afforded some supply for our brethren in distress in our neighboring "Colonyes", and desire our Windsor brethren to improve what they have gathered of the good people there and that the remainder be distributed to Springfield and those upper towns, "according to the good discretion of Deacon Jn° Moore, John Loomys, Jonath: Gillet, Senr and Jacob Drake."

2. JONATHAN^{2} GILLETT (Jonathan^{1}), of Windsor, Conn., according to the family Bible (1599) almost surely born in January 1634–5 or a few days earlier in December 1634, died 27 Feb. 1697–8 (Connecticut Probate Records, Manwaring, vol. 1, p. 557). He married first, in Windsor, 23 April 1661 ANNA KELSEY, born about 1634, died in Windsor 18 April 1676, daughter of William Kelsey of Hartford, Conn.; and secondly, in Windsor, 14 Dec. 1676, MIRIAM DIBBLE of Windsor, born there 19 Feb. 1644–5 and baptized there 7 Dec. 1645, died after May 1703 (according to Connecticut Probate Records, Manwaring, vol. 2, pp. 140, 156 Miriam Gillett was living in May 1700 and later), daughter of Thomas Dibble. In two modern Gillett records there have been errors about the dates of death of Jonathan Gillett and his second wife.

The will of Jonathan^{2} Gillett was dated 25 August 1694, and reads in part:

"I Jonathan Gillett of Windsor . . . I give to my son William all my Houseing & Lands lying in the Township of Simsbury, except 5 acres of Marsh lying under the Mountains. I give to my sd son William half my Marsh lying in the Township of Windsor at Wash Brooke which adjoins Simon Drake. I give him 10 acres of Woodland which my Father gave me that abutts south on the land of Thomas Barbour. I give him a Gunn and a Sword. I give to my wife Miriam the benefit of all my Houseing and Lands in Windsor (except what is before given to my son William) until my son Jonathan is 21 years of age, and then ½ of my Houseing and Lands during her natural life. And if she see Cause to marry again I give her £3—10 per annum to be paid her by my son Jonathan, and ⅛ of my Moveable Estate. I give to my son Jonathan all my Houseing and Lands at Windsor (except those given to son William), and also the Land I bought and to have of Father Dibble, he to enter upon ½ of sd houseing and Lands at 21 years of age, and the other half after the decease of my wife. I give to my daughter Mary 10 shillings besides what I have already given her. I give to my daughters Hannah & Miriam, to each of them, ⅛ part of my moveable Estate except 10 shillings to be taken out of their part. Appoint my wife Miriam to be sole Executrix."

Witnesses were Henry Wolcott sen. Nathaniel Gillett. Will proven 5 April 1698. Inventory taken by Capt. Timothy Phelps & James Enno. Amount, £360–13–00 Jonathan^{1} Gillett, Sr. 1677 inventory, £273–10–00

Probate Records, v. II, p. 140, 17 May 1700: Miriam Gillett, the Relict of Jonathan Gillett request this Court that ½ acre of Land not disposed of by the Will be allotted to her to aid in the Payment of Debts. There being no provision in the Will for the payment of Debts, she, being Executrix, is necessitated to pay them out of her own particular Legacy, (The Court gave her the Land.)

Pobate Records, vol. II, p. 56: Thomas Dibble, Sen., Windsor. Inventory £60–14–01 taken 1 Nov. 1700. Will dated 17 Feb. 1699–1700. "I give to my daughter Miriam Gillett that two acres of meadow she now posseth. Item: To my said daughter Miriam I give, for the use of her son, my best broadcloth coat, hatt and breeches. All the rest of my apparrel to be divided, two parts to my sons Samuel and Thomas, the other part to be to my grandsons Josiah Dibble and Wakefield Dibble. I appoint Mr. John Eliot and son-in-law Samuel Gibbs to be executors."

Dist. — March 30, 1686 — Additional inventory, of clothes etc. presented by Nathaniel Dickinson, who stated after her marriage to him, the widow of Joseph Gillett "soon after died" . . "the sd Nathaniel Dickinson shewing himself faithful to his trust & also to settled sd children in some comfortable way and there being 4 sons and two daughters" . . eldest son Joseph Gillett, to have a double part, and to have the land for his use till his brothers came of age. Court orders Nathaniel Dickinson, Joseph Barnard & Thomas Wells to make the division.

As Windsor death records show, the youngest child, Hannah,3 had died 11 Aug. 1683; and Jonathan,3 second of the four sons referred to in the above probate record, died the following 3rd of June 1686. But there is nowhere suggestion of the deaths of the two older sisters, Elizabeth3 and Mary,3 and they were doubtless the "two daughters" of their stepfather's statement; not any imaginary and almost impossible two daughters younger than the Hannah3 for whom Barbour's Collection gives the birth records of June 30, 1674 and Jan. 30, 1674 (1674–5). There are three records for Joseph's birth, one making it Nov. 2 and two making it Nov. 20; and two different records for sister Mary, one Sept. 1 and the other Sept. 10, 1667.

Jos2 & Elizabeth were among earliest settlers in Deerfield, Mass; he was killed with Capt Lothrop at Bloody Brook, Mass. during King Philips Ind. massacre of the settlement.

5. Samuel2 Gillett (*Jonathan*1), of Windsor, Conn., and Hatfield, Mass., baptized in Windsor 22 Jan. 1642/3, slain in the Turners Falls, Mass., fight 19 May 1676. He married in Hadley, Mass., 23 Sept. 1668, Hannah Dickinson of Wethersfield, Conn., and Hadley, Mass., born in Wethersfield 6 Dec. 1648, died after 1687, daughter of Sergt. John Dickinson. She married secondly, in Hatfield, 15 May 1677, Stephen Jennings of Hatfield.

On 19 Sept. 1677 Hannah (Dickinson) Gillett Jennings was captured with two of her Gillett children and fourteen others by Indians. She was taken to Canada, rescued by the heroic work of her husband and others and reached home again about June 1678 with her two Gillett children and her new born daughter of March 1678, Captivity Jennings.

He married in Windsor, 8 July 1669, Mercy Barber, baptized there 12 Oct. 1651, died in Suffield, Conn., 29 March 1725. Mercy (Barber) Gillett married secondly, in Windsor, 14 June 1683, Capt. George Norton of Suffield.

record of children born, and and secondly in Windsor, 26 Feb. 1704/5, Hannah^3 Clark (John,^{2} Hon. Daniel^{1}), born in Simsbury 15 Aug. 1686, died in Windsor 20 Feb. 1708/9, leaving three sons. Stiles in Ancient Windsor states of her grandfather: "Hon. Daniel Clark, an attorney at law, a first settler and man of much influence and position at Windsor; held many public offices; was Secretary of the Colony, 1658–64; & 1665–6." "Married (1) Mary^2 Newberry (Thomas^1)." There is no known record of a third marriage, though one seems probable. The following 1726 probate record proves that Thomas^3 was then alive, and might suggest a third marriage about 1716.

16. Samuel^3 Gillett (John,^{2} Jonathan^{1}), of Suffield, Conn., and Granville, Mass., born in Windsor, Conn., 16 Feb. 1677/8. He was five years old when his mother married secondly, Captain George Norton of Suffield, the town that became the boy's home for most of his life. In the later years of his life he lived in Granville, across the line in southwest Mass., and died there "in 1739, aged 60", but was buried in Suffield. (Northampton Probate Records give administration of estate 1934.) He married in Suffield, 22 Jan. 1701/2 (int. 20 Dec. 1701), Rebecca^3 Bancroft (Thomas,^{2} John^{1}), born in Springfield, Mass. (part later Enfield, Conn.), 23 Feb. 1680, a family name that connects with both the Jonathan and Nathan Gillett lines, and the Windsor Stiles family. The immigrant ancestor John^1 Bancroft reached Lynn, Mass., in 1632 and died so soon that to his London poet brother Thomas it seemed no landing, and he wrote the lines:

"You sold your land the lighter hence to go
To foreign coasts, yet (Fate would have it so)
Did ne'er New England reach, but went with them
That journey toward New Jerusalem."

Widow Jane Bancroft received 100 acres in Lynn in 1638. Her daughter Anna^2 married 13 May 1647 Sergt. John Griffin, settled in Simsbury, Conn., had ten children and one of them, Sarah^2 Griffin, married Elias^2 Gillett (Nathan^1). Son Thomas^2 Bancroft of the Springfield, Mass. region, residence at the "lower wharf," now Enfield, Conn., was a selectman of Westfield; 8 Dec. 1653 married Margaret^2 Wright (Samuel^1) and their daughter Ruth^3 Bancroft married John Stiles and had many children; and daughter Rebecca^3 married Samuel^3 Gillett; and son Nathaniel^3 had descendants in Granville, Mass. (and Ohio) and it was probably this connection that took Samuel^3 Gillett from Suffield to Granville.

Rev. Ezra^5 Stiles, President of Yale from 1772 to 1795, was the son of Rev. Isaac^4 and the grandson of John^3 and Ruth^3 (Bancroft) Stiles, and he wrote of his grandmother's family: "The Family of Bancroft are of a brisk, smart, quick, sensible & lively cast. Grandmother communicated her family spirit to all (her) children", etc. (Stiles Gens. 1892 & 1895).

Children, born in Suffield:

17. Benjamin^3 Gillett (John,^{2} Jonathan^{1}), of Suffield, Conn., probably a twin and born in Windsor, Conn., 3 Oct. 1680 and brought up in Suffield after his mother's second marriage. He married there, 6 Sept. 1705, Elizabeth^3 Austin, born there 20 April 1684, dau. of Captain Anthony^2 and Esther Austin. Her gravestone in West Suffield cemetery records her death 7 Oct. 1752, in 68th year.

18. Josiah^3 Gilett (Josiah,^{2} Jonathan^{1}) was born 24 Nov. 1678. [For Josiah^3 and succeeding generations see vol. 47, p. 169, The Register.]

Samuel^3's probated will is dated March 30, 1769, when he lacked only a month and a half of being 97; and it was signed only by his mark, though formerly he had signed his name. But there is proof that some, perhaps most of it, was written before 1760; half proof, before 1754; and the probability is

FROM STILES:
HIST OF ANCIENT WINDSOR.

GILLETT, Jonathan, with his brother NATHAN came to Dorchester, Mass., with Rev. Warham, and (both) to W. with the first emigration (see p. 157, Vol. I). Both he and his wife were members of the orig. D. and W. ch. (O. C. R.); D. W. P. thinks that he probably d. 27 Feb., 1697–8; O. C. R. says: "Jonathan, Sen.," d. 23 Aug., 1677, and in its list of persons taken into W. ch. "and are now living" (the date of this Rec. is Dec. 21, 1677) is mentioned "Wid. Gillett." The Rec. in Gillett-Holcomb Bible, referred to below (see, also, Note, p. 290), says "Father Gillett dyed in 1667." There is still extant, in the possession of a Windsor family, a copy of the Geneva edition of the Bible, of 1599, commonly known as the "Breeches Bible," because the fig-leaf garment made by our first parents in the Garden of Eden, and which in the King James's Version is called apron, is herein given as breeches. This Bible was brought to New England by this Jonathan Gillett, Sen^{r}, and afterwards passed into the hands of the present Holcomb family, prob. through Lois, who was the daughter of Jonathan Holcomb by his second wife, Wid. Mary Gillet, whom he married 28 June. 1721. Lois Holcomb, b. 5 July, 1748, was married July, 1772, to Noah (father of Perly, father of Dea. Anson) Cooley of North Granby, Conn. In the family, this Gillett-Holcomb Bible was familiarly known as the "Bear Bible," because it was once, in the olden days, placed in a window to keep the sash raised, when a bear, endeavoring to effect an entrance, clawed it, leaving the marks of his claws so deep upon the edges of its leaves, that they are still very plainly to be seen. In this Bible occurs the following manuscript record: "My father Gille[tt] came into new-inglan the secon[d] time in June in the yeare 1634 and Jonathan his sonne was born about half a yeare aftur he cam to land." [The italics are ours.] A jar now in possession of Mr. Norman F. Stoughton of So. Windsor, was, it is said, "brought over" by the first Jonathan Gillett. It is white with blue lines, 6 inches in height and 7 inches in diameter. Ch.:

Fam. 30. Francis^{6} (Hon.) (Ashbel,^{5} Abel,^{4} Thos.,^{3} John,^{2} Jona.^{1}), changed the spelling of his family name when young, at the suggestion of a distant relative, to accord with its original French form of Gillette. He was b. in that part of W. now included in Bloomfield, 14th Dec., 1807. At the age of six years he lost his father, and his mother, on her second marriage, two or three years later, took the family to Ashfield, Mass. Owing to the lack of sympathy or interest in him manifested by his stepfather, his childhood was not a happy one; yet, though he could hardly be said to have a home, and was made frequently to feel the loss of his natural father, he exhibited even then those qualities of truthfulness, honor, and courage which afterwards characterized him as a man. Even his harsh stepfather, whose hatred of him seemed almost insane in its malignity, acknowledged that he had never known him to utter a falsehood or use a profane word. When a little more than fifteen years old, young Gillette attended the Ashfield academy, and was not long in finding that he must have a collegiate education; and amid many obstacles and discouragements, with unexampled industry, he fitted himself, in one year's time, to enter Yale College. When the time arrived for him to go to New Haven for examination, his stepfather's wrath burst forth, and, knowing the boy's dutiful obedience to his mother, he persuaded her to interpose and prevent his going. But he had under-estimated the quiet boy's force of will. Suspecting the source of her objections (which might have had more force had he not fortunately possessed the means of acquiring an education, independent of her), the young student reasoned with his mother and sought to obtain her approval. Finding, however, that she was too much under her husband's influence to be readily moved, and, determined to have an education, he closed the conference by saying, "Well, mother, I must and will go to college, in spite of father or the devil!" And go he did. In college he was studious, emulative, yet social and popular with his fellows. In the classics and belles lettres he ranked high; and though mathematics were not favorite studies with him, yet he maintained a fair standing in them. He was elected a member of the Phi Beta Kappa, and chosen unanimously by his classmates as their valedictorian. After graduation (1829) he entered a law office, but was compelled by weak lungs to relinquish his legal studies. He took up life again on his little Bloomfield patrimony, as a scientific farmer, upon which, in 1834, he erected a house of unhewn stone brought from the near mountain-side, and which is still a striking feature of the town, set far back from the street, and approached from two directions by winding avenues of trees. This was the west half of his father's farm, of 200 or more acres, lying a mile and a half from the Centre on the Hartford road. Here, for eighteen years, he lived, his health fully restored by his out-of-door life, his mind ever devoted to the interests of Bloomfield and to his beloved family circle.

But he soon, and irresistibly, became a man of mark in larger circles. Upon taking the electors' oath in 1832, he was chosen to represent the town of Windsor in the General Assembly, and, in 1838, received the same honor from Bloomfield, which, three years before, had been incorporated by the Legislature, and which received its name at his suggestion. It was in that year that questions touching the subject of slavery were first pressed upon the attention of the Legislature, and is earnest advocacy of the anti-slavery cause first showed itself in a forcible speech on the proposition to erase from the Constitution of the State the word "white." He had become so thoroughly and permanently identified with the cause of humanity and justice that when, in 1841, the Liberty Party was organized in Connecticut he was nominated as its candidate for governor, notwithstanding his frequent declinations, and this nomination was frequently repeated by the Liberty and Free Soil parties during the next twelve years; and more than once the old stone house sheltered the flying slave en route to Canadian shores and liberty. In 1854 he was elected to fill the unexpired (long) term in the U. S. Senate, vacated by the resignation of Hon. Truman Smith, and his first vote was cast against the Nebraska Bill, which was passed at midnight of the day of his arrival in Washington. It is doing no discredit to the many eminent men who have occupied a seat in our National Senate, from Connecticut, to say that, during his brief term of office, no Connecticut Senator ever deported himself with more of dignity or propriety; none knew better when to speak and when to be silent, while by his votes, not less than by his speeches, he evinced that capacity for statesmanship which caused his retirement from the Senate to be regarded as a serious loss by the ablest statesmen in it.

Note: →

In matters nearer home, however, Mr. Gillette was ever active. With the cause of temperance he early identified himself, and no man in Connecticut was more consistent and earnest in its advocacy. Some of his most eloquent addresses and his most powerful written appeals were directed against the traffic in intoxicating drinks. And in the promotion of education he was equally active, from the building of the neat little brick schoolhouse in his district, in Bloomfield, to the larger movements which concerned the educational interests of the whole State. From 1838 to 1842 he heartily sympathized with and aided Hon. Henry Barnard in his zealous labors for educational reform. In 1849, at the organization of the State Normal School, he was named as one of its trustees, and was soon after chosen chairman of the Board, an office which he filled with great acceptance for many years. In 1857 he was chosen Acting Visitor of the Board of Visitors of Schools in Hartford, and filled the office with rare fidelity and ability. In 1852 he rem. to Hartford, and, in connection with John Hooker, Esq., his brother-in-law, purchased the Nook Farm estate, in the management of which, in literary pursuits, and in the performance of his public duties, he found ample enjoyment and won the continued respect of his fellow citizens until his death, Sept. 30, 1879, at the age of 72. He was buried in Farmington, Conn.

From his earliest days he had a decided preference for the study of medicine, and, at an early age, began reading with Dr. Case of T., continuing his studies afterward with Dr. Woodward, also of T., who enjoyed a wide reputation as a medical teacher. In the winter of 1826 he attended lectures at the Harvard Medical School, and next year entered the Medical Dep't of Yale College, where he grad. 1829. He immediately located in practice at So. W., where he remained actively engaged and much respected for over 30 years. Oct. 1, 1834, he m. Sarah A. Watson of New Hartford, Conn. A natural love for the curious and antique led him, early in life, to begin a collection of minerals, relics, etc., etc., which ultimately became a valuable and interesting one. The Revol. and Indian history of the State was therein largely represented. He was a ready writer and took much pleasure in collecting facts and materials regarding the early history of East and South Windsor, with an ultimate intention of writing a history of these towns, and a series of papers on these topics was published in the Hartford Times (see Preface, p. 9, Vol. I). Dr. Gillette rem., in 1863, to Chicago, Ill., served in the War of the Civ. Rebell. as one of a Volunteer Corps of Surgeons, after the battles at Pittsburgh Landing, and his name is mentioned in "The Roll of Honor" in the Yale Coll. catalogue. After 12 years' residence in C., he rem. to St. Charles, Ill., 35 miles west of C., where he res. until his death, 21 Dec., 1878, in his 72d year, his wife surviving him only 3 months. *Ch. (bp. E. Jonathan of West Hartford, is one whom we have failed to connect with the main line; but he evidently belonged to the Windsor Gillettes, and is worthy of commemoration in these pages. We therefore reproduce here the substance of what has been told about him in a little privately printed volume entitled Letters from the Prisons and Prison Ships of the Revolution, by HENRY R. STILES, M.D., issued in 1865, in a limited edition of 80 copies.

He was b. in the West Division of Hartford Township, Feb. 4, 1738; was a farmer; early enl. in the Revol. service, and was prob. the Lieut. G., of Col. Huntington's reg., who, with a number of other Am. officers, captured at the battle of Long Island, sent (Sept. 5, 1776), by flag, for their baggage and cash. In the retreat after that battle Mr. G., with seven men, were, owing to a scarcity of boats, captured by the British before they could embark. He was at first confined in the prison-ship, but through the influence of John Archer (or Hutton, acc. to another acc't), a Masonic bro., was released and had the liberty of the city on parole. He remained a prisoner in N. Y. city for two years, when his health became so broken down that in the fall of 1779 he was permitted to return to his home in W. H., and d. there 9 Dec., 1779, from the effects of his privations and troubles. During his last illness he said to his son Jonathan, Jr., who was by his bedside, "The war may continue many years, and should you enlist, or be called into the U. S. service, you may be taken prisoner and carried to N.Y. If so, I would have you inquire for Mr. John Archer, a man with whom I boarded after I came from the prison-ship, and he will assist you." Singular as it may seem, all these incidents, as suggested by the dying man, did actually occur. The son, after his father's death, enlisted in the service, was captured at Horse-Neck by Col. De Lancey's Light Horse, taken to New York, and imprisoned, as his father had been before him, in the Old Sugar House; notified Mr. Archer of the fact, and was much befriended by him during his imprisonment.

Among "the Seven" to whom Mr. Gillett refers in the following letter, as having been taken with him, were Timothy Watson of East Windsor, and John Waterman; the latter was released from confinement in prison through Masonic influence, and was allowed parole. It is probable, also, that Roger Filer and John Moody, mentioned in the letter, were of Old Windsor.

During his confinement Mr. Gillet addressed a letter to his wife, of which the following is a copy:

"MY FRIENDS, — No doubt my misfortunes have reached your ears. Sad as it is, it is as true as sad. I was made prisoner the 27 day of August past by a people called heshens [Hessians] and by a party called Gagers [Yagers, or Jagers], the most Inhuman of all mortals. I can't give Room to picture them here; but thus much I at first Resolved not to be be taken but by the Impertunity of the Seven taken with me and being sorounded on all sides by numbers I unhappily surrenderd; would to God I never had — then I should never [have] known their unmercifull cruelties; they first dissarmed me then plundred me of all I had, watch Buckles money and sum Clothing after which they abused me by brusing my flesh with the buts of their [guns. They knocked me down:] I got up and they [kept on] beating me almost all the way to there [camp] where I got shot of them — the next thing was I was allmost starved to death by them. I was keept here 8 days [then] sent on board a ship, where I continued 39 days and by much worse than when on shore after I was set on [at New York] confined a strong guard till the 20th day of November after which I have had my liberty to walk part over the City between sun and sun, notwithstanding there generous allowance of provision I must inevitably have perished with hunger had not sum friends in this [city] Relieved my extreme necessity, but I can't expect they can always do it — What I shall do next I know not, being naked for cloths and void of money and winter present, and provisions very skerce, fresh meat one shilling per pound, Butter three shilling, per pound Cheese two shillings Turnips and potatoes at a shilling half-peck milk fifteen Coppers a quart — bread equally as dear; & the General says he can't find us fuel thro' the winter tho' at present we Recieve sum cole.

I was after put on board siezed violantly with the disentarry — it followed me hard upwards of six weeks — after that a slow fever, but now I am vastly better — I pray these lines might find you and your children in health and should be glad to here from you if possably — My sinseare love to you and my children — may God keep and preserve you at all times from sin & sickness and death — May he feed and cloth you but above all prepare you all to appeare before his righteous [bar, that you might each of you] Render your accounts with Joy; my being absent from you I hope don't hinder your being mindful of your soul's welfare; nor my suffering take your thoughts from your duty to God; never murmur nor Repine at the hand of providence what God doth — Remember it is Right — teach your Children the paths of Virtue, and to walk therein; may they Remember there Creator in the days of there youth, and live to do much good in there day and generation — may you have the presence of God with you to enable and assist you in this important worke — I leve you all, if alive, in the hands of a merciful God who will have mercy on all that seek him, and may you be of that happy number whose God is the Lord, and when you quit this mortal shore may you Reach a far better, where Sorrow and Vexatious troubles never come.

After giving you a small sketch of myself and troubles, I will Endeavor to faintly lead you into the poor cituation the soldiers are in, especially those taken at long Island, where I was; in fact, there cases are deplorable, and they are Real objects of pitty — they are still confined and in houses where there is no fire — poor mortals, with little or no cloths, perishing with hunger, offering 8 dollars in paper for one in silver to Relieve their distressing hunger; occasioned for want of food their natures are brook and gone, some almost loose their voices and some their hearing — they are crowded into churches and there guarded night and day. I can't paint the horable appearance they make — it is shocking to human nature to behold them. Could I draw the curtain from before you; there expose to your view a lean Jaw^{d} mortal; hunger laid his skinney hand and whet to keenest Edge his Stomach cravings. sorounded with tattrd garments, Rotten Raggs close beset with unwelcomed vermin. Could I do this, I say, — possable I might in some (small) manner fix your Idea with what appearance some hundreds of these poor creatures make in houses where once people attempted to Implore God's blessings &c. [He then asks them to obtain, and if possible send him a part of the money due him; gives them a brief statement of the American lines in the battle of Aug. 27th, and says:] We lost two Sergeants and how many since [we] land[ed] cant Rightly say but I believe at least one-third part, but notwithstanding this we are not discouraged yet, &c. — Roger Filer hath lost one of his legs and part of a Thigh, it was his left. John Moody died here a prisoner.

So Now to conclude my little Ragged History will be in a few words. I as you know ever did Impress on your mind to look to God for so still I continue to do the same — think less of me but more of your Creator. Remember (you are born to die and you could not but expect to meet) with troubles. Ware it Gods will I should be glad to see you and the children before I am called to Depart this life, but if I dont I shant allow myself to be uneasy, for a complaining uneasy temper of soul carries punishment along with it. So I exort you to shun that folly.

So in this I wish you well and bid you farewell, and subscribe myself your nearest friend and well-wisher for Ever.

JOHN$^{A.}$ GILLET.

My Sincere Love to you | and the children. |

N. B. My deuty to father & mother my Love to Brothers and Sisters neighbours and friends, Especially B. Colton Esq^{r}, Mr. Collins, Mr. Crosby, &c.

* One account gives another daughter, ——, who m. a Gibbs.

† Almerin Gillet (incorrectly called Almond by Dr. H. C. GILLETTE, who gives the following anecdote concerning him in his E. W. Sketches.) was a hatter, and sett. in Windsor. He was a staunch Democrat, and his brother-in-law, Shem Stoughton, was a thorough-going Federalist, and in their intercourse they had many a warmly-contested political argument. A son of Shem's was learning the hatter's trade with his uncle Almerin in W., and by him Gillet sent a new hat to his bro.-in-law, with the following rhyme pinned therein:

"Here's your new hat, sir,
Made of skunks and cats, sir!"

As soon as his eye caught these lines, Shem quickly replied:

"Yes, I see that, sir,
Made by a Democrat, sir!"

Although the following articles were intended merely for newspaper circulation, and the subject has been more fully treated in this volume, yet we have thought best to reprint them, as affording a clear, consecutive and satisfactory argument in favor of the Windsor Church.

The Oldest Orthodox Congregational Church.

Messrs. Editors—Under this head you present in your last issue the claims of the Church in Lynn to the honorable distinction of being the oldest Orthodox Congregational Church in America. Permit me to offer the claims of the Church in Windsor, Conn., to this distinction.

The present Congregational Church in Windsor was organized in Plymouth, England, in 1630. The original members had assembled at that port, and while awaiting the preparation of their ship, the Church was organized, and the Rev. John Warham and Rev. John Maverick were chosen and installed Pastor and Teacher. The Rev. Mr. White of Dorchester, assisted in the exercises of the occasion and preached the sermon. The embarkation, which took place soon after, occurred on the 20th of March, 1630; and on the 30th of May they were landed at Nantaskett Point, several weeks before the arrival of Governor Winthrop at Boston (see Clapp's Memoirs and Annals of Dorchester). Two of the assistants of Massachusetts, Mr. Roger Ludlow and Mr. Edward Rosseter, were among the original members of this Church. The location selected was named Dorchester, from which place, after five years, the removal "of the Dorchester people" to Connecticut commenced. The new location was also named Dorchester, which name was afterwards changed by the Court to Windsor. The Church organization was not left behind in Massachusetts. Winthrop's Journal says a Council was called to organize a Church at Dorchester, April 11, 1636, "a large part of the old one being gone to Conn.;" but the Council not being satisfied respecting the soundness of the views of those who proposed to form a new one, "except Mr. Mather and one more;" the matter was deferred. On the 23d of August a Church was organized, and a covenant, subscribed to by seven individuals, was adopted. (See Annals of Dorchester.) That this was nothing less than a new Church organization is farther proved by a letter from John Kingsley, (one of the seven). The letter was sent to Connecticut in 1676, asking aid, after the destruction of the town of Rehoboth. (See appendix to Public Records of Colony of Connecticut, published 1852). He says: "Now being unknowne to you beloe on the river, I say I am the 1 man and onely left of those that gathered the Church that is now in Dorchester, yet of lat have lived at Rehoboth." We have a negative proof that the original Church of the Dorchester people, which was gathered in England, was not disbanded, in the absence of any reference to a new gathering of a Church by Mr. Warham and his people, after their arrival in Connecticut; and the following extracts from the old Record of the Windsor Church, taken in connection with the foregoing, leaves no room for doubt on this point. The Record to which I refer is now in possession of the Connecticut Historical Society. It is a copy or rather a compilation from the original Records, and was made about 1670 by Mathew Grant, one of the original members of the Church. After this, from time to time, the doings of the Church are added until the death of Mr. Grant, about 1680. The first pages of this Record Book are somewhat mutilated by the crumbling of the leaves; but enough remains to show why the compiler of this Record did not give us a connected history of the Church from its organization, but only designed to give a record of "Church things in general [as they have occurred since our] first settling down here in Windsor, * * * and because the Elders of the Church have [a Record ?] of Church proceedings in some things, * * * therefore in such things as [there] be to speak to, I shall set down here in the [or]der I can. Concerning the admission of per[sons to] full communion, I could give account of [all, but] judge there is no need of such as are dead and gone from us to other places."

At the head of the list of members a part of two lines are still legible, "were so in Dorchester, and came up here with Mr. [Warham] and still are of us," then follows a list of 17 male and 7 female members, and on the next page over the column of the names of the male members we read, "[Men tha]t have been taken [into fu]ll communion since we [cam]e here. I set them down [acc]ording to the year and [da]y of the month they were [adm]itted and now remain;" over the other column, "Women admitted here." Near the close of the record is another list of members, headed "The account of persons taken into Church communion, and years when, that are now living, December 21, 1677."

"Only yet living that came from Dorchester in full communion;" then follows a list of nine males.—"Women from Dorchester," a list of six.—"Men taken in here,"—"Women taken in here."

It now remains to show that this Church has not since lost its identity. It has been claimed that the First Church in Hartford is the oldest Church in Connecticut in which the ordinances have been regularly administered. This claim probably originated from the Record Book, from which I have quoted. It says: "Here I set down the times of sacraments administered. January 1669-70, a sacrament; which the Church has not had 2 years and 12 weeks." This was but two and a half months before Mr. Warham's death. It is evident from the Record, which is continued seven years and a half after the above date, that it was not the practice of the Church at that time to have stated communion seasons. The intervals range from "7 weeks" to "28 weeks." Our explanation of the withholding the administration of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, for more than two years, is as follows: In the fall of 1667 the Church, in consequence of "Mr. Warham becoming ancient," sent to the Pastors of Boston, Dorchester and Cambridge, soliciting their assistance in procuring a suitable person for a colleague, and they recommended the Rev. Nathaniel Chancey.

There was a want of unanimity among the people on the question of giving Mr. Chancey a call: and the Legislature then in session came forward in its wisdom to settle the difficulty, ordering a meeting of the Freemen and householders of Windsor, on the Monday following, to vote for or against giving Mr. Chancey a call, and forbid "all discourse and agitation" at said meeting, of such "matters as may provoke or disturb the spirits of each other." The result of that ballot was 86 votes for, and 52 against, calling Mr. Chancey. The minority now appeal to the Legislature and obtain an order authorizing them to procure another minister for themselves; and liberty was granted to the Church to settle Mr. Chancey.

Chancey for 86, against 52
vs. Woodbridge

The next May, 1668, Mr. Warham inquires whether the Legislature intended to authorize any of members of the Church to withdraw, which was answered affirmatively. At the next session, in the fall of 1668, a Council of four ministers was designated to meet the April following, and "settle an accommodation between the Church and the dissenting brethren in Windsor, if they can attain to it;" and in the mean time any might "without offence," attend the seperate meetings held by the minority (who had obtained the services of Rev. Mr. Woodbridge). The Council was unsuccessful, and in the fall of 1669 the dissenting brethren were authorized by the Legislature to gather themselves in a separate Church. This permission was doubtless acted upon before the 16th of the January following, which comprised the whole interval of "2 years and 12 weeks," during all which time we have shown, the shield of the civil authority was held over the refractory members, and they were now by the same authority removed from the membership of Mr. Warham's Church.

During this interval the Church sustained Mr. Warham and a colleague; had regular services on the Sabbath and Lecture days, received members under the Half Way Covenant, and baptized children. Mr. Warham, his two deacons and 22 others of the original members, and about 70 admitted here, were at the close of this period in good and regular standing; and if the omission of the sacrament, under these circumstances, constitutes an irregularity, it by no means disbanded the Church, but tends, when taken in connection with subsequent events, to prove rigid adherence to the principles of the Congregational Order, and the practice of uncompromising discipline.

That the old Church was not swallowed up in the new, we have abundant proof. In January, 1678, a Mutual Council was called by the two churches. That Council advised "that the two congregations reunite, and walk together in the same way and order, and this way of order whereunto they shall meet in their future walk, shall be the known and settled walk of the First Church, which we understand to be the Congregational way of Church Order." That "those who were originally members of the First Church be admitted; and those who after the division joined the new Church, be examined, if there was any objection to them, by the Rev. Mr. Rowlandson and Rev. Mr. Hooker," neighboring ministers. The next August the Second Church send a communication to the First Church, stating their understanding of the Council to be, that they be received in a body, "without any trial of their fitness by the Church." The Church voted that "they understood the Council's act otherwise, and should wait the Council's session for the clearing up of the matter," July 1, 1680. The Court of Assistants "prohibit all distinct meetings on the Sabbath and public days." It appears from that Order that the Second Church had complied in part with the advice of Council. And it afterwards appears that part of those who separated from the First Church, had returned to her communion. October 1680, the Legislature ordered that the Society shall unite with the First on the terms proposed by the Council of 1668; both of the former ministers [Mr. Chancey and Mr. Woodbridge], to be released, and a new one sought." Then the Second Church complain to the Legislature, that the First Church will not abide by the advice of said Council. "Our communicants are not entertained, or objected against [if they had been objected against they could have applied to Messrs. Rowlandson and Hooker for certificates of their Orthodoxy], neither we or our minister could enjoy communion in sacraments, nay the sacrament was put by, that we might not."

Finally, at the May session of 1682, the Legislature, "upon application of the Church of Windsor, respecting the difficulties they met with in the settlement of Mr. Mather [to whom they had given a call], all former orders and endeavors not being effectual to remove the impediment that lies still in the way, that the matter of union may be plainly stated, which is now mainly impedimenting to them, this Court see cause to declare their ready owning the said Church, in the quiet practice of their professed principles in point of order, and that the forementioned union be carried on in manner following, viz: That Mr. Mather being in due time called and settled in office by the Church of Windsor, thereupon such of the Second Society as desire fellowship with them in all ordinances (excepting those that were formerly in communion with that Church, that are returned, or to return to the same standing in it), address themselves to Mr. Mather; and having satisfied him about their experimental knowledge, and the grounds of that satisfaction by him declared to the Church to their acceptance, with encouraging testimony given in reference to their conversation, they be thereupon admitted."

Thus ended a sad division which had continued through fifteen years, mainly stimulated, I think, by the mistaken sympathy of the civil authority. From that time there needs no citing of authorities, to show the continued existence of this church, and that "the ordinances have been regularly administered." Its present Confession of Faith bears internal evidence of its antiquity, and its orthodoxy. If I am not in error, the present Congregational Church in Windsor is the oldest Evangelical Church in America; and, except the Southwark Church, London, the oldest Orthodox Congregational Church in the world.

ARTICLE II.

MESSRS. EDITORS—Since the appearance of Mr. Carlton's article in the Puritan Recorder of April 5th, any farther presentation of the claim of the present Church in Windsor to precedence, may appear of secondary importance. But whatever present or future research may prove respecting other churches of earlier organization, I wish, if you can give me farther space in your columns, to establish one point in the history of the Church in Windsor, which has been called in question, viz: its removal, with its original organization, from Dorchester, Mass., to Connecticut.

The following extract is from the Life of Richard Mather, published with the sanction of his son, Rev. Increase Mather, in 1670, the very year of Mr. Warham's death, and but thirty-five years after the date of the event in question, when there was no lack of living witnesses. There were still living twenty-four members of the church in Windsor, who "were so in Dorchester, and came up here with Mr. [Warham] and still are of us." Captain Roger Clap, and probably others who came from England with Mr. Warham and his people, and remained in Dorchester, were also living.

"Being thus by a mighty hand and an outstretched arm brought into New England, motions from sundry towns were soon presented to him, desiring that he would employ the talent which the Lord had enriched him with for the work of the ministry amongst them; at the same time he was desired at Plymouth, Dorchester and Roxbury. Being in a great strait in his own mind, which of these invitations to accept of; considering that in difficult cases counsel is an ordinance of God, whereby he is wont to discover his will, he therefore referred himself to the advice of some judicious friends, amongst whom Mr. Cotton and Mr. Hooker were chief, who met to consult this weighty affair; and their advice was, that he should accept of the motion from Dorchester, which, being accordingly accepted of by him, he did (by the help of Christ) set upon that great work of gathering a Church; the Church which was first planted in that place being removed with the Rev. Mr. Warham to Connecticut. There was an essay towards gathering a Church, April 1, 1636; but by reason that the messengers of neighboring churches were not satisfied concerning some that were intended members of that foundation, the work was deferred until August 23, when a Church was constituted in Dorchester according to the order of the Gospel by Confession and Profession of Faith; and Mr. Mather was chosen Teacher of that Church."

Blake's Annals of Dorchester, dated 1750 (the year of the author's death), 115 years after the removal of Mr. Warham and his people to Connecticut, states that "Mr. Warham and about half ye Church removed to Windsor, in Connecticut Colony, and Mr. Mather and his people came and joined with Mr. Maverick, and that half of ye Church that were left, and from these people so united are ye greatest part of ye present inhabitants descended. When these two companies of people were thus united, they made one Church, having ye sd Rev. Mr. John Maverick, and ye sd Rev. Mr. Richard Mather for their Pastors."

This statement taken in connection with the fact, that Mr. Warham and Mr. Maverick were installed Pastor and Teacher over the old Church before they left England, has seemed to militate against the evidence presented to sustain the claim that the old Church did remove to Connecticut in its organized capacity. But the author of the Annals was certainly in error respecting Mr. Maverick's connection with the new Church; for Winthrop shows that he had been dead more than six months when the new Church was formed, and I think the author little nearer the truth in the statement, that half the old Church remained in Dorchester.

I am, perhaps, presuming too much to ask space to extend this communication farther, and certainly am stepping beyond my original design to attempt a criticism on the evidence adduced to prove the identity of the present Church in West Barnstable, and that gathered by Henry Jacob in 1616.

It appears from Mr. Carleton's article, that unless his claim is valid, the far famed Congregational Church of Southwark, London, became extinct long before the question of precedence possessed any interest. Whatever partiality rival claimants may feel for the precedence of the churches whose claims they present, few will, without regret, accept the latter alternative.

Mr. Carleton, with so much ingenious plausibility disposes of the extract from Winthrop, which disproved the former claim that Mr. Lothrop was still pastor of that church at the time of his arrival in New England, that I feel some reluctance in saying, that to my mind, his supposition relative to the pastor, applies with equal force to the Church. If the Church was imprisoned with its pastor, and it was a condition of his release, or a matter of expediency, that his pastoral relation should be severed from the Church of his affections, his prayers and his labors, would not the same reasons require the disbanding of the Church, to facilitate the release of its individual members?

Again, Mr. Carleton after quoting from Mr. Lothrop: "Upon the 23d of November, 1634, our brethren of Scituate that were members at Plymouth were dismissed from their membership, in case they joined in a body at Scituate;" and goes on to say: "But was there a Church in Scituate on the 5th of October, one week after Mr. Lothrop arrived there, although those who were connected with the Plymouth Church had not at that time received their letters of dismission? According to Winthrop, there was a church there even then; for he says 'He (Lothrop) went to Scituate, being desired to be their pastor.' Mr. Lothrop had then, on the 5th of October, 1634, been invited to be the pastor of a church in Scituate, before the persons residing there, but belonging to the Plymouth Church, had obtained letters of dismission from their churches." To show that the quotation from Winthrop does not of itself prove a church organization at Scituate, I need but refer to the foregoing extract from the life of Richard Mather, from which it appears that "he was desired" "for the work of the ministry" in "sundry towns," and "being in a great strait in his own minde which of these invitations to accept of," the advice of his friends was "that he should accept of the motion from Dorchester, which being accordingly accepted of by him, he did, by the help of Christ, set upon that great work, of gathering a Church." Mr. Mather's call was certainly as definite as Mr. Lothrop's. Neither does the fact, that "none from the Plymouth Church," "Mr. Heatherly, who was the father of Scituate, and Mr. Cudworth, at whose house the first Church Fast was held, appear among those who, "Upon January 8, 1634, joined in covenant together," but united with the Church afterwards, give us any positive proof that the said covenanting together of "so many of us as had been in covenant before," was not the organization of a new church; for, at the organization of the New Church in Dorchester by Mr. Mather (which occurred a few months later), but seven individuals united to form the church, even the name of Roger Clap, who had been "on the ground" five years, a member of Mr. Warham's Church, does not appear among the original members. And, besides, the inference Mr. Carleton draws from the time the Plymouth brethren united with the church, suggests the inquiry, Why did they hold their letters of dismission so long if there was a church in Scituate previous to November 23d?

In the extracts from Mr. Lothrop's Record of Church days of Humiliation, which Mr. Carleton has given (January 8th, and that after the removal to Barnstable), there appears more difference in the wording than the same author is likely to make in recording "similar ceremonies."

Once more, Mr. Carleton says, "Mr. Lothrop has recorded two Church Fasts previous to the 8th of January, which he numbers 1, 2." "By numbering these days, and putting them in the list of Church Fasts, which amounted in Scituate to twelve, and in Barnstable to twenty or more, he clearly indicates that the church existed and acted as such before January 8, 1634, O. S., or before the day when they renewed covenant." I have nothing positive with which to break the force of this apparently positive testimony, and must still reply by referring to analagous cases, where we know a contrary construction is the true one. A few years since several members of the church in Windsor, residing in this village, and three members of other churches, met to make preliminary arrangements for the organization of a new church, which organization was consummated a few weeks after. Are the proceedings of that meeting out of place on our Church Records, and under the head of "Proceedings of the Church?" The well known faith and zeal of Mr. Lothrop and his people would have led us to expect, that, after setting down in the wilderness at Scituate, they would have observed "days of Humiliation," before January 8th, even though the people, as well as pastor, were "not then in order;" and if any record remained we should expect to find it with the record of like days after the formal organization of their church.

It will be said my objections to the proofs offered to sustain the claims of the church in West Barnstable to precedence are all negative; but are some of the vital points of the proofs free from a like objection?

In the present state of the question I see no necessity for abandoning the claim that the Church in Windsor is the oldest Orthodox Congregational Church in America. I regret that in this discussion the Church in Windsor had not an able champion. I am not even a member of the Church in Windsor; but a motive for my volunteer efforts may be formed in the fact, that I am proud to trace my descent from the first Pastor of that Church, the Deacon, and several of the members "who came up from Dorchester in full communion." Six generations of my ancestors have lived and died in that communion, and "my friends and kindred" still "inherit the land, and dwell therein." There I made a public profession of my faith in "the God of my Fathers;" and from thence I consented (though with deep regret) to ask, with others, a letter of dismission, and commendation "to the Council to be convened at Windsor Locks, for the purpose of organizing said members into a Church."

J. H. HAYDEN.

Windsor Locks, Ct., June, 1855.

At the conclusion of the discussion, the editor of the Recorder summed up as follows:

The Oldest Church.

Before we made our recent statement, as to the Church in Lynn being the oldest Church, we were aware that the First Church in Hartford—several years younger than that in Lynn—claimed to be, and we supposed was conceded to be, the oldest Church in Connecticut. We have not the means of settling the question between Hartford and Windsor. That in Hartford confidently rests in the conclusion that she is the oldest. If her claim is well founded, the priority of Lynn is established. But if gentlemen in Hartford and Windsor, living nearer the sources of original information, cannot settle the question, it would hardly be modest in us to assume to do it.

Then as to the other point, whether the Windsor Church, removing from Dorchester, removed in an organized capacity—that it voted in Church meeting to remove as a Church—and carried with them their Church Records, formally dismissing those left behind, and continuing to keep their Records, as the same Church—more light is required. It is true that, both here and at Cambridge, after the removal of some of the first settlers to Connecticut with their ministers, another organization of the Church was had. For new immigrants had come in, and purchased the houses and lands of those migrating to Connecticut; and so great was the change of people, that there would be occasion for a re-construction of the Church, whether the people who left went in an organized body, or were organized anew in their new field.

We were led to conclude, from what Cotton Mather says that they did organize anew in Connecticut. Speaking of those Connecticut transplants, he says, of this and that one, that it "removed and became a Church" in Connecticut. Of the emigrants to Windsor he says, "They removed and became a Church." It was on this authority that we based our former position. But since we have had occasion to examine the matter more critically, we have came to the conclusion that Mather uses a looseness of expression here; not intending to inform us whether the Church organization was transferred. Otherwise he would contradict himself; for in one passage he tells us, that the Dorchester people moved and became a Church in Windsor, and in another, that the Church planted in Dorchester was transplanted to Windsor. In one place he tells us that Stone and Hooker went as Colleagues to Hartford; and, in another, that Stone was ordained Teacher of the Church at Hartford. Mather uses such vagueness of speech about the whole matter, that his testimony is of little or no value either way.

As to the evidence produced by Mr. Hayden, in his very acceptable article, it proves clearly, that another Church was organized at Dorchester. Of this we were well aware; but the expression, "a large part of the old one being gone to Conn.," would seem to indicate that the Church itself did not go. The difficulty about all the documents relating to this subject is, that the writers seem to have treated the question, as to the preservation of the original organization, as a matter of little consequence; while they state the fact of the removal, and so use expressions which may be construed either way. This defect appears in Mr. Hayden's extracts from the mutilated Compilation of Records. The writer might have said the things there cited in either case. Still we are not certain that there may not be proofs extant somewhere, which will definitely settle this question; and if any of our readers know of such proofs, we should be grateful for the communication of them. * *

Meanwhile, considering nothing upon these points to be definitely settled, we will, in order to be sure that we tread on no one's toes, for the present modify our position; and say that the Church in Lynn is the oldest Orthodox Congregational Church in Massachusetts, and the oldest remaining in its position, or place of its planting, of any in the country.

The Presbyterianism of the Earlier Churches of New England.

The Presbyterian Quarterly, for January, 1859, in a review of a recent issue of the German press entitled: "The New England Theocracy — a History of Congregationalism in New England to the Revivals of 1740. By H. F. Uhden, with a preface by the late Dr. Neander," makes the following remarks:

> As to the constitution of the individual Church in the early history of New England, it was Presbyterian rather than Congregational. This was the case with the mother Church of Leyden, of which Robinson was Pastor, and Brewster a Ruling Elder. They seem to have borrowed their ideas of the proper and Scriptural organization of an individual church, with scarce a modification, from the writings of Calvin. In the French Reformed Church, as is well known, the principles of the Genevese Reformer were more perfectly and constantly carried out than in Geneva itself, and it is to the French Reformed Churches that the Leyden Church refers as the pattern from which they had drawn. In response to certain honorable members of His Majesty's Privy Council, Robinson and Brewster reply under their own signatures to the effect that "touching the ecclesiastical ministry, namely of pastors for teaching, elders for ruling, and deacons for distributing the Church contribution, as also for the two sacraments, &c., we do wholly and in all points agree with the French Reformed churches, according to their public confession of faith." They add that some small differences were to be found in their practice, but such only as were "in some accidental circumstances," and "not at all in the substance of the things." Yet in specifying these differences, they say, "We choose none for governing elders but such as are 'apt to teach.'" "Their elders are annual, &c., ours perpetual." "Our elders administer their office publicly, theirs more privately." These are the only matters of difference between themselves and the French Reformed Churches, to which they refer in connection with the form of government or the constitution of the individual church.
> That this distinction between the pastor and ruling elder was one not merely of name, is obvious from a variety of evidence. After the branch of the Leyden Church, which had removed to Plymouth, had remained some years without a pastor, waiting the arrival of Mr. Robinson, Brewster, the ruling elder, and a man eminently "apt to teach," wished to know of Mr. Robinson whether it were permissible for him to administer the Sacraments. The reply of Robinson: is "Now touching the question propounded by you, I judge it not lawful for you, being a ruling elder (as Rom. xii, 7, 8, and 1 Tim., v, 17), opposed to the elders that teach and exhort and labor in word and doctrine, to which the sacraments are annexed, to administer them, ~~nor~~ convenient if it were lawful." Again, in his reply to Bernard, he says, "The contrary to that which you affirm is to be seen of all men in our Confession of Faith, Art. 34, wherein it is held, that 'no sacraments are to be administered until pastors or teachers be ordained to their office.'" Still again he says: "We believe and confess that the elders which Christ hath left in His Church are to govern the same in all things, provided always the nature of ecclesiastical government be not exceeded, according to the laws by Him prescribed, and that the brethren are most straitly bound to obey them." And once more to the same purport, he holds that "the flock, both severally and jointly, is to obey them that have the oversite over them."
>
> In accordance with such views the Leyden Church was constituted. They were of course reflected in the Constitution of the Plymouth Church in this country. As to the church in Salem, Hubbard says there is no small evidence that they took their model from the Plymouth Church. To its constitution and covenant reference was often made. Mr Cotton's charge at Hampton was that they should take advice of them at Plymouth, and Gov. Winslow wrote of others, "they will do nothing without our advice." Baillie says, the settlers did "agree to model themselves after Mr. Robinson's pattern," and Cotton speaks of "the Plymouth Church helping the first comers in their theory, by hearing and discovering their practice at Plymouth." The only point which we find specified in regard to which the other churches diverged from those of Plymouth, is that "they of Massachusetts choose mere ruling elders — that is, as not necessarily 'apt to teach,'— and gave them authoritative power." It would seem therefore that in the Leyden Church we are to find the recognized model of the early New England churches.
>
> The Cambridge Platform (1648) thus recognizes the Presbyterian Constitution of the Church. It says: "Of elders, some attend chiefly to the ministry of the Word, as the pastors and teachers; others attend especially unto rule, who are therefore called ruling elders." Again: "The ruling elder's office is distinct from the office of pastor and teacher." His "work is, to join with the pastor in those acts of spiritual rule which are distinct from the ministry of the Word and Sacraments." Among the specified duties, are admission of members; convening the church; "preparing matters in private" for "more speedy dispatch," &c.
> The government of the Church, moreover, is according to the Platform, vested in "its Presbytery" of elders. "The Holy Ghost frequently — yea always — where it mentioned Church rule and Church government, ascribeth it to elders." This government of the Church is "a mixed Government," but "in respect of the Presbytery and the power committed unto them, it is an aristocracy."
> In accordance with these principles the greater part of the early New England churches were established. In Plymouth Colony the choice was not, as

Joseph Gillet was member #218 of The First Congregational Church, Simsbury, Connecticut in February 1785. He married (1) Mary Rowe, daughter of Abijah^4 (Samuel^3, Peter^2, Hugh^1) and Deborah (Forward) Rowe of Simsbury, Conn. Date of their marriage is not known. Mary (Rowe) Gillet was born 26 July 1762, and died 11 January 1806, at Granby, Connecticut.(30) Joseph Gillet served in the Revolutionary War with the 18th Regt. Connecticut Militia with Captain Samuel Hayes' Co. Colonel Pettibone's Regt. (Rev. War Pension File #W7524) One wonders if Joseph Gillet and his family left Conn. because of Joseph's ex-communication from the Church 30 October 1812, for failure to attend services. In any event, about 1817, Joseph Gillet bought land in Delaware County, Ohio, and moved to the frontier with his sons and daughters and their families, settling at Norton, Delaware County, Ohio. (Deed book E, Delaware Co., Ohio - to Joseph Gillet, 650 acres of U.S. Military Lands, dated 1 September 1817).

WYATT CEMETERY, Waldo Township, Marion County, Ohio
(formerly part of early Delaware County)

Inscriptions copied Oct.21,1949 by Clara G.Mark, 270 South State Street, Westerville, Ohio. She was assisted by her sister Mary Mark.

This cemetery is about a half mile north of the present Delaware County line, and about three miles south of the Greenville Treaty Line or "Indian Line". It was the burial place for Fort Morrow that stood close to the trail that ran north to Lake Erie. Land for the graveyard is said to have been given by Nathaniel Wyatt, whose home was included within the stockade of Fort Morrow. It was the earliest burial place in this neighborhood and was used by the Wyatts, Brundiges and some other early families. Lately there has been some moving of graves because of the storage reservoir formed by the Delaware Dam on the Olentangy River., but most of the cemetery is above the encroachment of the river. The place had considerable care and is in good condition. A complete record of inscriptions was attempted, but some of the graves are placed irregularly, making it difficult to be sure of every one. Some graves have no markers, and a few are so weathered as to be difficult to read or even illegible.

- born	ca 1787 See p.61 1789-90	Granby, Connecticut
- married	16 Mar 1813	SUSANNAH BURR(30)
- died	16 Dec 1843	Norton, Ohio(23)

Amasa Gillet and Susannah Burr were married in the First Congregational Church, Granby, Connecticut. Amasa and his brother, Joseph Jr., sold 60 acres of land in the First Society, Granby, Connecticut on 1 February 1817, that their honored father, Joseph Gillet, had granted to them. (Granby, Connecticut Land Record 2C, Volume II, pp 423). Amasa Gillet then bought 202 acres of U S Military Lands (Range 19, twp. 2, sec. 2, lot 2) at Delaware County, Ohio 1 September 1817, for the sum of $1010.00, from Thomas Case, Calvin Barber and Benjamin Ely of Simsbury, Connecticut. (Deed book 4, pp 84, Delaware County, Ohio). In 1826, Amasa Gillet owned a horse and three cows and his land was valued for taxes at $138.00. A Chancery Record 11-152, dated 1851, Delaware County, Ohio names the following heirs of Amasa Gillet - Homer; Emeline Warren, wife of Lyman; Elvira; and Julius, a minor; Susannah Edgerton, wife of Jefferson, late Susannah, widow of Amasa Gillet. Susannah (Burr) Gillet is thought to be the daughter of Zebina and Rosannah (Dibble) Burr of Granby, Connecticut and a descendant of René Cossitt of Granby. Zebina, son of Adonijah Burr, of Bloomfield, Connecticut was baptized on 15 December 1741, and died 10 November 1842, at Granby, Conn. Zebina Burr was a pensioner of the Revolutionary War, File #16064. Susannah (Burr) Gillet married (2) on 18 July 1845, Jefferson Edgerton, widower, of Delaware County, Ohio(25) but formerly of Granby. No trace of Susannah and Jefferson Edgerton was found after the 1850 census of Delaware County, Ohio.

SOME NOTES ON THE EARLY OHIO LAND GRANTS

THE REFUGEE TRACT was granted in 1801 to sympathizers with the patriot cause in the Revolutionary War, who as such, had been refugees from Cananda and Nova Scotia. However, only a small portion of the land set aside was ever claimed by the refugees.

THE FRENCH GRANT William Duer, Secretary of the Board of the Treasury of the United States, set on a scheme of settlement in the Ohio Company Purchase with the intention of selling the lots overseas in exchange for American sercurities, which were worthless at the time, speculating their future redemption by the U.S. Government. He sent Joel Barlow to London where he teamed up with William Playfair as the "Compagnie du Scioto". The speculative fever ran high in France before the bubble burst, but not before five or six hundred persons had set sail for America.

The problem was further complicated by an inaccurate survey of the town of Gallipolis which put the land being sold in the Scioto purchase outside the area which it had an option too.

A second problem was the fact that Duer did not have the capital for the first payment on the option to the Scioto Purchase, and the Scioto Company did not receive title to the land being sold.

To compensate the immigrants who were settled in America, Congress granted a parcel of land opposite of Gallipolis in 1795 for those who had been swindled. However, most elected to remain on the land where they had originally settled, and paid a second time for their land.

THE SYMMES PURCHASE John Cleves Symmes petitioned Duer to aid in the purchase of 1 million acres of land between the Great and Little Miami Rivers, as the Board of the Treasury had denided a petition for a grant of all land between the two rivers. On October 15, 1788, Mr. Symmes received a contract for a grant of 1 million acres between the two rivers.

In 1794 a patent was signed by President Washington for 248,500 acres of land already sold. But as Symmes in his excessive zeal, had already sold land beyond his patent limits, he demanded the full million acres that he had contracted for. He failed to establish his claims and died in extreme poverty in 1814.

THE VIRGINIA MILITARY DISTRICT In surrendering her claim on territory north of the Ohio River in 1784, she reserved a portion of land between the Little Miami and Scioto Rivers to satisfy the bounties for Revolutionary War veterans should there be not sufficient land in Kentucky for this purpose. Few claims were paid with Ohio land; and this is the only section of Ohio that was not surveyed rectangularly into townships and sections, but followed the old system of surveying by landmarks.

It was not infrequent that such a system of surveying often lead to over-lapping claims on certain sections of land.

THE MICHIGAN SURVEY From the Ordance of 1787 and the Enabling Act for Ohio of 1802 arose the basis for a forty-year dispute over the Ohio and Michigan border.

The Ordance of 1787 described the boundary for the upper and lower tiers of states in the Northwest Territory as "an east and west line drawn through the southerly bend or extreme of Lake Michigan." From maps produced by Guillaume DeI'Isle (1755), and later by British mappers, Lewis Evans and John Mitchell, a general belief was that the eastward line would strike at a point north of Maumee Bay; however, a fur trapper later pointed out that this line would lie somewhat more southernly.

And from the organization of the Michigan Territory in 1805, a dispute as to the Ohio-Michigan border raged on. Hence the Ohio constitution held the proviso: "If the southerly bend or extreme of Lake Michigan should extend so far south that a line drawn due east from it should not intersect Lake Erie east of the mouth of the Miami river of the Lakes [the Maumee] then...with the assent of Congress of the United States, the northern boundary of the state shall be established by, and extended to, a direct line from the southern extremity of Lake Michigan to the most northerly cape of the Miami Bay."

The disputed raged for several years with several border clashes between Ohioans and Michigans.

The dispute was finally settled in Congress in 1836, when the Congress granted Ohio the northern boundary that it wanted, and gave to Michigan, 9,000 square miles of upper pennisula.

Michigan got a better deal, land wise, from the dispute, than did Ohio.

FRANKLINTON AND THE STATE CAPITOL The village of Franklinton was established in August 1797 on the west bank of the Scioto River in what is now Franklin County. The village was named in honor of Benjamin Franklin.

In 1816 the Capitol of Ohio was established high on the east bank opposite of Franklinton. The city later became Columbus, Ohio.

THE OHIO COMPANY PURCHASES The Ohio Company was established in 1783, by eleven men. General Samuel H. Parsons was sent to Congress to petition for a grant of land but failed to secure any action. Later, Mannasseh Cutler set the wheels in motion, with the aid of General Arthur St. Clair.

The contract called for two purchases, one of which would be made by the Scioto Company of Duer, which had cast its luck with the Ohio Company.

THE SEVEN RANGES The first official surveying done in Ohio was accomplished by Thomas Hutchins in the fall of 1785, when he began surveying the seven ranges. Four (4) township lines were completed by February 1787, and Congress okayed the start of land sales.

This was the first surveying to be accomplished without regard to geographic considerations, and surveyed the land in rectangular fashion.

THE CONNECTICUT WESTERN RESERVE Connecticut ceded her claims to the Northwest Territories in 1786 to the U.S. with the exception of this small tract of land along the Lake Erie coast, to compensate her Revolutionary War soldiers. The settlers of this region were strongly Anti-Masons, pro-Whig, anit-slavery, anti-Fugitive Slave Law, and strongly favored negro suffrage.

THE FIRE LANDS In 1792, Connecticut granted one-half ($\frac{1}{2}$) million acres at the extreme western end of the Western Reserve (in what is now Erie, Huron, and the northwest corner of Ashland Counties, Ohio) to inhabitants of Connecticut towns whose property was destroyed in Tory raids during the Revolutionary War.

SQUATTER

THE SQUATTERS Squatters were [illegible] took possession of the land beyond settlement that suited them. They were a constant menace to good relations between the Government and the Indians.

By the Treaty of Fort McIntosh in 1785, those persons who settled beyond the boundaries agreed to by the Government and the Indians were deemed outlaws and subject to Indian vengeance.

One John Amerson (or Emerson), a squatter, called upon fellow squatters to meet for a constitutional government and establish a "Squatter Government". It is even suggested that a certain William Hogland set up such a government, although little evidence exists to support such a thesis.

Ohio, in 1849, and died Aug. 26, 1878; have two children living—L. L. and Lola D. The subject of our sketch has held the office of Township Clerk for two years, and while in Waldo Township held the same position for two years; our subject is a gentleman highly esteemed by all who know him.

MRS. JANE KING, Norton; born in Augusta Co., Va., in the year 1799, Jan. 11. Was married in 1823; emigrated to Ohio in 1828, and settled in Marlborough Township with her husband, John King; he was born in Plymouth, England, in 1795; emigrated to America in 1820. Her parents, Richard and Mary (Curry) Brown, were natives of Virginia. In 1828, Mr. King purchased land to the amount of 247 acres, lying a little southeast of Norton; remained on the farm about twenty-three years; in the spring of 1853, he came to the village of Norton, where he remained until his death, March 13, 1857. He was a member of the M. E. Church, of which Mrs. King has been a member for sixty years, and to which, on Dec. 25, 1879, she donated a library of 114 volumes, costing $100.

Colorful character

S. A. OLMSTED was born Dec. 14, 1828, in Franklin Co., Ohio. His father, A. J. Olmsted, was a native of Connecticut, born in Simsbury, Hartford Co., June 11, 1802, and came to Franklin Co., in this State, with his parents, in 1810. His mother, whose maiden name was Eliza Bush, was born June 21, 1806, in Ulster Co., N. Y.; her people emigrated to this State the same year, and located on what is now Marlborough Township. After marriage, and living in Franklin Co. for awhile, they moved to Delaware Co. in 1836. S. A. Olmsted has had varied and extensive experiences, having visited various parts of the globe in his wanderings as a mariner and landsman, of which our space will only permit an outline. Aug. 15, 1849, he left Delaware Co. with a band of sheep, which the owner sold in New Jersey; from there, Mr. Olmsted visited points of interest, and sailed from New Bedford Nov. 5, 1849 on a whaling voyage, passed south along the coast of Brazil, having some perilous experiences in capturing several whales, and with water-spouts, cruised to the coast of Africa around the Cape of Good Hope, up past the Island of Madagascar, off the coast of Arabia, where they captured a whale supposed to be the largest ever captured on that coast, making 230 barrels of oil, returned down through the Indian Ocean to Johanna's Island, where, Mr. Olmsted being dissatisfied with the officers of his ship, escaped by swimming about half a mile, with shovel-nose sharks for company, to the whaling ship Phœnix, homeward bound. On the return voyage, she called at St. Helena for the repairs of damages to the vessel received in a gale; visited Bonaparte's tomb; from there returned directly to New London, Conn.; went to New York, and sailed for New Orleans; then, after three days' stay, he sailed for Liverpool on the Gen. Berry; the eighth day out, the vessel was thrown on her beam's end by a "white squall," they took to the boats, and after three days and three nights without food or drink, were picked up by the Huguenot bound for New Orleans; Mr. Olmsted then returned home; in 1851, he shipped at Cleveland on the the brig Gen. Worth; changed to the schooner Oneida; she was run down by a steamer and water-logged; being loaded with staves, floated; Mr. Olmsted remained on board and run her into Cleveland, for which he received the munificent sum of $1 extra pay; this was in November; spent the winter in Chicago and Racine; in spring and summer he made trips to Green Bay as wheelsman of a steamer; also went down the St. Lawrence River to Ogdensburg, as mate of a schooner, on which he met with an accident, and had three ribs broken; came home in December, 1852. March 10, 1853, he was married to Phebe Gillet; moved to Polk Co., Iowa, and to Adair Co. in 1855; in 1857, to Salt Creek, Neb.; whilst in that section he lived in different localities, and had several adventures with the Indians of an exciting nature; was employed in farming, and scouting some for the Government. In the fall of 1860, he returned to Delaware Co., and May 1, 1861, he enlisted in Co. C, 26th O. V. I.; served seventeen months, and was discharged for disability Oct. 1, 1862; re-enlisted in Co. H, 145th O. N. G., May 2, 1864, but was discharged Aug. 24 of the same year. Mr. Olmsted is now living in Marlborough Township, his old home, as well as that of his wife.

was the man who greeted Capt. Drake in such a cordial manner. He was born in Ireland, and was in the war of 1812. Capt. John Wilcox was a very old settler, and came to Marlborough before the war of 1812. He gained his title in the Revolutionary war, being present at the battles of Saratoga Springs and Stillwater. He was at the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne, and in the severe fighting that preceded that brilliant achievement of the continental arms. It was Capt. Wilcox who, coming into Norton, soon after the news of Drake's defeat, and, seeing a pumpkin that some mischievous wag had placed on a pole, mistook the same for the head of the infant son of Nathaniel Brundige, and spreading that report gave additional wings to the flight of the women and children who were hurrying South.

Faron Case, another pioneer, came to the settlement from the State of Connecticut and after a wearisome and tedious journey, with the usual accident of wagon breaking down, etc., arrived in 1810, and began putting up a cabin and clearing the property now known as the Grady farm situated on the pike road which runs from Delaware to Marion, through Norton. Thomas Brown came to Norton, and built a cabin near Reed's, in 1810. It was also a sort of tavern, but, being of such meager dimensions, it can hardly be dignified by that name. Brown was a blacksmith, the first in the township. James Trindle came to Marlborough Township in 1811, from the State of Virginia. He was engaged by Capt. Drake to haul provisions for his command, and was in the "defeat." It is said that he was the only man that stood his ground, and that if it had not been for the plunging of his horse, he would have killed Drake, by shooting him with his rifle, having fired at him under the supposition that he was the Indian chief. He married Anna Brundige, and by her had two daughters, Elizabeth and Sarah. The former married Joseph C. Cole, and the latter married Hugh Cole. John Brundige, son of Nathaniel Brundige, was born September 10, 1813, on the very day that Commodore Perry gained his great victory on Lake Erie. When he was a babe, his mother having gone a short distance into the woods to do some clearing, he was left in a trough and while the mother's back was turned an Indian squaw seized the child and started toward the river. The mother, seeing her with the child in her arms, gave chase, but she was unable to overtake the fleet child of the forest until she reached the bank of the river, when an old Indian took the child from the squaw and returned it to the mother with a gift of a quarter of venison, asking in return for some bread. The mother returned to the cabin and gave the bread, which they thanked her for, and then departed, having taken this course for the purpose of obtaining their end. John Brundige lives on the farm his father settled upon, and the cabin in which he was born stands just northwest of his residence. Joseph 5 *and James Joseph^6 Gillett came to this township in 1818 and 1819 respectively. They were brothers who emigrated together from Hartford County, Conn. but James remained one year in the State of Pennsylvania, while Joseph came direct to Marlborough Township and settled on a piece of land one mile south of Norton—the farm lately occupied by his son Herold. He was an old Revolutionary soldier and died in 1836. When James Joseph^6 came, he settled just west of Norton, on the farm now owned and occupied by his son Harvey. As soon as their cabins had been built, they began to clear their lands, using oxen to pull out stumps and drag logs. Wolves were very numerous, and the few hogs and sheep had to be shut up every night to be kept from them. Herold was once attacked by them while returning from a fishing excursion, and had to take refuge in an old deserted log cabin, where he remained until morning. They generally succeeded in clearing seven acres a year, after they got one year's deadening. Harvey Gillett cleared for William Hinton, twenty acres at $3 per acre. He alone cut all the timber under eighteen inches, piled the brush and cut the logs for rolling in the short space of thirty-three days.

William Sharp was born, it is said, in Virginia, and from that State came to Ohio with his father, who settled at Marietta, in the beginning of the present century. A few years after, when Sharp had become of age, his father was very anxious that he should study medicine, and for that purpose he bought his son a large number of the medical works which were then authority, and bringing them home, hoped to please his son, but William, to show his disgust for the science and his love for the woods, immediately shouldered his rifle and started for the Indian country. In the course of several months, in the mean time subsisting on the game he shot in the forest, he found himself near Norton; this was about the year 1809. He remained here for two or three years and there joining the army went north to Sandusky. After the war, about 1814, he married Sarah Boyd, an adopted daughter of John Duncan

He now built a cabin for his wife, but, although attached to her, could not resist the temptation of going into the woods on a hunt, and often would, after stocking his cabin with provisions, go on a hunt and be gone for one, two and sometimes three weeks. He was reputed to be the greatest "bee-hunter" that was ever in Marlborough Township, and it was said that he knew the Indian language well. He allowed his roving disposition to control him for several years, but at last he bought sixty acres of land from Joseph Cole, and settled down to a life of domestic happiness. About this time, several relatives of his came to this part of the country and brought to him all the old medical books which his father had bought; he suddenly acquired a taste for the same, and began to read medicine. On entering the practice, it is said that he never would take pay for any service he might render He has been dead for a number of years.

Allen Reed came to this township from Ireland and settled on a piece of land near Norton. He was in the war of 1812 and is now dead. Ariel Strong came and settled on the Olentangy River soon after Foust had built his cabin, as early as 1808. James Livington and wife moved up and settled on the river soon after Strong, and was followed in 1810 by William Hanneman, who came from the State of Kentucky. Both were in the war of 1812. Isaac Bush, Silas Davis, Joseph Curran, all came into what was then Marlborough Township, prior to the war of 1812. They were practical, hard-working farmers, and contributed largely to the growth and improvement of the township. Joseph Cole, Levi and William Hinton, James Norris, Sr., and family, James Wilson, David Dick, James Duncan, Duval, Benjamin Martin came to Marlborough and located in what is now Troy Township, and are noticed in the early settlement of that township. The Duncklebarger brothers were also old settlers. They came from Philadelphia, Penn., and settled just east of Norton in the year 1815. Their names were Peter and Fred, and they were the first communists in a small way in Delaware County, as they owned everything in common. They each had half of the cabin, half of the land, half of the stock, and shared half the products. When they first came to the township, they were both unmarried, but soon after Peter married, and this seemed to cause the first estrangement in the brothers' friendship. Fred still continued to board with his brother's family and everything at least appeared to run as smoothly as of yore, until one winter's day the brothers, with their horses and sleigh, went to the mill at Delaware to have some corn ground; while returning, they, from some cause or other quarreled and both got out, when Fred, taking up an ax, split the sleigh into halves, and each leading his horse and carrying his share of meal, started for home. Fred, soon after this, left his brother's home and built himself a cabin. It is told of Peter that, after being married a number of years and having several children, he determined to have them baptized, and upon his invitation a minister by the name of Hinkle came up from Columbus for the purpose of performing the ceremony. His arrival at the cabin created a great consternation among the children, and they all took to the wood. Upon Hinkle asking Peter how they could be caught and brought into the house, Peter said he didn't know, unless he let his hounds loose and caught them in that way. He was about to carry this plan into execution, when he was stopped by Hinkle. The brothers are both dead, and Peter's family is scattered. Ezekiel Van Horn, another old settler, who did much to improve the township, was a member of the first grand jury. Quite a number came in during 1815 and 1816 Among them were Elisha Bishop, Adin Winsor, Joseph Bishop, Isaac Stratton, Henry Coldren, Elisha Williams, George Jefferies, Thomas Rogers and L. H. Hall.

William Brundige was the first minister in the township, and preached in the cabin of the first settlers. Drs. Spaulding and Lamb of Delaware were the first physicians that entered the settlement in a professional capacity. The first birth was William, son of Nathaniel Brundige and took place December 3, 1808, and the first death was Ruth Wyatt daughter of Nathaniel Wyatt. The first marriage was that of John Brundige to Phœbe Drake, daughter of the Captain, and occurred in 1811 The first school teacher was Robert Louther A man by the name of Case who was a son-in-law of Col. Kilbourn, and lived in Worthington, offered the first goods for sale in the township. He opened up in Norton and remain there until he had closed out his stock. Nathaniel Wyatt was the first Justice of the Peace and the honesty and integrity with which he decided all his cases is well known even to the present day in this section of the country. Thomas Jefferies was the first Postmaster, and kept his office at Norton. The introduction of apple-trees into this township was brought about in rather a curious manner.

married to Catharine Block Jan. 31, 1856; they have had born to them five boys and three girls, six of whom are living. Mr. Cole served out a three-years enlistment in the war of the rebellion, as a member of Co. C, 26th O V. Mr. Cole's ability and integrity is recognized in his having been called upon to serve almost continuously as Justice of the Peace since his return from the army.

Mourn not for the hero, though he's your son,
  Mourn not for a soul that's so brave;
Though from this earth his spirit has gone,
  He sleeps in an honorable grave.

His brother stood by him—no less a hero—
  When he fell by the hand of death;
No language can tell the anguish of woe,
  Of a brother who was thus bereft.

His comrades all loved him, he had not a foe,
  His absence is felt with regret;
But angels will be as his friends were below;

Birthplace of Rutherford Birchard Hayes, 19th President U.S.A.

Rutherford and Sophia Birchard Hays came to Delaware, Ohio in 1817 from Dummerston, Vermont. On October 4, 1822, their son, Rutherford Birchard Hayes, was born in this house. It was located on Inlot number 51, on William Street, east of the Post-Office on Inlot number 50. The front of the house is of brick and the rear of wood. This house was used in National Publications at the time of the candidacy of Mr. Hayes for the presidency. The interior woodwork was of fine cherry and walnut, with a beautiful cherry newel post and stair treads. It was genteely furnished, with its Eastern loomed carpet, parlor draperies, glass for lights and freshly whitewashed walls. The large lots afforded the children, Lorenzo, Sarah, Sophia, Fanny and Rutherford, Birchard, plenty of play space and fruit and shade trees.

The father, Rutherford, was a dealer in imported merchandise, a farmer and buyer of lands. He died of the fever on June 6, 1822, only thirty-five years of age.

Sophia, the resourceful mother, organized the first Sunday School in the village, taught a Bible class at the Presbyterian Church and was Treasurer of the Ladies Aid Society. She was a business like manager of her property, buying and selling lands and was helped by her devoted brother, Sardis Birchard.

Among her close friends mentions in her manuscripts, were the Hill's, Van Deman's, Darlington's and the Kilbourne's.

DUMMERSTON, WINDHAM COUNTY, VERMONT

"Ruddy", Rutherford Hayes and Sophia Birchard

In old Vermont, the young people thought Ruddy was quite a "catch," Sophia said, "I will never marry a redhead." One day Sophia went to the store with a bag of rags. Ruddy worked at the store and it was love at first sight. They were soon betrothed. From a store in Brattleboro, Vermont, Ruddy wrote," I love you, Sophia." Sophia dated others. He wrote, "No, Sophia, the lass with the roseate cheeks shall not long be forgotten by the lad with the rubicand hair." Sophia grew up quickly after the sudden death of her mother. They were married on September 13, 1813 in the tavern home at Dummerston, Vermont.

Many of the Vermont families were going West, and by 1815, Ruddy Hayes was on his way to the new Ohio country. By 1817, he had rented a house from his old friend, Moses Byxbe, a co-founder of Delaware, Ohio.

In September 1817, the father and mother of two little children, Lorenzo and Sarah Sophia, left for Ohio. Grandmother Chloe Smith wrote in her dairy, "They have left their native land and gone to the land of strangers."

In Delaware, Rutherford bought lands, sold imported merchandise and was a partner of Dr. Reuben Lamb, as owners of a whiskey distillery on the run near the Sulphur Springs.

Ruddy died of the fever while working lands on the Sandusky plains. His new child, Rutherford Birchard, "Rud", was a posthumous baby.

Rutherford also owned a farm north of Delaware.

Their close neighbors in Delaware included the Sweetser's of Dummerston, Vermont.

ADRIAN MONTHLY MEETING

Adrian Monthly Meeting was set off from Farmington Monthly Meeting, New York, on 6th Mo. 28, 1831. All friends in southern Michigan belonged to this one monthly meeting until Raisin Monthly Meeting was set off from Adrian Monthly Meeting in 8th Mo. 1842. Raisin Preparative Meeting was a transplanted body of believers from Royalton, Niagara County, New York, who emigrated en masse to Michigan. Three of the leading families were those of Charles Haviland, Josuah Beaverman and Sylvanus Westgate.

After belonging to New York Yearly Meeting for all these years and realizing the distance and difficulty attending it, a delegation was appointed in 1868 to attend Ohio Yearly Meeting with the thought of attaching themselves to this body. They were welcomed by the Yearly Meeting and were joined to Ohio Yearly Meeting in 1869. The place of the monthly meeting was about three and a half miles from the city of Adrian, in Adrian Township, later known as Raisin Valley.

In 1849 these Friends appointed a committee to solicit funds for the establishment of a Friends School. The school was opened on 12th Mo. 10, 1850, and was incorporated under the name Raisin Valley Seminary. It continued in operation until 1908.

M HOMER GILLET[7] (Amasa[6], Joseph[5], Joseph[4], Benjamin[3], John[2], Jonathan[1])
5th cousin of Moses Austin

- born 18 Nov 1824 Delaware Co., Ohio
- married 31 Dec 1845 ELIZABETH THOMAS(25)
- died 18 Dec 1904 Gridley, Kansas(15)
- buried - Teachout Cemetery, Gridley, Coffey Co. Kans.

Elizabeth Thomas was born 8 September 1824, Ohio - probably Butler County - and died 8 June 1901 at Gridley, Kansas. It is thought Elizabeth was the daughter of Morgan (War 1812) and Mary A. Thomas of Norton, Delaware Co., Ohio-listed in the 1840 census. Her parents, according to the 1880 census, were both born in Pennsylvania. Family tradition is Elizabeth had Welsh, French and Indian ancestors. She was a petite woman, with black sparkling eyes and jet black hair, a very beautiful lady.

Elizabeth and Homer Gillet and their children left Ohio ca 1855, moving to some place in The Missouri Territory or in what is now Nebraska. After a short time they moved on because of malaria, and settled at Gridley, Kansas as a deed was recorded at Burlington, Coffey County, Kansas on 26 January 1860, for 120 acres of land (range 14, twp. 22, sec. 8, Deed Book Volume G, 29), this land they bought from Mr. Henry Moore. Elizabeth and Homer gave a parcel of land for the school and this was known as the Gillet School or District #25. Homer Gillet was a small, slender, mild mannered man, and in his later years wore his white hair in a long bob. All his friends called him "The Connecticut Yankee." Elizabeth and Homer Gillet and their sons, Wilson and Benjamin, are buried in the Teachout Cemetery which is located on the high Prairie of Kansas which they helped open to civilization.

- born 25 Nov 1849 Delaware Co., Ohio
- married 1 Jan 1876 ARLETTA C. ROCKHILL Gridley, Kansas(15)
- died 9 Apr 1892 Gridley, Kansas(15)
- buried - Teachout Cemetery, Gridley, Kansas(15)

Wilson P. Gillet and his two brothers, Freeman and Francis, attended the Gillet (district #25) school. It was here they met the Rockhill girls, Arletta C. and Ladema A., daus. of Adonijah Peacock and Susannah (Parker) Rockhill. Arletta Catherine Rockhill was born 16 October 1854, near Rockport, Allen County, Ohio. With her father, step-mother and family she made the trip from Ohio to Kansas in a covered wagon ca 1872. Arletta (Rockhill) Gillet married (2) 2 June 1893, James M. Shankland, widower, Civil War Confederate Soldier. She died 26 December 1931, at Burlington, Ks. and is buried in the Big Creek Presbyterian Cemetery near Crotty, Kansas. ⑦ Homer Gillet^{7} father of Wilson, had a contract with the government to carry mail via "Pony Express" from Hampden (now Burlington), Kansas to Eldorado, Kansas. His three sons, ⑧ Freeman^{9}, Wilson and Francis, took turns riding their pony on this route. On the way they crossed three rivers, the Verdigris, Fall and Walnut. This was many years before there were roads or bridges across the streams. Traveling at night they might see the flickering light of one or two farm homes. Wilson Gillet was choir leader and superintendent of the locah Church and was active in politics. He and his brother-in-law, Leslie Rockhill, built his home northwest of Gridley about 1888, and it is still being used as a home today, (1970).

Dear Ms. Dodd:

According to the Adjutant General's Civil War records, Homer Gillett served as a private in Puffer's Independent Company, Kansas State Militia. This company was mustered into active service for a short period of time, October 12 - 16, 1863. (H. W. Gillett was a private in Co. D, 2nd Battalion, Kansas State Militia, but there is no evidence this unit saw actual service.)

decorations for the Assembly chamber of the Capitol at Albany, N. Y. These paintings, "The Discoverer," and "The Flight of Night," were each sixteen by forty feet in dimension; they were in oil colors, and were painted directly on the stone walls. The work had to be done swiftly and under trying conditions. Unhappily the panels have been ruined by the dampness of the walls. They were the most important and perhaps the best mural paintings that had been done in America up to that time. Hunt's death occurred in the Isles of Shoals, off the New Hampshire coast. He was drowned in a pool near Celia Thaxter's cottage. It is generally believed that it was a case of suicide.

HUNT, WILSON PRICE (1782?–April 1842), commander of the Astoria overland expedition, was born in Hopewell, N. J., the son of John P. and Margaret (Guild) Hunt, and a descendant of John Hunt who settled in that village soon after 1700. He moved to St. Louis in 1804, and on Dec. 18 was chosen a member of the village's first grand jury. With John Hankinson as partner he conducted a general store until June 10, 1809. He had then doubtless already engaged himself to Astor, for he soon afterward left for New York. Early in 1810, as a partner of the Pacific Fur Company, he arrived in Montreal, and with another partner, Donald McKenzie, began to organize the expedition. Passing through St. Louis in September, he established a winter camp near the present St. Joseph. On Apr. 21, 1811, with Hunt as sole commander, the party started up the river. At the Arikara villages Hunt abandoned the river route, and with his company partly mounted struck out westward. On reaching the Snake he made the blunder of loosing his horses and attempting to navigate the river. Baffled by the turbulent stream, the company broke up into several groups, which after experiencing extreme privations straggled into Astoria during the fore part of 1812. On Aug. 4 of that year, to negotiate and trade with the Russian-American Company, Hunt sailed in the Beaver for New Archangel, Alaska, where he delivered his cargo of goods to A. A. Baranov [q.v.], receiving in return a load of sealskins. From New Archangel the Beaver sailed for Canton by way of the Sandwich Islands, where Hunt left the ship. Learning of the declaration of war with Great Britain he chartered the Albatross and returned to Astoria, more than a year after his departure, to find that his partners had already arranged to sell the post to the North West Company. Though protesting against the act, he did not remain to oppose its consummation, but again sailed for the Sandwich Islands, not returning until nearly two months after the capture of the fort by a British gunboat. On Apr. 3, 1814, he left the Columbia for the last time.

He returned to St. Louis, resumed business, and became prosperous. About 1819, aided by Astor, he bought a large tract of land eight miles southwest of the city, where he established a farm and erected a gristmill. In the spring of 1820 he was an unsuccessful candidate for delegate to the constitutional convention. In September 1822 he was appointed postmaster of St. Louis, a place he retained for eighteen years. He was married, Apr. 20, 1836, to Anne (Lucas) Hunt, widow of his cousin Theodore. Though a leading citizen of St. Louis and held in high esteem by those who knew him, he was not popular, and his defeat in the election of 1820, when his party won a signal victory, was humiliating. His conduct of his own business appears in strong contrast with his management of the Astoria enterprise. Chittenden, who says he was not the man for the place, credits him with loyalty to his chief, but with "not much else." On the journey he made a series of irreparable blunders, and as chief factor of the trading post he seems to have played directly into the hands of Astor's enemies.

Meanwhile, the furious Indians scoured the riverbanks for him. After some hours, Colter emerged from the driftwood, clambered up a sheer cliff, and began walking on gashed and bleeding feet to Lisa's fort about 200 miles away. In spite of underbrush, thorns, rocky terrain, swarms of insects, freezing nights, and barely any food, in less than 11 days he reached the fort. Soon after, Colter left the fur trade for the comparative peace of a Missouri frontier farm.

By 1810, a great many mountain men were roaming the Rockies of Idaho. They were the leftovers from Lisa's group or newcomers connected with a new venture that took the United States fur trade to the coast. The venture was owned by a New York merchant named John Jacob Astor. He sent a group of men by ship—the Tonquin—around the Horn of South America to build Fort Astoria at the mouth of the Columbia. While the ship was en route, another Astor employee, named Wilson Price Hunt, led a party of 62 men westward out of St. Louis for the same destination.

Their journey was sheer disaster. Recruiting difficulties delayed them, and ice on the Missouri forced them to stop for the winter after only a few hundred miles. Fear of the Blackfoot then kept them off the river, so they started, with only enough horses for carrying baggage, across South Dakota and Wyoming to the Bighorn Mountains. They reached Wind River (a branch of the Bighorn) in the fall of 1811.

Game grew more scarce as they passed from the Wind to the Green River and over the mountain ranges to the Snake. Finding that stream unnavigable, they continued on foot. The group decided to split, scattering in smaller groups to find food and a passable route. Some men dropped out, hoping to survive on their own. The others went on, at times eating their own moccasins, wandering lost in the deepening canyon of the Snake, and trying, in vain, to run canoes down that ferocious torrent.

In spite of a winter's torment in the mountains, most of the party reached Astoria by early 1812. They found the place in a sorry state. The Tonquin had been blown up during an Indian attack farther up the coast, and during the previous summer, David Thompson had floated down the Columbia to announce that Canada, i.e. the North West Company, claimed that river's territory. Astor had to be informed, so in June, 1812, young Robert Stuart set off with a group of men to retrace Hunt's overland path.

Stuart was out in the wilds when the War of 1812 broke out. He knew nothing of the arrival at Astoria (in early 1813) of a Northwester force demanding the fort's surrender and threatening the Astorians with the imminent arrival of a British warship. In fact, the warship did not arrive until November of that year, by which time the Astorians had saved face and cut their losses by selling the fort to the North West Company.

As a result, Stuart's ordeal turned out to be pointless. But it resulted in a discovery that would revolutionize all travel to and through the western mountains. For when they reached the Bear River, Stuart's group drifted southeast where they came upon a broad vista of low, rolling hills with mountains looming on either side. They had found South Pass, which was no narrow corridor but a 20-mile-wide gap in the eastern mountain range, which led out to some of the great central rivers. This discovery proved to America that the Columbia was accessible by means other than laborious boat-and-portage river travel. Wagons would now be able to roll all the way to the coast through this low-elevation doorway through the mountains.

But wagons were not yet ready to roll, and the fur traders had not yet finished with the region. With the Canadians firmly in charge of the Columbia Valley, the American emphasis shifted back to the mountains. And even there they met strong competition from the North West Company, especially after the region had come under the leadership (in 1816) of a dynamic, 300-pound Scot named Donald McKenzie. McKenzie had been an Astorian with Hunt's party and knew the region well. As a Northwester, he fanned his men out through the Columbia Valley, and then led a thrust into the rich beaver country of Idaho (roughly between the headwaters of the Snake, Wind, Green, and Bear rivers). McKenzie himself thoroughly explored the Snake River country, firmly locating that river's navigable parts and some shortcuts (such as the Boise River). Meanwhile, other Northwesters ranged all over the region of the Snake and Green rivers, penetrating as far south as Bear Lake, the most southerly exploration in the mountains up to that time. Against such rivals, the slow-moving, conservative Hudson's Bay Company lost every battle in the wilderness. The rivalry between the companies continued for several years, during which time they opened up Canada as far as the Pacific.

McKenzie retired in 1831, ten years after the North West Company amalgamated with the Hudson's Bay Company under the latter's ban-

Now that the Bel ian Hare has be-me so popular in this country the mand for stand ard bred stock at ices within the r each of all has ir-eased to more than the promoters of e red pets ever dreamed of. The igin of this li tle animal is clouded.
fferent persons being of different inions in regard to its origin. Sufe it to say that the Belgian Hare is owing more popular from year to ar and we believe it will soon be a se rival for the chicken. Being ily raised, cheaply fed and stand g confinement so well, coupled with e facts that its meat is so delicious
d valuable for food, to say nothing the pelts, is the best evidence that popularity will continue until they e as numerous as the barn yard foul today. Being very prolific they inease much faster than most domes-cated animals. A Belgian Doe will ise from seven to ten youngsters in litter and five or six litters per year, d a well fed youngster will at four onths of age weigh six pounds and ght to ten pounds at maturity when ght months old. As they do not stop r cold weather as the hen does, the eader can easily figure the result if e is a good mathematician. To start ith we secured good foundation stock nd paid what is now termed as uneasonable or fancy prices, but we ave sold enough to pay for our im-rovements, foundation stock and all, nd have 100 head of fine pedigreed ares to breed from, yet. We are not losing them out by any means, but as only costs us eighteen cents per ead to raise them, we are in position sell stock at remarkably low prices nd still make a good profit.
We have Rufus Reds, Blacks and an Schools Need Changes.

General prosperity seems to be affecting the district schools. Some have already builded new school houses and others have made extensive improvements.

Over at Aliceville an effort is being made to move the school house from its present location about a mile east of Aliceville into town, but there is some active opposition. This is district 63. There is no school house in Aliceville, the town being between two districts. A special meeting will be held Monday night to discuss the matter of moving the building.

Down in district 25, which is known as the Gillett district, an effort is being made to move the site and erect a new building. It is claimed that the building now used is near the creek and sometimes when the creek is up the water runs over the floor.

District number 11 at Pottawatomie is also talking of building a new school house.

And then the schools in Burlington are badly crowded for room and something will have to be done before long. The old seats will be replaced with new ones this summea.

Teachers' Association.

Coffey County Teachers' association will meet at Burlington High school building June 21 at 2 p. m.

The Smallpox at Lang's

Last week there was a scare about smallpox and it was reported that one of the clerks in Lang's wall paper store had been sick with it. The clerk was sick but Dr McMullen city health officer, Dr Knapp, Dr Salisbury and Dr Eastman said it was not smallpox. They ought to know. Some of my competitors have been industriously peddling the story that it wss smallpox, but it was only the small prices that hurt. They did not think it was smallpox. They knew that we were selling better paper at lower prices and that our paint trade was growing too rapidly for them. There is no smallpox but the prices are small. Think of pretty wall paper at 3 cents a roll. Call and see the pretty and cheap papers. There is no need to worry about smallpox.

Danger!

Headache, Trembling Hands, Twitchings, Irritability, Are Signals.

Not every headache is a sign of nervous break-down.

But, if you suffer often from headache that seems to re-occur at intervals, nervous or brain trouble is very evident.

Again, if you can't hold a pen to paper without trembling or twitching, there's a screw loose somewhere.

Or, if you seem irritable and cross without cause.

All these are signs and symptoms.

Not necessarily that you are dangerously sick—But, at any rate, sick enough to need Dr. Miles' Nervine.

The danger lies in neglecting the slight symptoms.

Some of these signs are Sleeplessness Dizziness, Excitability, Loss of Memory, Fretfulness, Headache, Melancholy, Neuralgia, Muscular Twitchings.

Do not neglect them. Begin to take Dr. Miles' Nervine. It will cure them.

"For five years I have suffered terribly from nervous prostration. I tried one physician after another, but received no benefit. I continued to grow worse until I was afraid to be left alone, and despaired of ever being cured. Three months ago I was induced to try Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. After taking the first bottle I felt so much better that I was greatly encouraged. I continued to take it until I had taken three bottles, and am now in better health than I have been for years."—MRS. G. A. BRAMAN, Troy, Ohio.

A Curious Fact

It is worthy of remark that every city of any size or importance in the great state of Texas is located directly on the line of the M. K. & T. R'y. Naturally the country adjacent to these cities, and the cities themselves, are a little richer in opportunities than others portions of the state, which is as a whole a state surpassingly attractive to the investor and home-seeker.

HUNT SANFORD.

Walter Hunt, of Monterey, Mexico nd Miss Mabel Sanford, daughter of Ir. and Mrs. O. E. Sanford, of Burington, were married at El Paso, 'exas, last Wednesday, Dec. 14, and otice thereof was received by letter o the parents of the bride this week. The ceremony was performed by a Rev. Gibson, pastor of a Methodist hurch. She was on her way to join im in Mexico, and he met her at that lace. They left the next day for Monterey, where they will make their ome and where the groom has a good osition in the employ of a railroad ompany. Both the young people are vell known in Burlington, and the ride was born, and reared here, and hey will have the best wishes of a arge number of Burlington friends.

OTT-RIGGENBACH.

J. W. Ott, of Madison, and Miss Clara Riggenbach, of Hill Top, Greenwood county, were married by Judge Moore at the court house Wednesday, December 21. They were attended by Mrs. E. S, Springer, W. H. and Katie Riggenbach, brother and sister of the bride, and Samuel and Katie Ott, cousins of the groom. The young couple will reside upon a farm near Madison.

FOCKELE-FINLEY.

Glick Fockele and Mary E. Finley were married by Rev. L. Martin at the home of the bride's parents in Le Roy Sunday, December 18. The groom is the son of Frank Fockele, of the Reporter, and is a young man of excellent character and standing. The bride is well known and highly respected in Le Roy. A host of friends join in best wishes.

Deaths.

GILLETTE.

Homer Gillette, one of the oldest residents of this county, died at his home three and a half miles northwest of Gridley last Sunday, Dec. 18, 1904, and the funeral took place Tuesday. Interment was in the Teachout cemetery. His age was 80 years and he had lived in this county since a very early day. He leaves two sons, one of whom lives on a farm near Gridley.

CAMPBELL.

The infant son, aged 5 weeks, of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Campbell, who live on the Dickinson farm a mile east of Burlington, died last Sunday, the 18th. The funeral took place on Monday, interment being in the cemetery at Aliceville.

The Drilling in Progress.

Drilling has continued uninterruptedly on the Clark farm southwest of town since it was begun, with the exception of a day or two the first of this week, when the drill shaft broke in two, leaving the bit in the well. In order to remove this special tools were brought up from Chanute, and the bit was gotten out Tuesday and work resumed. The hole had reached a depth of 210 feet Wednesday afternoon and everything was proceeding nicely. A peculiarity of the hole is that it is perfectly dry, no water having been encountered thus far, and it has to be supplied from the surface to aid in the drilling. Teams are employed to haul water from the Clark place. This is remarkable because there is no lack of water in that vicinity, there being plenty of good wells upon the adjoining farms. As an indication for oil or gas it is not at all unfavorable.

all right, but a special registry inspector visited this office a year or two ago and especially forbade the practice. This was enumerated among other erroneous practices that prevailed at this office, and taken altogether they showed that the registry business here was off about 40 per cent; that is, that about 40 per cent of the things that were done in that division were done wrong and must be done differently. In obedience to these corrections, jack-ups, admonitions and instructions, an effort has since been made to conduct the registry department strictly in accordance with the rules and the policy will not be abandoned because individuals demand it for their accomodation. Registered matter must and will be delivered only in accordance with the following regulations, from the P. L & R. of 1902:

Registered matter must not be delivered to any one but the person to whom it is addressed, or the person to whose care it is addressed, without a written order from the addressee, duly verified, and no exception will be made to this rule because of relationship of any nature between the addressee and the person claiming the matter.

Written orders authorizing the delivery of registered matter to another than the addressee may be for a specific letter or parcel, or they may cover all registered articles addressed to the person giving the order.

The annual Christmas business increases every year. This is indicated by the number of registered parcels received at this office. They have been coming in at the rate of about twenty a day all this week, and the volume of business began earlier and has continued more steadily than it did last year. Nearly a quarter of the registers received at this office during the last six months of the year come in the week before Christmas. The custom of sending Christmas presents prevails to a greater extent now than ever before.

In his annual report Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow recommends that a special postage rate of three cents per pound or fraction thereof be provided for all parcels of five pounds or less designed for delivery on rural routes. He would have this rate apply only upon parcels delivered to the post-office for dispatch to the patrons of rural routes emanating from that office. The benefits of such a provision are apparent to all, and the recommendation will be heartily approved. Its adoption would provide a means whereby the patrons of the routes could send in by mail small orders to the local stores and have the goods desired delivered by the carriers the next day. Groceries, dry goods or anything the farmer wants from the local stores could thus be easily and cheaply obtained. It would be a nice thing for the people.

Blowing out the Dam.

Reported.

An attempt was made last Sunday afternoon to blow out the old mill dam belonging to the Neyhart-Eiser Milling Co.

As mentioned heretofore in these columns the old dam has been very unsatisfactory. Much money, time and labor have been spent in patching it at various times. No sooner would one hole be fixed than another leak would occur.

Some time ago the milling company decided to do away altogether with the old dam and build a new one. The old dam is of logs of wood, roughly squared and tied together in such a way that it has stood the test of floods for many years. It is backed up with many tons of earth and rock.

Active operations on the new dam were to have commenced this week. Saturday night the mill gates were open so that the pond ran down through the race and left only a little water running over the dam. Sunday afternoon N. Schwartzentrub put sixteen sticks of dynamite in a hole in the dam and lighted the fuse.

The report was terrific, being heard plainly in Le Roy. But so far as tearing the expected hole in the dam was concerned, there was nothing doing. Tuesday work was commenced tearing out the logs. As soon as a gap is torn out large enough to permit the mill pond to run down, work on the new dam will begin. This will be situated about twenty feet above the old one and as stated above will be made of huge blocks of sandstone laid in cement.

GILLET PERSONALS:

1. Wilson Price b. 49 & Francis Marion b. Gillet had a govt contract to carry mail from Hampden (Burl) to Eldorado, Ks. On ponies crossed 3 rivers - Verdigris, Fall and Walnut. At night saw only 1 or 2 farm homes. Wilson was choir director and superintendent of local church.

The case of Homer Allen Gillet (son of Homer Peacock Gillet) - I first met him Mar 7, 90 Tues in Gridley, on drizzly afternoon; he is grandson of Wilson^{8} Price Gillet and Rockhill, and son of Homer^{9} and Mabel Christy, bro of Wilma G. Thomas, Berneice, et al. Homer's only son; he had 5 sisters. Now age 63, b. Dec. 10. Lives in badly deterioated house on corner (across from Gillet schoolhouse) shared with his mohter until 1967, and his orange cat over 20 yrs. old. Left armpartially amputated due to skin cancer neglected by his tearing off bandages. Very effeminant in voice and in mincing walk. Came to car alsmot totally swathed in clothes and told lineage in bizarre fashion;- Wilson Price G. son of a Gillet and Madame du Barry.. came to Ks. & bought land of Minnehaha (of Hiawatha fame) . . and he cannot prove ownership today. . . cautioned by relatives to stay silent on Madame du Barry. He had on lipstick smeared from nostril on either side to below mouth; lips also reddened by cosmetics. Profile very "Freeman Gillet look", as I recall. I am disturbed by his madness. Seems to be i nto queens and royalty, and appears to be a loner as well he might. The next day Wed. I saw him in Bur; we went to drug store for ice cream and talk. Believes Marie Antoinette changed her name from Gillette. Educ. Dist #10; no high school. Speaks with precision and clarity in feminate voice. Eyes cloudy. Meandering meaningless statem,ents at times. Joined by sr citizen bush companion, also strange. I talked to 2 females in store afterwards who defended Homer but admitted he sometimes gets on bus with necklace and earrings. Pretend to see nothing strange in this. (Probably see me as a threat, as he never harms anything or anybody). I gave Homer $2,50 change and promised to send him a birthday card. He said he fell in Iola and got head injury (which he pulled up his wool cap for me to see) same place where Greta Garbo fell!!!! Clerk at Probate Court at Courthouse in Burl. knows Homer - it seems everybody far and near does. Said he wore women's hats and beads. Mistaken for woman by employee there. Said e was very spoiled by mother; his father Homer Peacock Gillette was also very eccentric, very strange as she knew him, too - no further elaboration, except that he is under guardianship, case #976 since Aug. 26, 1939. I read case history permitted, for 1982. Guardians appear to be sisters (1. Bernice Gillett a/k/a ________ Summers, 1807 Swope Parkwasy, K.C. Mo 64130; (2. Betty Summer, P.O. Box 105, Parker, Ks. 66852. Homer is called "an incapacitated person". Edna Elizabeth Summers appointed guardian; he had $32,000; has checking accounts at Gridley, Parsons and 6 C.D. and 1 lot in Gridley besides Social Security.

First births: Henry Jefferson, 1857, near Chelsea. The first girl born in Butler County was Addie Cowley, May 4, 1858, in El Dorado Township. Miss Cowley became the wife of W. P. Bradley. I. Johnson was born August 1859, in Towanda Township; Charles Stewart, in 1860, in Plum Grove Township.

The first postoffices in the county were established at Chelsea, in 1858; C. S. Lambdin, postmaster; and at El Dorado, in 1860, D. L. McCabe, postmaster.

The first marriage was of Jacob E. Chase to Augusta Stewart, El Dorado Township, January, 1859; about the same time Berg Atwood and Elizabeth Badley were married in Towanda Township. These marriages were performed by clergymen, and were legal, according to pioneer usage. They were not publicly recorded for there was no court house. They were recorded in the Bible of clergymen. In pioneer times such marriages were sanctioned by usage just as today marriages can be performed on shipboard by the captain or a clergyman aboard, although no licenses are granted or certificates recorded.

PIONEER GOVERNMENT

The pioneers were law-abiding people for the most part, but it was impossible to establish the machinery of law immediately. Sufficient number of people had to settle in the county before it could be organized and officers elected.

While federal and territorial laws applied, the nearest peace officer was distant many a day's ride. Under the circumstances some lawless people took advantage of the situation. The chief crime was horse stealing.

We have seen how the first settler, William Hildebrande, of El Dorado Township, an alleged horse thief, was visited by his neighbors and expelled from the county. The DeRacken brothers were likewise suspected of stealing horses. They too were driven from the county.

Another time local committees exacted justice when a man named Gordon died in Chelsea Township. His widow went to Lawrence for aid from friends and her claim was jumped. The jumper fortified himself in his cabin, but a committee headed by George T. Donaldson gave the claim jumper and his two sons the alternative of leaving the county or being hung. They departed.

HISTORIC HANGING AT DOUGLASS

The most tragic event in Butler County history came during the so-called Butler County war of 1870. On November 4, a vigilance committee, out hunting for horse thieves, surrounded Booth's cabin on the Walnut near Douglass, and in a gun fight killed George and Lewis Booth and captured a companion, Jack Corbin, who was taking shelter there. They hung Corbin. It is said that Corbin was placed upon his horse, a noose put about his neck, the horse was given a slap, and as he ran out from under his rider, left him dangling in the air until he was strangled. Having completed this work, the committee started for their homes, but soon met Jim Smith, who was riding toward the Booth cabin. They shot and killed him in a running fight. Smith also was an associate of the Booths and Corbin.

Some settlers thought that the four victims had not had a fair trial. Many even contended that they were innocent. Warrants were issued for eighty-seven men and one woman charged with complicity in the executions. A large section of Butler County sided against the vigilantes, for they contended that Butler County now had courts, and old methods of securing justice by pioneer courts were declared out.

On December 4, however, four more men were killed by the vigilantes. They were Bill Quimby, Mike Drea, Dr. Morris and his son, who also had been charged with being in the party of Douglass horse thieves. They were taken to the timber a mile and a half below Douglass and hanged.

The sheriff appealed to the state for militia to keep order, but the farmers, most of whom were veterans of the Civil War, armed themselves to defend their vigilantes. They contended that the authorities had not enforced the law against the horse thieves, why enforce it against the vigilantes who had taken the law in their own hands. The war ended without further bloodshed when the vigilantes were given a promise of a fair trial.

All but three were freed when brought before the justices of the peace who conducted preliminary hearings. The remaining three were finally discharged by the trial judge the following April without the formality of trial.

The law did, however, come to Butler County early in her history, even though the vigilantes continued to supplement the regularly-elected law officers. The county was organized in 1859 and Chelsea was named the county seat. At that time the county limits were north of the present county and the southern half was still in the Osage Nation. El Dorado was still a village south of the present El Dorado and did not even rate a postoffice.

EARLIEST POLITICAL EVENTS

One of the earliest political events in Butler County's history is the apportionment of the state into legislative districts. The counties of Butler, Hunter, Greenwood, Madison, Weller, Coffey, Anderson and Allen constituted the Thirteenth district, which was entitled to one member. In August, 1857, Samuel L. Adair was elected to the senate and Columbia to the house. In October, 1857, Madison and Butler counties polled 69 Free State and seven Democratic votes. At an election under the Lecompton constitution, December 21, 1857, there were no returns from Butler County.

On March 9, 1858, Samuel Stewart, leader of the El Dorado settlement, was elected a delegate to the Minneola convention. On August 2, 1858, an election was held at the El Dorado townsite, on the Lecompton Constitution, and the entire vote (23) polled, was cast against it. On April 15, 1859, the county cast 15 votes for the Wyandotte constitution and two against it. On November 8, 1859, the county cast one vote for Johnson, Democrat, and 47 for Parrot, Republican, candidates for congress. J. C. Lambdin was elected a member of the Territorial Council at the same time.

A primitive election in Butler County was held in May, 1858, on the adoption of the Free State Constitution. It was held right north of Chelsea under the spreading oaks that still stand at the Daniels' farms. No box could be found out of which a ballot box could be made, but after hunting around Mrs. Woodruff handed out a big coffee mill of the kind that has a drawer, which was used. The drawer was pulled out, a ballot dropped in, and the drawer shoved up again. There were about 100 votes cast.

Progress of Butler County was arrested by the outbreak of the Civil War. Companies were organized and the county, although sparsely settled, sent its quotas and more than its quotas into the war.

A feature of the Civil War was the coming of the loyal Indians. They were Delawares, Shawnees, a branch of loyal Cherokees and others. The majority of the Cherokees, Creeks, Seminoles and other "civilized" tribes were slave holders and

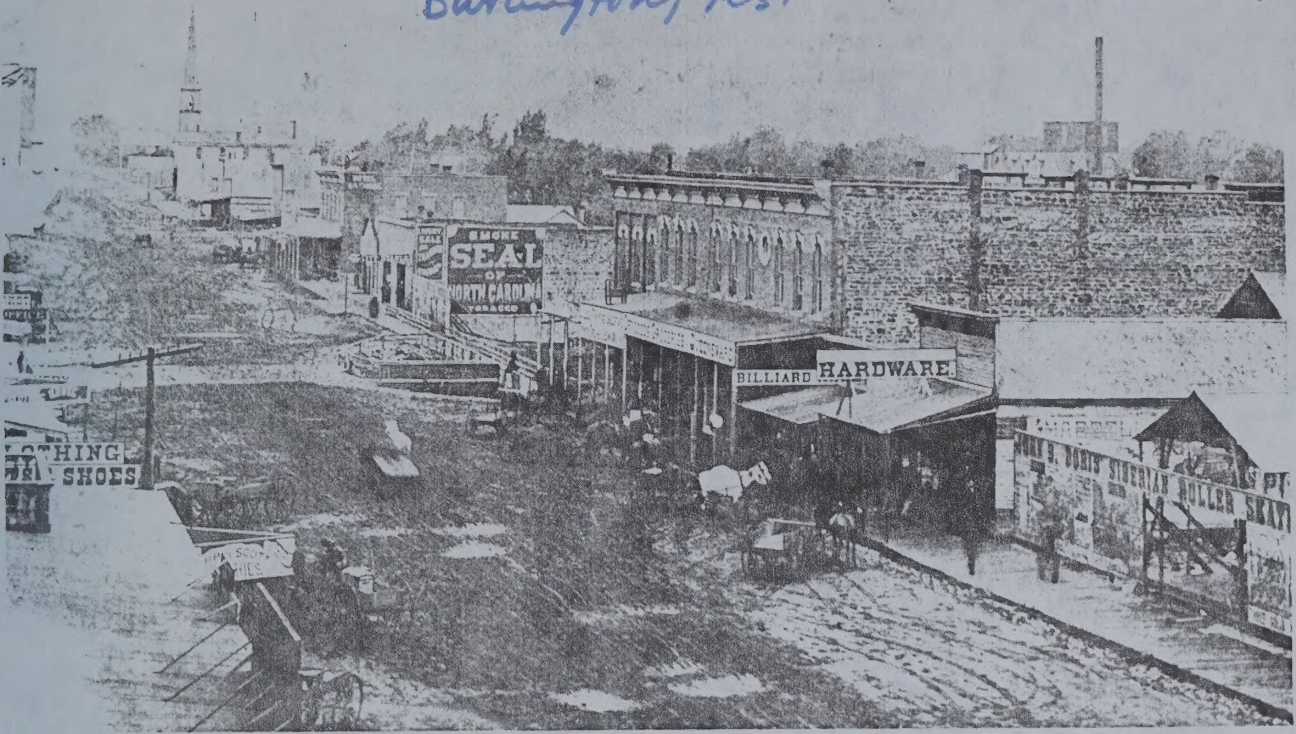
At the Turn of the Century

Burlington, Ks.



Looking west on Neosho Street - Turn of the Century

In the horse and buggy days of the early part of the 1900s, Burlington had dirt streets — often muddy—a condition which was common over the state. No matter how wide the streets, it seemed the buggies somehow managed to collide with each other. When "horseless carriages" started becoming popular, mention was made of removing the hitching posts. This stirred quite an uproar, since most farmers and many townspeople still considered vehicles a luxury, and still used horses for transportation.

As more and more people obtained automobiles, those advocating removal of hitching posts won the battle and posts were removed from Third and Neosho Streets, but additional ones were installed on side streets.

Then came the paving in 1920 and the hitching posts were forgotten. When the streets were paved, they were also narrowed. During the 1940s with the increase in the number of automobiles and trucks parked on the streets, it made it imperative that these streets be widened to their former width.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR F. Z. GILLET —BURY AT GRACELAND

Funeral services for Freeman Z. Gillet were held at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon from the Burlington Christian church and were in charge of Rev. S. H. Barley, the pastor. A quartet composed of C. O. Beavers, W. T. Phares, Mrs. John Shobe and Mrs. C. B. Shull, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. C. O. Beavers sang "City Four Square," "Rock of Ages" and "Saved by Grace." The pallbearers were Henry Hatch, Dan Hatch, Joe Isch, Harry Pennock, Andy Hoach and Ernest Wood. Interment was in Graceland cemetery.

Freeman Zachary Gillet, son of Homer and Elizabeth Gillet, was born February 11, 1848 and departed this life December 12, 1933 at the home 10 miles west of Burlington. He moved with his parents to Missouri when seven years old, coming to Kansas when thirteen years old, where he has resided ever since. He was married to Emma Tipton October 16, 1870. To this union seven children were born. His wife and three children preceded him in death: Frank Gillet, Wood Gillet and Mrs. Ella Swibold. Those left to mourn his departure are three sons Wilson Gillet and John F. Gillet of near Burlington and Edward Gillet of Osawatomie and one daughter, Mrs. Mabel McEnterfer of Emporia; seven grand daughters and one grandson and nine great grandchildren, other relatives and a host of friends. Grandpa Gillet was converted at a meeting held at the Gillet schoolhouse a great many years ago, but never placed his membership elsewhere. Grandpa as he was known by all was of a very quiet disposition but knew the hardship of pioneer life and life among the Indians. He often told his grandchildren stories of his pioneer life and life with the Indians which they enjoyed very much.

Miss Dodd Writes for Historical Magazine

In the Autumn, 1963, issue of he Kansas Historical Quarterly ppears "The Early Career of braham L. Eisenhower, Pioneer Preacher." The article was taken rom Miss Dodd's thesis of 1958, "The Religious Background of the isenhower Family." The Eisenower Library, Abilene, Kansas, as requested a copy of the thesis or microfilming. This important vork will then be used by future iographers and historians.

MISS DODD

Abe Eisenhower, the President's aternal uncle, gave up his vetrinarian practice in 1892 to beome a preacher in the River rethren Church. Abe's house in bilene was rented to his younger rother, Dave, whose family by his time included little Dwight isenhower.

"Traveling over Kansas in a gospel wagon," Abe and his wife, nna, preached without pay the eliefs of the River Brethren. Oranized in 1785 by Jacob Engle, he group differs little from the vell-known Mennonites except in he mode of baptism. Instead of he Mennonite pouring, Engle felt he candidate should be immersed in running water, three times forward. River Brethren shun worldly amusements, military service, and fancy dress.

In 1899 Abe opened an orphanage in Oklahoma Territory. Thirty-five children were reared by the couple before they moved to California for reasons of health ten years later. The institution was turned over to the River Brethren Church, which operates it today as a Bible School. Abe died in 1944 with the firm belief that Dwight, his nephew, would someday be President.

Abe's story is only a small part of the thesis. President Eisenhower's paternal family had at least four River Brethren clergymen — his great-grandfather, grandfather, and another uncle. The President's own parents, however, were never actually members of the River Brethren Church, but became Jehovah's Witnesses in 1896.

Why did Miss Dodd choose this topic for research? "I knew Eisenhower was not a church member until the day of his inauguration, when he became a Presbyterian. While listening to a sermon in a church built by one of the Eisenhowers in Topeka, I got to wondering if a serious work had been done on Eisenhower's religious background. Since there had not, I decided to be the first to do such a study. I had observed in one work or another that biographers' religious data was inaccurate. This I hoped to rectify."

Miss Dodd spent two years in the preparation of her thesis, doing much traveling, interviewing and letter-writing. A native of Eureka, Kansas, Miss Dodd attended grade school there and graduated from high school in Gravette, Arkansas. She obtained her AB and MA degrees from the University of Illinois. A teacher for 16 years, Miss Dodd has taught school in Arizona, Arkansas, and Kansas. She has been a social studies teacher here at Westminster for three years.

SHORT SUBJECT

"I could have danced all night," is probably what Mrs. Stone, our French teacher, was singing at Open House, November 7.

No doubt she would have, except for one minor detail. As she was showing some dance steps to some French students a chair somehow got in her way. Mrs. Stone went tumbling down.

We hope she was not hurt and will continue to dance. Also a note to all chairs: try to stay away from Mrs. Stone, especially when she is dancing.

C.A.A.

It was decided in the past that G.A.A. would hold a rummage sale to obtain money for club functions. This, of late, has been overruled, and it was brought up that pop bottles could be collected and traded in for funds. The selling of Warrior buttons similar to the Homecoming buttons was also considered. The last idea and most favorable seemed to be a girls' basketball game. If this is cleared through Club Roundtable, it will be scheduled for January and will be played by G.A.A. members and Westy Women Faculty.

After the business was completed, the members joined in a game of volleyball. In the future, Westy girls are to play the Ranum girls in a game of volleyball. The meeting on November 12 closed and Nancy DeCresentis, secretary of the club, said she would find out about the G.A.A. sweaters.

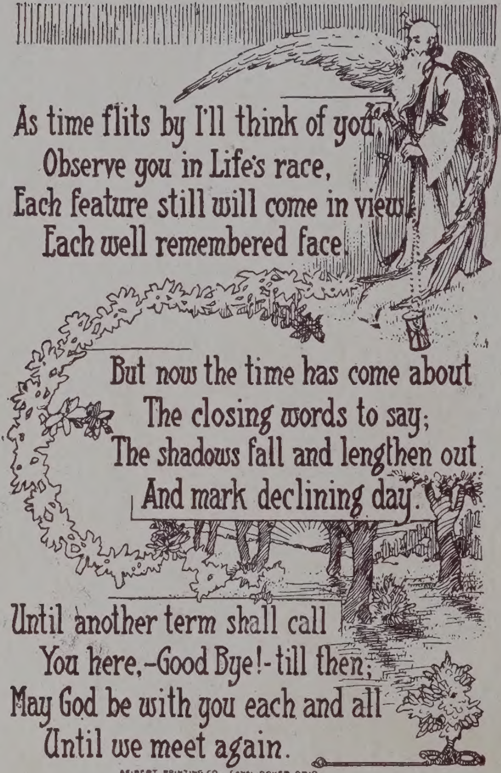
The Close of School.

My pupils, 'tis the close of school,
Vacation days have come,
And you're released from task and rule,
And lessons' weary hum.

For many days and weeks we've met
And conned our lessons o'er;
We've done our best to try and get
A part of Wisdom's store.

Progressive have our school days been,
And worthy each of you;
I've done my best to lead you in
The paths you should pursue.



As time flits by I'll think of you,
Observe you in Life's race,
Each feature still will come in view,
Each well remembered face.

But now the time has come about
The closing words to say;
The shadows fall and lengthen out
And mark declining day.

Until another term shall call
You here,—Good Bye!—till then;
May God be with you each and all
Until we meet again.

Souvenir
1912
Not for School but for Life
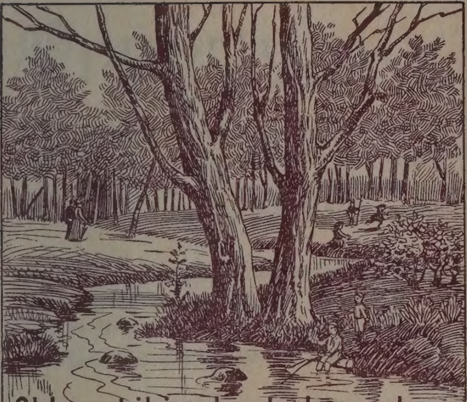
we Learn



Oh! sweet it is when tasks are done,
And we have earned a rest,
To let our inclinations run
In ways we like the best.

And sweet, too, when the fields are green,
And summer's in its glow,
To wander 'mid some sylvan scene,
Where shadows come and go.

Opportunity

They do me wrong who say I come no more,
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door,
And bid you wake, and ride to fight and win.

Wail not for precious chances passed away,
Weep not for golden ages on the wane!
Each night I burn the records of the day,
At sunrise every soul is born again.

Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped,
To vanished joys be blind and deaf and dumb;
My judgements seal the past dead with its dead,
But never bind a moment yet to come.

Though deep in mire, wring not your hands and weep;
I lend my arm to all who say, "I can."
No shamefaced outcast ever sank so deep
But yet might rise and be again a man.

We feel both glad and sad today
And scarce can hide the rising tear
We're glad for changes on life's way
Yet sad to part from schoolmates dear
